26 Neutrals Ask Spain Aid In Preventing War's Spread

Powers Draft Program to Ban Shipments of Munitions.

Investigation Set To Start Tomorrow

Three-Point Plan to Get League Study at Coming Session.

By the United Press.

London, Dec. 2.—Twenty-six neutral nations today asked opposing factions in Spain's atrocity-spangled civil war to aid them in preventing the conflict from igniting a general European holocaust.

The International Committee for Nonintervention in Spain, meeting at the foreign office at the call of its British chairman, Lord Plymouth, drafted a plan to thwart shipment of war materials to Spain from foreign countries.

The representatives of neutral powers, alarmed by evidence that thousands of Frenchmen and Germans have arrived in Spain to bear arms, also called for an investigation of foreign volunteers fighting with the loyalist and insurgent forces.

A sub-committee meeting at 11 a. m. Friday will start the investigation.

Lord Plymouth announced that Great Britain looked upon the surge of foreign fighters to the Spanish fronts with "grave anxiety" and asked that some immediate action be taken in regard to these menacing events.

His plea was coincident with disclousure that Britain has received news that between 5,000 and 6,000 Germans, who joined Gen. Francisco Franco's insurgent armies last week were recruited with the tacit consent of the Berlin government.

Headquarters of the German army helped find volunteers for German tank units to be sent to Spain. The military contingents now are en route to the rebel front.

The plan for excluding foreign war materials from Spain was turned over to Anthony Eden, British foreign minister, who may dispatch it immediately to Francisco Largo Caballero, premier and war minister of the loyalists, and to Gen. Francisco Franco, Fascit dictator.

Eden will request that both the Burgos and Valencia governments approve the plan.

The proposal contains a scheme for supervision of Spain's ports of entry, to be carried out by representatives of the nonintervention committee, in order to prevent foreign materials from reaching rebels or loyalists.

Three-Point Plan Offered.

Geneva, Dec. 2 (U.P.).—A three-point plan for coping with the Spanish crisis will be laid before the League of Nations Council meeting December 10, it was learned tonight. It envisages:

Creation of a committee of jurists to study the problems of international law arising from civil wars such as Spain's.

A mandate to the London nonintervention committee to continue its efforts toward preventing foreign aid reaching Spain.

An offer of League aid in reconstructing Spain.

The plan is designed to divert attention from the acute international situation created by the Spanish revolution. Britain and France are anxious to dispose of the December 10 council meeting at which the allegations of Spanish loyalists that Gen. Franco's rebels are receiving aid from Germany and Italy will be investigated.

Belgium to Add to Army.

Brussels, Dec. 2 (U.P.).—The chamber of deputies, inspired by Premier Paul van Zeeland's statement that danger of a European war is greater than at any time since 1914, tonight approved a bill to increase compulsory military service from eight to 17 months. The vote was 137 to 34.

Van Zeeland pleaded that Belgium must defend herself if attacked. If war breaks out elsewhere, he said, Belgium must do her utmost not to be dragged into it, but that realities "like the German danger, the European situation and the weakness of the League of Nations must be considered."

School Board Bans Magazine Because of Pacifistic Doctrines

'Scholastic,' Involved in 'Red' Fight, Opposed for Peace Tenets.

Scholastic, the school weekly under fire here since last winter because of charges of communistic teachings, was banned from Washington schools yesterday by the Board of Education—but not because it "teaches or advocates" communism.

Scholastic was removed from the board's approved list for two pacifistic planks in its editorial platform. With only one dissenting vote the board turned down the recommendation of a special teachers' committee that the magazine be restored to its former position, which would make it eligible for use in the classroom.

The board objected to these policies advocated by Scholastic:

"We will not fight in any war which has not been declared by majority vote in a Nation-wide referendum."

And:

"We will not accept conscription of our bodies for the Army and Navy without an equally complete conscription of the capital and profits of industry."

George Whitwell, board member, in leading the fight against returning Scholastic to the approved list, said: "I cannot think of putting it back in the schools when it advocates such policies. Why, such an attitude is the next thing to communism."

Whitwell was supported by Mrs. Lenore Smith, who declared that Scholastic, in setting out to "indoctrinate" the theories outlined in its platform, "was certainly not upholding American ideals." Henry Gilligan, a third member, said it should not only "be kept off the approved list, but should also not be allowed in the schools."

HENRY GILLIGAN.

"I can think of nothing in the Bible that justifies such a position as Scholastic has taken," he declared.

Mrs. Mary McNeil was the magazine's lone defender.

"I don't see how advocacy of peace can be called un-American," she declared. "To me one of the

Buenos Aires Visit Is Ended By Roosevelt

President Sails for Brief Stop at Montevideo on Way Home.

Crowds Line Streets in Rain to Give Him Warm Farewell.

By the Associated Press.

Buenos Aires, Dec. 2.—President Roosevelt sailed homeward across the broad Rio de la Plata tonight after a tumultuous, rain-soaked farewell.

Encouraged in his hope for a united American peace front which he expressed at the opening of the Inter-American Peace Conference yesterday, Mr. Roosevelt planned to stop for only a few hours in Montevideo, the Uruguayan capital, tomorrow before continuing homeward aboard the cruiser Indianapolis.

Behind him, Mr. Roosevelt left Secretary of State Cordell Hull and the rest of the United States conference delegation to represent the United States when the inter-American parley gets under way officially tomorrow.

Cheered by Thousands.

Cheered by thousands of Argentines who lined the 50-block route from the United States embassy to the pier, Mr. Roosevelt embraced Argentine President Agustin P. Justo, who went aboard the ship for a few minutes.

Then as the Indianapolis moved off into the Rio de la Plata, Mr. Roosevelt stood on the upper deck waving a colored handkerchief while rain poured down on him and the thousands ashore, who set up a final roar of vivas.

Honoring Justo at a luncheon before he left, Mr. Roosevelt declared he would recommend that the United States Senate ratify an Argentine-United States sanitary convention signed a year ago.

Would Lift Ban.

Under the proposed convention, the ban on meat from Patagonia—Southern Argentina—would be removed because, Mr. Roosevelt said, that meat was not diseased.

Although he said existing United States regulations against Argentine meat were inequitable, the President asserted ratification of the convention would not bring lower tariffs.

The Indianapolis carried the body of August Gennerich, the President's bodyguard, who died yesterday morning. President Roosevelt and other United States officials attended his funeral in the ballroom of the embassy before the body was taken to the cruiser.

Aboard the Indianapolis before its departure, the two Presidents chatted for a moment until Mr. Roosevelt, in farewell, leaned over and embraced the Argentine executive, while the crowd ashore roared in appreciation.

Their next meeting may be in Washington, for Roosevelt last night extended Justo a public invitation to visit him.

As the Indianapolis, its bells clanging, slipped off into the river, President Roosevelt mounted to the upper deck.

Wearing a gray felt hat and a yellow raincoat provided by his son James, he waved a last farewell while the cruiser passed the flag-draped breakwater.

There was a flutter of handkerchiefs ashore and a roar of cheers, while river craft sent up a bedlam of noise from sirens and whistles.

Escorted to Channel.

The Argentine Presidential yacht, carrying Senora Justo and wives of cabinet members, escorted the Indianapolis into the main channel, where the United States destroyer Phelps drew up behind the cruiser.

The United States President had a full program planned for his six hours in Montevideo tomorrow.

President Gabriel Terra and members of his cabinet ar to receive Mr. Roosevelt at the port at 9:30 a. m., half an hour before he is to land.

After going to the presidential palace to review Uruguayan troops, President Roosevelt and Terra are to drive to Montevideo's beaches.

Then President Terra is to honor Mr. Roosevelt at a palace luncheon, at which the United States Executive is scheduled to speak briefly.

A formal reception is planned for 3 p. m. and Mr. Roosevelt is to embark on the Indianapolis at 4 p. m.

In asserting he would seek ratification of the Argentine-United States Santiary Convention, President Roosevelt told the 75 guests at

Edward May Abdicate Today In Dispute Over Mrs. Simpson

Wirephoto: May Be Queen of Scotland

Copyright by the Associated Press.

With developments coming thick and fast following repeated meetings of Great Britain's ministers, there is a possibility in the event that King Edward abdicates, that the Duke and Duchess of York will attain the throne as King and Queen of Scotland. Duchess of York is shown above with her two daughters, Princess Elizabeth (left) and Princess Margaret Rose.

Crisis Is Reported by N. Y. Paper; Baldwin May Resign.

King and American Set to Quit Country

British Public Stunned at First Published News of Romance.

By the Associated Press.

New York, Dec. 3.—The New York Times, in a London dispatch today, asserts that conflict between King Edward and his cabinet has resulted in a crisis "involving the possible abdication of the King tomorrow." It also reports rumors that Mrs. Wallis Warfield Simpson would leave the country tomorrow and that the King might go with her.

"Upon the utterly astounded country there has burst a constitutional crisis," the Times said, "involving the possible abdication of the King tomorrow and succession of the Duke of York to the throne. The crisis is no longer hidden; the conflict between the King and his ministers has blazed into open flame.

"The cabinet is determined that marriage of the Sovereign is not a private matter but a public and imperial concern. The King, on the other hand, is said to feel the cabinet has no constitutional right to dictate his private life, no matter how closely he must follow his ministers' advice in public affairs.

"Between the two there is no yielding."

Gave Ultimatum.

The Times dispatch said "there is little doubt" in informed political circles that Prime Minister Stanley Baldwin, in conference with the King today, presented "an ultimatum and that the King received it in truculent fashion.

"With the press and Parliament, the church and the cabinet against him, he refused to budge. If he persists, the impression tonight is that the cabinet will not hesitate to force a decree of abdication upon him."

"Best founded of rumors tonight, the Times continued, was a statement that Mrs. Simpson, the King's American friend, would leave the country tomorrow, and there is a possibility the King will go with her. And, incredible as it may sound, nobody outside the palace and 10 Downing street knows whether he will go as King or as royal exile."

Baldwin May Resign.

By the United Press.

London, (Thursday), Dec. 3.—King Edward's struggle with the cabinet over his plans to marry Mrs. Wallis Warfield Simpson today reached a stage where the resignation of Prime Minister Stanley Baldwin was an imminent possibility.

The Baltimore beauty's friendship with the King had brought about the most serious constitutional crisis in modern British history. After weeks of self-imposed censorship, London newspapers reported the crisis today, warning the King that he must respect his obligation to the Empire.

Buckingham Palace attendants said that Baldwin had given the King 48 hours to decide his future relations with Mrs. Simpson or be prepared to have Parliament take the "strongest measures." These measures might include a request for Edward's abdication.

Startled by Bishop.

During the 36 hours since the Bishop of Bradford precipitated the crisis by publicly assailing the King's lack of leadership in moral matters, these momentous developments have occurred:

Baldwin visited the King at Buckingham Palace and advised him of the decisions reached in a cabinet meeting a short time earlier. The cabinet was understood to have opposed any marriage plans providing for Mrs. Simpson to become Queen. The possibility remained, however, that Edward might make her the royal consort with the title of Duchess of Cornwall without losing his throne.

Baldwin then held a 90-minute conference with Home Secretary Sir John Simon. Afterward it was reported that the prime minister would make a statement in Commons today or Friday, outlining the government's position.

Edward left Buckingham Palace alone, by motor, possibly to visit Mrs. Simpson.

The bishop of Bradford issued a statement to the press saying that he knew nothing of Edward's private affairs, but expressed concern over his lack of "religion, which shows itself in his daily life."

London's financial district was nervous following sensational declines in the price of government securities Wednesday because of the King-cabinet quarrel.

For the first time, Mrs. Simpson's

Hundreds Slain As Rebels Again Bomb Madrid

Bodies Litter Streets of Capital After Worst Attack in Siege.

By the Associated Press.

Madrid, Dec. 2.—Hundreds of men, women and children, were believed killed today in three Fascist air raids opening a fearful assault on hunger-ridden, besieged Madrid.

At nightfall there were 56 known dead, with Red Cross officials unable to state the number of mangled bodies lying in debris-littered streets and wrecked houses.

The insurgents, angered by defeats the day before after their inability to capture Madrid in four weeks' siege, unleashed the bloodiest attack and bombardment in the city's history.

At least 70 high-explosive bombs were dumped in the city by the silvery raiders, killing 26 persons and wounding 38 others in the northern suburbs of Tetuan alone.

Woman Goes Mad.

At least 30 other bodies were sprawled in other sections of Madrid after the bombers and their convoy of pursuit ships finally turned for home, their deadly mission accomplished.

Terror and madness surged through Madrid as the haggard populace trembled again under exploding air bombs they had not heard for ten days.

One woman in Jordan street was driven to madness when she came home from a shopping trip and saw the bodies of her two children hanging grotesquely from the third floor of their blasted apartment.

The fury of the raids was told by W. H. Green, a British member of Parliament in the group of colleagues visiting the siege area.

"We saw scores of injured women and children—four women and two children were thrown in one pile," he said.

"Another woman's mangled body was hanging over a tottering bannister where the force of the explosion had thrown her."

Madrid's main thoroughfare, Gran Via, was thick with pedestrians when the raiding air fleet dropped its first bomb over the city.

Quickly the streets cleared, with everybody above ground diving pell mell for shelter in basements and subways.

Victims of Gas.

Hotels and the American-owned telephone building were jammed with refugees.

Hospitals in Madrid charged several patients brought in after the bombardment and shelling were "gas cases"—the first of the siege. Doctors did not say what type of gas they thought had been used.

In the first raid, of 20 huge

German Youths 'Hitler's Own,' Chief Decrees

Catholics Fear Conscription of All Boys and Girls Widens Schism.

By the Associated Press.

Berlin, Dec. 2.—The newly appointed "youth leader of the German Reich" declared today the "lives of all German youths belong solely to Adolf Hitler," while Catholic authorities conferred on what could be done in the face of Hitler's conscription of every German girl and boy into the Hitler youth movement.

The "youth leader," Baldur von Schirach, at the same time issued assurances that he had no intention of "Raising false gods for the German youth."

Leading Catholics, however, insisted the series of decrees promulgated by the Nazi cabinet Tuesday widened the state and church schism and might lead to "grave conflict."

They charged the Nazi youth conscription movement was a "flagrant" violation of the Nazi-Catholic concordant, but expressed utmost doubt whether anything could be done.

Schirach said the step was mere legalization of the Nazi party's youth organizations and the "fight over youth unity is over."

He referred to the long-smouldering resentment of Catholic youth groups over what their leaders termed Nazi encroachments on the right of the church to educate and train children of their faith.

The new decree, Schirach said, does not specifically ban Catholic youth organizations, but provides that all youths, whether Catholic or not, must join the state training groups which absorb the greater part of youths' leisure time.

District Worker Goes to Argentina To See President

Buenos Aires, Dec. 2 (AP).—Mrs. Elsie Gray, long an employe of the United States State Department in Washington, had to come 7,000 miles to Buenos Aires to see President Roosevelt.

Although the State Department is close to the White House in Washington, she never had seen the President until today, when she determinedly went to the dock and saw him embark for home.

Borah Praises Roosevelt Talk In Buenos Aires

Senator, Returning Here, Welcomes Opposition to Alliances.

By Felix Bruner.

Senator William E. Borah arrived in Washington yesterday, called a press conference, and talked about a wide variety of subjects ranging from war debts and the proposed Federal incorporation law to Mrs. Wally Simpson.

Some of his opinions:

War debts—"What right have we to assume that the debtor nations will abide by a new agreement when they didn't pay any attention to the old one?"

Future of the Republican Party—"There isn't anything I can say without something I shouldn't say."

Mrs. Simpson—"You know I always have been opposed to entangling alliances"

Reciprocal agreements—"If they would affect the manufacturers in the same way they affect the farmers they would be all right."

Constitutional amendment—"If the Supreme Court decision in the New York minimum wage case stands, it will undoubtedly result in serious consideration of an amendment."

Nonalliance Stand Pleases.

Federal incorporation law—"I am going to introduce a bill for such a law. I believe the Government has a right to say under what circumstances business engages in Interstate commerce."

President Roosevelt's Buenos Aires speech—"I thought the speech was most excellent. I was glad to hear him say we were not there to form alliances."

The war debts, Borah said in reference to reports that France was interested in discussing a new arrangement, have been agreed upon once and that agreement should stand.

"Scaling down the debts doesn't appeal to me," the Idahoan said. "This isn't a cash proposition, but talk of another payment plan. We already have agreed to settle for

President Moved At Simple Rites For Bodyguard

Buenos Aires, Dec. 2 (AP).—President Roosevelt attended a brief and simple funeral service today for August Gennerich, his friend and personal guard.

The grand ballroom of the United States Embassy was converted into a temporary chapel, with Mr. Roosevelt, Secretary of State Cordell Hull, Ambassador Alexander W. Weddell, Mrs. Weddell and Sumner Welles, Assistant Secretary of State, present.

They stood by the flower-covered casket in the center of the room while Commander C. V. Ellis, chaplain of the cruiser Indianapolis, read the short service.

Later the casket was borne by Secret Service men to the cruiser for the trip back to the United States. Gennerich died of a heart attack Monday night.

Mr. Roosevelt was visibly moved by the ceremony. Gennerich had been his comrade and friend for years.

Among the floral pieces was one from the Argentine Secret Service.

Hugh Walpole Ridicules Idea American May Become Queen

Author Declares London Gossipers Are Playing With Thought That Duke of York Might Assume Brother's Regal Robes.

King Edward VIII was described last night as "a very difficult, though personable young man" who will invite terrific opposition from all quarters of the empire if he persists in seeking to make "Wally" Simpson his and England's queen.

Laughingly saying, "I knew that would be the first question" to newsmen and photographers, Hugh Walpole, famed author of "Fortitude" and "Vanessa," took all queries shot at him and answered without dodging in an interview here yesterday.

"Everyone wants Edward to be happy," the novelist said, growing more serious and drawing pensively on his briar pipe. "Nobody would object to his friendship with a woman—even a divorcee. But custom and the Crown make it imperative that he choose a woman who would fit with the ideal."

York Called "Ideal."

The "ideal" for the job, according to Walpole, would be the Duke of York. In marked contrast to his brother he is quiet and reserved and his wife, the Duchess, is "immensely popular."

York was mentioned to succeed the late King George, according to the British author, who feels that he may yet be called upon to play the regal role. For, if Edward does not heed the wishes of his councillors, they may create a constitutional crisis and dethrone him, he said.

"The King is strong-willed and strong-headed and from the start he has flouted his advisers and on more than one occasion has broken his kingly engagements," Walpole said. "Personally, I am delighted that a good friendship gave him pleasure but I demur in acclaiming an action that might conceivably destroy the Crown."

The war debts, Borah said in reference to reports that France was interested in discussing a new arrangement, have been agreed upon once and that agreement should stand.

"Scaling down the debts doesn't appeal to me," the Idahoan said. "This isn't a cash proposition, but talk of another payment plan. We already have agreed to settle for

C.I.O. Supports Midland Strike As Peace Fails

By the United Press.

Detroit, Dec. 2.—John L. Lewis' Committee for Industrial Organization threw its full force behind a strike of 2,000 Midland Steel Co. workers tonight when a conference of union and company representatives failed to reach a settlement.

Homer Martin, international president of the United Automobile Workers union, entered negotiations today for the first time since the strike began six days ago, and announced that pickets would be thrown about the company's main plant in Cleveland, Ohio, tomorrow.

Addressing an informal meeting of strikers, Martin said:

"We understand that at least 72,000 men are out of work because of this strike. You must hold yourselves in readiness to picket outside the local plant."

Conferees refused to comment on the status of strike negotiations but they seemed little nearer agreement than when they became deadlocked a week ago over union wage demands.

With all plants of the great Chrysler organization suspending assembly operations for lack of frames supplied by the Midland plant and with body makers and other suppliers of parts curtailing production it was impossible to estimate the number of men affected.

Martin's announcement that Midland's Cleveland plant would be picketed beginning at 8 or 9 a. m. tomorrow was said to be a move to prevent production of frames there to fill the gap caused by the local strike.

Unique D. C. X-ray Forecasts Arrival Of Twins, Quints

Developments of X-ray technique by means of which physicians can tell whether an expectant mother will require a Caesarean operation and whether the offspring will be twins, triplets or quints, was described at the Radiological Society of North America, meeting in Cleveland, from the studies of Dr. J. Bay Jacob, director of maternal welfare for the District Health Department.

According to Dr. Lee Coulter, Washington physician, instruments developed by Dr. Jacob are far in advance of anything used in the best hospitals. Dr. Coulter said that the District Health Department is one of the first in the Nation to possess this modern equipment and predicted it will soon be adopted internationally.

Dr. Jacob has developed an X-ray apparatus, which enables physicians to tell if a Caesarean operation is necessary.

Bravado Gone, 'Boots and Spurs' Trio Confess To Dozen Robberies in District and Four States

Stripped of the bravado that marked their career of crime along the Eastern Seaboard, three trembling youths yesterday confessed to a dozen armed holdups in the District, Virginia, North Carolina, Pennsylvania and Massachusetts.

Paul Leon Burger, 19, of 1827 W street northeast, "strong man" of the gang, which capped its crime wave with the abduction and robbery of an armed Fort Myer sentry, broke into tears and collapsed when photographers faced him after he signed a confession at Police Headquarters.

Burger and Jack J. Kurz, 19, of 716 Independence avenue southwest, were brough here from Kernersville, N. C., where they were captured after their booted and spurred leader, William N. Beck, 21, of 900 block of C street southwest, deserted them. Beck was captured when he returned to his home here Saturday.

Burger and Kurz amazed detectives as they revealed the scope of their operations and told of crimes which had not yet been recorded in police files here.

In Bedford, Mass., the young bandits confessed, they slugged a pedestrian with a gun when he resisted them in an attempted holdup. They said they read in the newspapers the next day that their victim was in a critical condition, but they never checked further on the outcome of his injuries.

Burger told detectives that he and Beck started their criminal operations on July 27, when they held up Florence Horton, manager of an ice cream store in the 5400 block of Conduit road northwest and robbed her of $54.

Kurz was with Beck and Burger, he confessed, when they robbed a store in Fort Myer, Va., early in August. On October 27, the youths confessed, they broke into a Sanitary grocery in the 1800 block of Alabama avenue southeast and attempted to steal a safe. They abandoned the strong box, the youths said, when they found it would not fit in their car. They escaped with 100 pounds of sugar.

On October 29, the youths admitted, they held up and robbed Garnett Koiner of $22 on the Rockville pike.

A short time later, the youths told police, they robbed an elderly man on the Marlboro pike and a couple in a parked car at Hains Point. Police said they had no reports on either of these crimes.

On November 16, the youths told police, they kidnaped Private Frank Ayers from his sentry post in Fort Myer, robbed him of his weapon and threw him out of their car near Chain Bridge. Later that night, they held up Walter T. Holt in Rock Creek Park, left him bound and gagged while they drove his com-

2 D. C. Boy Auto Theft Suspects Caught in Maryland Gun Battle

By the Associated Press.

Dover, Del., Dec. 2.—Two 18-year-old Washington youths, who admitted, State Police Capt. H. C. Ray asserted, they traveled between the National Capital and Boston in stolen cars, were captured today after a 12-mile running gun fight.

The youths, booked as Emment Brown and William W. Green, outdistanced a Dover police car, Capt. Ray charged, disabled a State police car with bullets, and were picked up by police in a third car at Little Massey, Md.

Returned to Dover, they were held on charges of felonious assault with a deadly weapon. Ray said they were slated to go before a United States Commissioner tomorrow on eight charges preferred by the States of Delaware, Maryland, the District of Columbia, and the Federal Government.

Today's chase began in Dover, where a gas station attendant told police the youths drove off in a car without paying for 18 gallons of gasoline.

It ended after Capt. Ray and Private R. R. Smith discovered the youths' automobile wrecked on an abandoned farm near Little Massey. Ray said they were captured in a vacant lot in the town after a short chase on foot.

The youths admitted, he said, the theft of an automobile in Pocomoke City, Md., November 17. They drove it to Washington, finally abandoning it several days later in Baltimore, where, Ray said they stole another automobile and drove to Boston.

Returning to Washington, Ray asserted the youths told him they stole another car and headed north, each driving a separate vehicle.

Army Wonders If Nuptial Ban Will Apply to It

Military Attaches Abroad Claimed Free to Marry; 'Hill' Approves Rule.

Military circles wondered yesterday whether Government regulation of matrimony would be extended to Army and Navy attaches in the foreign service as a sequel to Tuesday's Presidential order on alien marriages among career diplomats.

The War and Navy Departments reported military and naval officers were free to marry as they pleased.

While officials said President Roosevelt's order had not been extended to officers assigned to embassies and legations abroad, it was argued in some quarters that such a step might follow inasmuch as attaches had access to many diplomatic secrets.

Women Included.

Under the President's order career men and women in the foreign service would be prohibited from marrying foreigners unless they had permission of the Secretary of State.

The department emphasized yesterday that ambassadors and ministers were beyond the scope of the order and would be privileged to marry if they choose. Clerks with foreign-born spouses would not be eligible to take examinations for career advancement.

The order was greeted with approval from Democrats and Republicans alike on Capitol Hill.

Senator Logan (Democrat), Kentucky, said "it obviously would not be good policy for too many of our foreign representatives to marry citizens of other nations." He suggested such marriages "might result in giving away some secrets."

Representatives Tinkham (Republican), Massachusetts, and Bloom (Democrat), New York, members of the House Foreign Affairs Committee, indorsed the ruling.

Bloom commended application of the order to both men and women. "All countries realize that it is a good idea," he added.

Saying that while he favored liberty and freedom of individuals as a general proposition, Tinkham asserted that as a "special proposition it is better for the Foreign Service to be very nationalistic."

Military Difference Cited.

Commenting on possible extension of the curb to the military establishment, a War Department official said he could recall very few unmarried officers in diplomatic assignments.

"Most attaches are mature and experienced officers who married and raised families in this country before going abroad," he said.

Foreign matches are forbidden by Japan and Brazil. Italy requires the alien bride or groom to agree to become nationalized before permission to wed is granted. The French diplomatic service reserves the right to pass on individual cases.

Belgium, Chile, Ecuador, Peru, Portugal and Turkey require formal notice of intention to marry and other nations frown unofficially on the practice.

Lane Outside Ban.

Arthur Bliss Lane, Minister to Esthonia, whose marriage to Cornelia Thayer Baldwin, of Florence, Italy, in 1918 was mentioned yesterday in connection with the State Department's marriage ban, would not have come under it, according to the department yesterday. Miss Baldwin was an American citizen at the time, although residing in Florence, it was said.

Guild, N. Y. News Sign Wage Pact

New York, Dec. 2 (AP).—The Daily News announced today the signing of a 19 months' contract with the Newspaper Guild of New York, establishing a "preferential shop" for guild members and outlining rights of the publisher and of editorial employes.

"The minimum standards below which the publisher shall not go," according to the contract, in weekly wages are: Rewrite men, copy-readers, makeup editors, caption writers, $70; reporters (after three years' experience), $50; photographers (after three years' experience), $65; copy boys (after two years' experience, $20.

The preferential shop clause provides that only new members on the staff must become guild members.

The clause of rights reads in part: "The parties to this agreement recognize that the publisher has a constitutional right to speak, write and publish whatever he may deem fit."

The News management also announced it would continue its employes' benefit plans and annual vacations. The contract also provides for the continuance of a five-day week and pay for overtime.

Politics and People

Dr. High's Prediction of Presidential 'Campaign' Raises Query on Harnessed Press.

By Franklyn Waltman

FORECASTING what may be expected from President Roosevelt during his second term has become the most popular political pastime of the post-political period. Since the political future lies largely in President Roosevelt's hands and he has done no talking, most of these forecasts, purportedly based on "inside information," represent little more than guesses by clever observers, and for the most part are not worth the paper they are written on.

WALTMAN.

Dr. Stanley High, however, is one forecaster who has had an opportunity to know what is in the Presidential mind—and he speaks, in one respect, most disconcertingly. This enthusiastic young leader of prohibition, religious and Good Neighbor League movements has virtually lived with the President during the last six months. He has talked long, often and informally with Mr. Roosevelt during that period.

Thus he may be assumed to speak with some authority in his article, "What Roosevelt Really Is Going to Do," in the current Liberty magazine. Indeed, that publication advertises Dr. High's article as "an authoritative forecast written by one of President Roosevelt's most trusted advisers." The word "authoritative" in the phrase clearly implies that the article at least was submitted to the subject for his approval, if not his blessing.

The gist of Dr. High's forecast is that the President will not abandon his liberal policies, but that he will be the President of all the people and not chastise or "crack down" on his enemies—except the press. Rather Pollyannish and somewhat vague about the Roosevelt program in general, Dr. High is specific in his direful warning that there will be little good neighborly feeling at the White House toward the press in the next year or two.

To be sure, Dr. High makes it clear that the President's efforts to reform the press will be addressed only to those newspapers which engage in misrepresentation, color their news and are guilty of unfair journalism. He says that "if constitutional means could be found I think he (the President) would be pleased if steps were taken to bring all newspapers within the area of minimum honesty in which many other enterprises and many newspapers are required to operate."

"Failing that," adds Dr. High, "it is likely that the President will help—unofficially at least—to arouse public sentiment against unfair journalism. It is my guess that before the end of his second term certain types of newspapers will begin to discover that unfairness is bad business."

This is rather strong language and because of the implications that it reflects what is in the Presidential mind, it should be disturbing not only to the newspaper world, but to the country as a whole. If it means anything, it means that Mr. Roosevelt proposes to take steps, directly or indirectly, to make the entire press of America conform to his idea of what constitutes "fair journalism."

In other words, the purpose would be, in its mildest form, to bring about through intimidation a regimented press fearful of incurring White House wrath or displeasure, as the President might decide. In helping to arouse public sentiment against "unfair journalism," as Dr. High puts it, the President might be expected to administer publicly a tongue lashing to the newspaper which he believed was unfair or misrepresented his ideas. The newspaper may refuse to believe it was unfair, but it would have difficulty answering back and irreparable harm might be done to its circulation and advertising.

Immediately a psychology of fear would take the place of independent editorial judgment in newspaper offices the country over. Editors would be concerned more about whether their newspapers pleased the White House than whether they were presenting as truthful a picture of the day's news as was humanly possible. What happens then to freedom of the press, most cherished guardian of liberty and opponent of tyranny?

But why should not newspapers be compelled to come "within the area of minimum honesty in which many other enterprises and many newspapers are required to operate?" you ask. They should be—but not by the President nor any other one man in this country. No brief is held here for newspapers which resorted to misrepresentation and unfairness in the last campaign—or any other time.

I believe that the press of America as a whole lost prestige in the last campaign—not because most of them were on the losing side, but because many engaged in "unfair journalism." But that is only my opinion. My idea of "fair journalism" may not be that of some of my colleagues and I do not propose that those journals which, I believe, were unfaithful to the great principles of their business should be punished.

I have enough faith in the intelligence of the American reading public to believe that it will repudiate unfairness and dishonesty in newspapers, just as it will spurn the products of the dishonest manufacturer — and without any help from the President of the United States.

Vice Segregation Urged By Woman Club Leader

Salt Lake City, Dec. 2 (AP).—A woman club leader suggested today the segregation of vice "so the city may receive revenue now going to grafters," and Mayor E. B. Erwin approved the idea.

Protesting "police helplessness," Mrs. Early Van Cott, district president of the Utah Federation of Women's Clubs, made the proposal, also urging that card rooms be licensed as gambling places.

the luncheon the convention was "intended solely to remove an obvious inequity resulting from an unnecessarily wide application of sanitary embargo."

"Ratification of this convention by the United States," he said, "would eliminate an injustice without detriment or prejudice of any kind to the legitimate interests of the cattle industry of the United States and without relaxing in the least the full sanitary protection of our own livestock."

When the steering committee of the Inter-American Conference meets tomorrow, it is to discuss formal procedure for the meetings.

A Dominican delegate, Max Henriques Urena, said he planned to introduce a proposal for a league of American nations, but most delegates expressed the opinion the move would not get past the steering committee.

The Indianapolis cruised leisurely down the Rio de la Plata so as not to reach Montevideo ahead of schedule, as it had done at Rio de Janiro and Buenos Aires.

Twenty miles down the river the President recevied a salute from Argentine vessels.

They were the Almirante Brown, which led the Indianapolis, and the Phelps, four destroyers, which steamed along beside the United States ships; four gunboats and three minesweepers.

New Peak Expected In Gold Production

By the Associated Press.

Another new peak in world gold production this year was indicated in Federal Reserve Board statistics yesterday, renewing interest by Government economists in possible effects on currency and price structures.

At $35 a fine once, gold production for the first seven months of this year was estimated by the board at $753,000,000, or $82,000,000 over the corresponding period a year ago.

Should production for the remainder of the year equal 1935 levels, the total will exceed the record $1,044,000,000 reported last year.

Contributing substantially to the increased production have been Russia's new gold discoveries, principally in Siberia. High gold prices also have served as an incentive to intensive production.

At present, world gold stocks are estimated at more than $22,000,000,000, of which the United States has $11,184,000,000.

Roosevelt's Buenos Aires Speech

Buenos Aires, Dec. 2 (AP).—The text of President Roosevelt's remarks at his luncheon to President Justo at Buenos Aires today follows:

An otherwise very delightful occasion makes me quite sad because within two hours I shall be going away and I am very, very sorry that I have to go away because I cannot imagine a more delightful three days than I have had here and yet, Mr. President, I do not feel as if I know Argentina yet because to come only to Buenos Aires is to know only a part of this great nation.

One hundred and six years ago my grandfather came to Argentina. It has taken me more than a century to follow in his footsteps and I am very certain that if I live it will not be for another century before I come back. There is one matter which I would like to take this opportunity of saying and because it is a matter that affects both of our nations, I might say an official matter, I will read a very short statement.

Every nation has the right and the duty to adopt such measures as may be necessary in the interest of its citizens, in order to prevent the entrance into its territory from abroad of contagious or infectious diseases prejudicial to human, animal, or plant life.

But it is equally clear that quarantine or sanitary regulations should neither be used as disguised tariff measures nor should they be over applied except in accordance with strict justice.

About a year ago, the Argentine government and the Government of the United States negotiated a sanitary convention which had for its purpose the removal of an inequitable situation which had arisen as a result of the all-embracing character of legislation adopted by the Congress of the United States.

The ratification of this convention would make it possible for Patagonia, a sheep raising area, where the hoof and mouth disease has not existed, and which territory is separated by natural barriers from the cattle raising region of the republic, to be relieved from the sanitary embargoes now placed upon it.

This convention, which I had the honor of submitting to the Senate of the United States last year, affects in no wise existing tariff rates. It is intended solely to remove an obvious inequity resulting from an unnecessarily wide application of a sanitary embargo.

The ratification of this convention by the Senate of the United States would eliminate an injustice without detriment, or prejudice of any kind, to the legitimate interests of the cattle industry of the United States, and without relaxing in the least full sanitary protection of our own livestocks.

I intend to present these facts clearly to the attention of the members of the Senate of the United States, with the hope that our Senate may give its consent to the ratification of the simple instrument of justice.

May I further say that I trust that conversations may soon be undertaken between us in order to ascertain the bases which exist for the negotiation of a trade agreement between our two countries which may prove to be mutually profitable between the people of the United States and the people of the Argentine.

So I may take this opportunity—I wish there were more—of thanking you and the good people of the Argentine for the very wonderful reception that you have given to my son and the members of our party for all that you have done for us and, as I said last night, I am counting on a visit from you, Mr. President and Senora de Justo, in Washington, just as soon as you can.

Peek Asks Board To Void $535 Levy

By the Associated Press.

George N. Peek asked the Board of Tax Appeals yesterday to set aside a $535 income tax levy against part of his 1933 salary as AAA Administrator.

Peek contended the $4,603 sdlary he paid a Washington lawyer to work in the AAA with him was a necessary business expense and should be deducted from his taxable income. The Commissioner of Internal Revenue ruled the payment was a personal expense.

Peek was numbered among the advisers of Gov. Alf M. Landon during the recent campaign, advising him chiefly on reciprocal trade and farm matters.

Anti-Trust Defendants Escape Fingerprinting

New York, Dec. 2 (AP).—By order of the Attorney General's office in Washington, three oil company executives arraigned today on charges of violating the Federal antitrust laws in the Middle West were excused from being photographed and fingerprinted.

The defendants, R. T. A. Van der Woude, president of the Shell Oil Co.; J. W. Carnes, vice president of the Sinclair Oil Co., and Edward L. Shea, president of Tidewater Oil Co., were among the 74 persons named in indictments returned at Madison, Wisc. The three men were released in bail of $2,500 each for a hearing December 15.

London Times Calls for King To End Rumor

First of Dailies to Bring Simpson Story Into Editorial Page.

By the Associated Press.

London, Dec. 3 (Thursday).—The great London Times appealed editorially today to King Edward for "some authoritative act or statement" to "end once and for all" rumors surrounding the throne because of his friendship for Wallis Warfield Simpson, American-born divorcee.

The first of London's large dailies to come clearly into the open on the issue, which created a government crisis and brought reports of the cabinet's threat to resign, the Times did not mention Mrs. Simpson by name, but asserted reports in America were "doing infinite harm in the United States and the British dominions."

Might "Weaken" Office.

Conceding that the King was "entitled to his relaxation and companionship with chosen friends," the Times added warningly:

"What he cannot and will not afford—what the nation and the empire cannot afford—is that influence of the great office which he holds should be weakened if ever private inclination were to come into open conflict with public duty and allowed to prevail."

The newspaper said English newspapers hitherto had ignored the situation, not because of lack of anxiety or pressure, but because they had awaited "some authoritative act or statement."

Pointedly referring to the rule of the late King George, the paper said:

Must Stand as "Rock."

"Events in the world outside have imposed, as never before, upon the British monarchy the duty to stand as a rock to the world outside amid seething tides of communism and dictatorship.

"So it stood a year ago. So, let us hope, it will stand a year hence, when the new reign has been hallowed by coronation. But the public needs some definite reassurance, if that rock is not to be shaken."

Paper Favors "Love-Match."

London (Thursday), Dec. 3 (AP).—The News Chronicle, discussing Mrs. Simpson and her possible marriage to King Edward, suggested today that such "a true love match—and a democratic one at that—would be popular."

The paper said that the King could marry Mrs. Simpson without endangering the throne or embroiling Parliament on the constitutional issue.

"* * * If the King, who is of age and knows his own mind, is sufficiently in love to persist in his intention, the public would, we think, wish that he should marry the woman of his choice—but that he should do so in his capacity as the Duke of Cornwall (one of Edward's titles).

"His wife's position would then be that of King's consort, not that of the Queen of England. For such an arrangement, there is the precedent of Queen Victoria and Prince Consort Albert; if necessary, Parliament should pass requisite legislation to make this arrangement possible."

The paper said the issue was a matter whether "this lady is a suitable person to be Queen of England and whether this is a matter to be decided by the King himself, or by the government as the mouthpiece of public opinion."

The answer to this question, the editorial continued, should not be difficult:

"It is for the King to say, like every other man, who shall be his partner for life. It is for Parliament to say who will be Queen of this country and to regulate the succession to the throne."

relations with the King were mentioned publicly in the London press. The News Chronicle said, in summary, that if Edward wanted to marry Mrs. Simpson, that was his own affair, but that whether she should become Queen was the concern of the cabinet. If the government objected, it suggested, Edward might marry her in his capacity of Duke of Cornwall.

The influential London Times, in a lead editorial, lamented the effect of news articles about the King and Mrs. Simpson in foreign countries, holding that they were prejudicial to court prestige. It demanded that some clarifying statement be issued.

"If it (the reaction abroad) has not hitherto been the subject of comment in the British press," the Times said, "that is due neither to the lack of public anxiety nor any form of pressure upon newspapers, official or collusive, but simply to a common self-restraint inspired by the hope that some authoritative act or statement would enable them to put an end to it once for all. Such an act or statement is plainly necessary now."

News Stands Mobbed.

In London's west-end, midnight crowds mobbed news stands and hundreds of persons rushed around in taxis trying to find early editions containing the first stories of the King's friendship.

London newspapers made the American press the scapegoat for the crisis and for the first time broke wide open the news of the quarrel between Edward and his cabinet about Mrs. Simpson.

Newspapers spoke with scorn of the "deluge of gossip" in the United States press, using this attack as an opening to acquaint the nation with the conflict between crown and cabinet.

For the first time newspapers referred openly to the constitutional struggle. Daily Telegraph's political correspondent, reporting on the cabinet meeting, said:

"The greater part of the time was spent in a deliberation devoted to discussing the King's relations with his ministers.

"The government's view is that this problem, unless satisfactorily solved, must lead to a constitutional crisis of the gravest possible character, affecting not only this country, but the empire as a whole. That it will be the subject of a momentous decision before the end of this week is the belief in well informed political quarters."

It is believed that a special cabinet meeting will be held Thursday and that the government soon will make a public announcement on the situation.

Poiticians heard that Baldwin will make a statement either tomorrow or Friday regarding empire relations which will be "the first official statement relating directly or indirectly to Mrs. Simpson."

The King's romance broke over the heads of the British people today like a bombshell. Britain's press, airing the Simpson affair for the first time, widely reported the Bishop of Bradford's rebuke to His Majesty yesterday.

None of the newspapers mentioned Mrs. Simpson by name. But some made it plain that a serious, dramatic situation involving the King's private life threatened possible resignation of the present government or Edward's abdication.

London Paper Charts Tempest Raging Over King's Romance

London, Dec. 2 (AP).—Following is the text of the King-Simpson article carried today by The Week, London magazine devoted to court and society gossip:

The Monarchy.

The "thundery atmosphere" around the throne, referred to in the last issue The Week burst into storm yesterday.

Led by the Bishop of Bradford, the provincial press followed the warning guns of the Times and the Daily Telegraph of last week with a heavy cannonade.

Within the past fortnight the situation at the palace and between the palace and the cabinet has grown by the day and by the hour more strained.

The "old guard," which three or four weeks ago seemed likely to content itself ultimately with a decent compromise, has issued its challenge to the King, and, according to present indications, the challenge is going to be accepted.

The position is as follows: The Archbishop of Canterbury has threatened to refuse the King "communion of the church" if the King announces his intention to marry his friend, Mrs. Simpson. (All of London is quoting the King's classic reply to the archbishop: "Please remember that I am the head of your organization.")

Minister Baldwin has threatened to resign in the same circumstances and has put about a story to the effect he could actually prevent anyone else from forming a government—thus, it is suggested, "forcing" the abdication of the King. (All of London is quoting the King's alleged reply: "If you go on this way I just shan't come to your coronation.")

Opponents of the marriage have secured—or say they have secured—an "expression of view" from the White House, allegedly declaring the opposition of the American Government to the union, and a good deal of play is being made with this.

It is clear that a constitutional crisis of the first order is now virtually unavoidable unless the King, at the last moment, is prepared to accept the dictation which the old guard is attempting to impose upon him.

It is highly improbable that he will do so or that he will refrain from using all the constitutional means at his command to meet the cabinet threats presented to him by Baldwin.

It is, of course, impossible—we have no reliable information on the subject—to tell whether Baldwin really has secured from certain other political leaders a promise to co-operate with him in this attempted pressure on the King by refusing to form a government if and when Baldwin himself resigns.

We very much doubt, however, whether any such agreement would prove comprehensive or at all inclusive in any case.

It is by no means certain that in a general election fought out on this issue that Baldwin would necessarily emerge victorious.

The anxieties and the objectives of the old guard are sufficiently hinted by the leading articles in the Times today on the subject of the Duke of York in Edinburgh, which, in the most innocent appearing form, marks the opening of what is likely to become a huge publicity campaign in behalf of "the heir presumptive."

King Is Silent As Controversy Grows Acute

Mrs. Simpson Refuses to Speak to Anyone Over Telephone.

By the United Press.

London, Dec. 2.—Throughout the heated controversy in Britain yesterday over King Edward's marital plans, the two main actors in this tremendous drama remained silent. Buckingham Palace would say nothing. Mrs. Simpson refused to speak to anyone on the telephone.

King Edward was at his Fort Belvedere estate this morning when the storm broke over England. It was precipitated by the Bishop of Bradford's remarks—the first quotable statement by any prelate or official which referred to the romance between England's monarch and the former Baltimore debutante who recently obtained a divorce nisi from her husband.

The King's private secretary, Maj. Alexander Hardinge, awoke to find the press filled with veiled references to His Majesty's romance. He sent immediately for the provincial newspapers, which were the first to break the news, and informed the King of their contents by telephone. He then summoned the attorney general of the Duchy of Cornwall, Walter Turner Monckton, the King's legal adviser, to the palace.

The attorney presumably was called to give his opinion on the rights of the King to marry as he pleased. Baldwin is understood to have threatened that if Edward persisted in an intention to marry Mrs. Simpson, Parliament might enact a bill making it impossible. Strong-minded Edward reportedly replied that if this happened he would refuse to give his consent to the legislation.

This would bring about an open struggle for power between the monarchy and the government, involving all the authority the latter has gained through years of struggle to curtail the power of the throne.

The Archbishop of Canterbury, head of the church, reportedly was called to Buckingham Palace recently and refused to go.

That the King's final decision will be determined by the attitude of the public is widely believed.

Despite wide publicity which the struggle between King and cabinet and church received today, the average Britisher tonight still did not know the full story.

Author Derides Idea American May Be Queen

Custom Demands King Marry Woman 'Fitting Ideal,' Walpole Says.

novelist recalled. "A few of us, of course, talked of the matter over whiskies but we dismissed it as a friendship of little serious consequence."

The Britisher has some doubts now but he expressed the conviction that the former Baltimorean will never be queen, regardless of the royal heart and wishes.

"It is not because Mrs. Simpson is an American," he hurried to explain, "that England would spurn her as a Queen. It is merely because the crown—that very sensitive ideal—would lose caste through unity with a woman twice divorced."

The English author expressed more liberal views about divorce for the hoi Polloi, however. According to him, British divorce laws are "medieval." He snorted at the "barbaric ritual" of being obliged to register with a professional co-respondent at a hotel and having the room clerk conveniently serve breakfast for two the following morning in bed.

"Quicker the Better."

"They are getting legislation through to put an end to all that sham, and the quicker the better," Walpole said.

En route home for Christmas after five months of Hollywood, where he studied the technical end of the film industry, Walpole said he was now "definitely through" with lecturing and travel. "I've been working since I was 16 and I deserve a rest," he said.

He admitted that Hollywood led the world parade of flickers, since "they are more efficient and have the whole thing at their finger's end." Nevertheless, he said they filmed his "Vanessa" "incredibly badly" and mutilated another of his novels "frightfully." His "Portrait of a Man With a Red Beard" soon will be thrown on the silver screen and his latest novel, "Prayer For My Son," has been bought by a film tycoon.

"The movies still lack originality," Walpole said. "True there is Disney and his unique creations, but on the whole the industry is slow in moving to its proper world."

Practice 'Very Tiresome."

Walpole feels that the habit of translating popular novels into movie versions is "all very tiresome." He feels the movie people should not be blamed if a novel's narrative and true sequence is not carried through to the very letter and said that he may spend some time in the future writing originals for the British films.

He states emphatically that Holylywood is no place for a budding writer. He deplores the present tendency of writers to reflect the "class struggle" not because they should not comment about what is happening at the moment but because a novel or a play should have "implications beyond the present scene."

Walpole disclosed that the tentative title of his next opus will be a phrase borrowed from Edna St. Vincent Millay—"I Climbed a Wave at Morning." When questioned he could not recall a rising literary star on the American scene. "I asked that question all over America," he said. "Nobody could say anything except 'Gone With the Wind.'"

Trade Pact Published.

London, Dec. 2 (AP).—Text of the recently completed Anglo-Argentine trade agreement was published today, giving Britain the right to impose 3,000,000-pound sterling annual duty on Argentine beef imports until December 31, 1939.

Anacostia River Dragged for Body

Police early this morning were dragging the Anacostia River under the Pennsylvania Avenue Bridge for the body of a man believed to have leaped from the bridge.

A car which was listed to Leroy C. Redman, of 1114 F Street northeast, was found parked in the middle of the bridge.

A note left in the car read:

"Darling Hilda:

"I am sorry but I guess this is the best way. I don't want to be any more trouble to you as I have been.

"Love, Roy. Good-by Darling."

Another note which was sealed and addressed to a man was not opened by police.

The executive council of the National Federation of Federal Employes will meet here December 14 to draft detailed plans for the presentation to Congress of the organization's legislative program, it was announced yesterday by Luther C. Steward, president.

'Flying Fortress' Perfect in Flight, Army Pilots Find

Spattle, Dec. 2 (AP).—The world's largest bombing plane "handled excellently" in its first test flight today, Army fliers reported from aloft as they maneuvered the 16-ton "flying fortress" between Seattle and Mount Rainier.

The 4,000-horsepower craft, designed to reach an enemy 1,500 miles away, drop a ton of bombs and return to its base in one operation, performed for 40 minutes with Wright and Langley Field pilots at the controls.

It is the first of 13 such bombers being constructed here for the Army.

Known as YB-17, the plane weighs 2,000 pounds more than the ill-fated 299 which crashed at Dayton last year, killing two men. She is armed with five machine guns designed to protect her against aerial attack from any angle. The new bomber is 70 feet long, 15 feet high and has a wingspread of 105 feet.

3,000 March On State Capitol In Tax Protest

Alabama Clerks, Merchants Join in Attack on Sales Levy Proposal.

By the Associated Press.

Montgomery, Ala., Dec. 2.—Paced by a 20-piece band, a jostling line of 3,000 merchants and clerks marched on Alabama's historic Statehouse today in protest against a proposed 1½ per cent gross receipts tax on retail sales and amusements.

On reaching the high-columned Capitol on "Goat Hill," the eight-block-long crowd of marchers listened to spokesmen argue 3 hours against the proposed levy.

The paraders, recruited in Montgomery, were joined on the top step of the Capitol—where Jefferson Davis swore allegiance as president of the Confederate States of America—by additional protestants from elsewhere in the State.

Shopkeepers—large merchants as well as small hot lunch operators—closed their establishments from 9 to 11 a. m. and marched side by side. Many store windows bore placards saying they were "Closed to protest the proposed tax bill before it forces us to close for good."

panion, Miss Virginia Ash, out of the park.

Driving madly, the young robbers raced to Marion, N. C., where they held up a physician, left him bound and gagged in a deserted shack and drove away with his automobile. They said they stripped Holt's car and burned it in a sand pit. Near Morgantown, N. C., the youths said, they held up a Tennessee couple and stole their car.

In the Tennesse car, the youths drove back to Washington to hold up the New Hampshire Meat Market and rob Michael Amarly, manager, of $352. A few hours later they held up Gordon Riggles, James Steele, and the Misses Mary and Thelma Shelton, all of Fairfax, Va., on the Mount Vernon boulevard, robbed them and left them bound and gagged at the side of the road. They drove the Tennessee car into the Potomac River near River Bend, the youths said.

From Washington, the youths fled to Bedford and from there drove to Trenton and Philadelphia.

Detectives questioned the youths closely about the murder of a policeman in Philadelphia while they were there but they denied any knowledge of the crime.

By this time the youths realized that Department of Justice agents were close on their trail, they said, and they raced to Kernersville, N. C., where Beck suggested that they surrender. Burger and Kurz said they had been drinking and they quarreled with Beck so heatedly they attracted attention of police.

Beck jumped from the car and fled while Kurz and Burger attempted to escape in the automobile. They were halted when police bullets punctured a tire.

Victims of the bandit trio have been asked to appear at police headquarters tonight to view them in the "line-up."

Meanwhile, police are conferring with Department of Justice agents to determine in what court the youths should be tried. They already have been indicted here for the robbery of the New Hampshire Meat Market.

Burger and Kurz were returned to Washington by Detective Sergts. Elmer L. Lewis and Eugene E. Thompson. Beck was captured by Detective Sergts. Robert Barrett and William Christianson. Lieut. John H. Fowler supervised the hunt for the youths.

Salvation Army Officer Advanced

Maj. James Asher, for the past seven years divisional commander of the Salvation Army here, yesterday received word of his appointment to the rank of brigadier by Lieut. Comdr. Ernest I. Pugmire, heading the Southern territory, who is in Washington on official business.

Asher has been associated actively with the Salvation Army for the past 24 years. He became interested in the work while he was in business in Cincinnati, and joined the ranks.

He is a member of the Kiwanis Club and the Board of Trade. He and Mrs. Asher make their home in Chevy Chase.

Doctors Plan to Examine 'Sneeze' Girl's Parents In Effort to Trace Strange Malady to Heredity

Mary Margaret Cleer in 56th Day of Seizure Reported Better.

Doctors at Johns Hopkins Medical Center, unable to find the cause of Mary Margaret Cleer's 55-day sneezing siege, will attempt this morning to locate the trouble in the little Fort Myer girl's parents.

They have summoned Thomas Cleer, her father, and Beulah Cleer, her mother, for a psychological examination. They hope to trace through the devious roads of heredity a clew which will help them solve the baffling case, which is unique in medical science.

Tests conducted so far have revealed nothing. All the specialists at the great medical center have run up against the same stone wall that baffled a score of Washington experts.

A Mayo Clinic specialist, who has become interested in the unusual problem, also will attempt to locate the source of the sneezes that every few minutes wrack the body of the youngster.

She spent a quiet evening last night in her hospital bed, but the sneezes still persisted. There was a slight abatement of the seizures yesterday afternoon, but the father places no hope in that. Her history so far has shown recurrent attacks of varying intensity.

The examination today is "very important," according to word received by Mr. and Mrs. Cleer from the hospital. Cleer made arrangements to leave his $18-a-week gasoline station job in order, to do whatever he can for his suffering child.

That Johns Hopkins is leaving no road unexplored in its efforts to solve the case was shown by the unusual request to the parents that they submit to a psychological examination.

Well wishers in Washington continued to bombard the parents and this newspaper with suggestions. A doctor recommended a nasal operation in the belief that there might be a slight adhesion in the upper nostril. He said he had once had a similar case.

A woman wrote saying that a change to another climate was the only solution, another declared that electrical shocks in the nose would cure the irritation, while still a third stated that in her opinion two nerves in the nose had become crossed and should be uncrossed by surgery.

"No explanation has been found" was the brief statement officially issued by the hospital yesterday. It was added that all the tests known to medicine have been or would be attempted.

Mary Margaret Cleer, now at Johns Hopkins Hospital, drew this to signify she hopes to be cured of her sneezing attack.

'Stag' Rule Broken By 'Old Settlers' For Annual Dinner

The staid Association of Oldest Inhabitants of the District broke a precedent of 71 years standing last night with the announcement women may attend the annual banquet.

The affair to be held Monday at the Raleigh Hotel, has been a stag affair since the founding of the organization in 1865. Paul E. Lesh and Commissioner Melvin C. Hazen will be the principal speakers.

For the twenty-seventh successive year Theodore W. Noyes, publisher of the Washington Star, was elected president of the association, which met in old Union Engine House.

Other officers re-elected were John Clagett Proctor, vice president; J. Eliot Wright, recording secretary; William E. Wise, assistant recording secretary; James F. Duhamel, corresponding secretary; John R. Mahoney, financial secretary; Frank W. Dowling, marshal, and John Clagett Proctor, chronicler. Duhamel and Proctor were appointed delegates to the Federation of Citizens Associations.

$5,000 Bond Set In Home Shooting

Carl King, 23, of the 200 block D street northwest, was held in $5,000 bond for the grand jury yesterday on a charge of assault with intent to kill. He is alleged to have fired two shots at two District policemen.

King was arrested by Patrolmen R. D. Edwards and R. E. Maust last week after he barricaded himself in a room after an argument with his wife, Mrs. Ruby King—a bride of a year.

The charge was placed against King when his wife refused to testify against him. King pleaded not guilty and waived preliminary hearing.

The policemen said they went to the home after a call from Mrs. King. They said they were met by shots when they attempted to enter the room in which King had locked himself.

Mate of Premature Twin Expected Early in March

Toledo, Wash., Dec. 2 (AP).—Mrs. Earl Wakefield, 37, whose child died shortly after birth November 23, today awaited arrival of its twin late in February or early in March. The first birth was premature.

Dr. Glen Mathes, her physician, said delays of a few days in twin births are common, but he has never heard of a delay as long as in Mrs. Wakefield's case.

Hoover Denies Story He'll Move to Britain

Attorney Assails Board for Winter Parking Orders

District Commissioners were urged in an open letter from David Wiener, attorney, to withdraw their winter parking order of November 20.

Calling the order, which forbids parking of automobiles after December 20 on many streets and avenues, "arbitrary, capricious and unreasonable," Wiener asked the Commissioners what their reasons for it were.

"Why have you not given the public and representatives of automobile associations your reasons for it?" he asked. "There is some intimation the order is to facilitate snow removal, but this can not be the reason, for your order of last year for such a purpose was held invalid by the court."

Mrs. Doyle Urges Family Recreation

Speaking before the Wheatley Parent-Teacher Association last night, Mrs. Marion Wade Doyle, president of the Board of Education, asked that the home be made a family recreation center.

The association voted to oppose the imposition of a weight tax on automobiles or an additional gasoline tax. It requested that additional buses be put in service in the Trinidad section during the rush hours.

Celanese Plant Strike Settled At Cumberland

Workers Get 12½% Pay Raise, and Recognition of Union.

By the Associated Press.

Cumberland, Md., Dec. 2.—Striking employes of the big plant here of the Celanese Corporation of America agreed late today to return to work with a 12½ per cent increase in wages and the right of collective bargaining.

A closed mass meeting of about 250 strikers approved an agreement reached yesterday by representatives of the company and the textile union with Federal and State officials. It was announced that only three or four workers opposed the agreement.

With the settlement of the 20-day-old strike, company officials planned to resume full operation at the plant by next Wednesday. The plant was closed immediately after the 9,000 workers struck for higher wages on November 12.

The principal provisions of the agreement included:

That the employer will deal with the union and the representative of its employes who are, or may become, members of the union in collective bargaining.

That the employers will not discriminate against any employe because of union membership or union activity.

That the employers will meet immediately with the accredited committee of the union from each department of the employer's plant with a view to arriving at an agreement with regard to seniority, rights, wages, hours and working conditions.

Concerning the demand for increased wages, the agreement said: "There are scores of classifications in the schedule of wage increases which were not presented because of all the involved characters, but the general average is 12½ per cent increase." The Celanese office announced that the increase would amount to about $1,000,000 annually.

Labor Lodge Picks New Officer Staff

Eleanor Nelson was elected president of Labor Lodge, No. 12, American Federation of Government Employes yesterday, succeeding Dorothea De Schweinitz.

Other officers elected were Henry Lehmann and Elizabeth Johnson, first and second vice presidents; Frances Arnold, recording secretary; Helen Schnetzler, corresponding secretary; Harry Brenner, treasurer, and Solomon Kuznets, sergeant at arms.

Committee chairmen selected were: Joseph Senturia, adjustment; Bernard Stein, membership; Loring Wood, legislative; Lucien Koch, education; Ellen Lewis, publicity; Dorothy Bailey, social; Boris Yane, auditing, and Val Lorwin, civic affairs.

Bankers Weigh Plans to Limit Tax on Realty

Committee Named to Draft Measure Condemning Levy Restrictions.

By the Associated Press.

Augusta, Ga., Dec. 2.—Opposition to tax reforms through limitation of city powers to levy on real estate developed in opening discussions of the Investment Bankers Association of America convention here today.

A subcommittee was appointed by the committee on municipal securities to draft a resolution opposing tax limitations after C. A. Dykstra, city manager of Cincinnati, condemned such restrictions as futile for protection of tax payers.

The investment bankers went on record several years ago against tax limitation, but plunged into fresh discussion of the problem on representations of municipal bond experts that depression effects on real estate had bred a wide movement to put hard-and-fast limits on property levies.

Instead of tax restrictions, John S. Linen, vice president of the Chase National Bank, New York, appointed head of the special committee, proposed informally that cities and States undertake broad studies to modernize tax structures with an eye to better distribution of the tax burden and improving revenues.

Municipal bond men, vitally interested in struggles of many cities to put their finances in better shape, indicated they would press for convention approval of a resolution against tax limitation.

Several hundred out of a registration of 900 delegates from all sections, the largest annual gathering since 1929, crowded into the opening forum.

Dykstra started a discussion that will extend in the remaining four days of the convention over investment topics touching railroads, public utilities and Federal regulation of securities.

Anti-Nazi March In D. C. Jails Five

Five local members of a group of 49 anti-Nazis, seized in front of the German Embassy Monday, were sent to jail for 30 days yesterday when they were unable to pay fines of $100.

Police Court Judge Isaac R. Hitt found all 49 defendants guilty on charges of parading, but suspended sentences on the 44 on condition they return to Baltimore.

Those remanded to the District Jail gave their names as Edward H. Oxmun, Louis Keck, Richard Stone, George Kuchan and Martha Webster.

The five jailed were identified as leaders of the group of Baltimore seamen who paraded on the embassy in protest to the imprisonment of Lawrence Simpson, an American sailor, in Germany.

TAKE WEIGHT OFF TIRED FEET
Lose Fat The Easy Way—Without Starvation Diets, or Back-Breaking, Bending and Rolling Exercises.
If your feet and ankles feel tired and ache all over—because you are carrying too much fat—do something about it. Try the treatment that has helped millions to reduce excess weight.
There's a reason why so many people find dieting slow and often times futile in reducing. The reason, doctors say, is often because a little gland is not working right.
All the blood in your body goes through this tiny gland sixteen times every day. If it doesn't pour into the blood stream about one and one-half drops of vital fluid every 24 hours, many people take on ugly fat. This fluid helps Nature to "burn up" excess food and fatty tissue in much the same way as a good "draft" acts in a furnace.
Now, physicians combat this condition by feeding this gland the substance it lacks — and millions of pounds of excess fat has been wiped out in this way.
Marmola Prescription Tablets are based on the same method used by doctors. So don't waste your time or money striving to reduce with starvation diets or back-breaking exercises. Start the Marmola treatment today that millions have used successfully to get rid of excess fat. The formula is in every box so you know just what you are taking. Don't wait—get a box of Marmola today from your druggist. (ADV.)

Borah Praises Roosevelt Talk In Buenos Aires

Senator, Returning Here, Welcomes Opposition to Alliances.

about 50 cents on the dollar. That money belongs to the taxpayers and we have been generous enough."

Borah is ranking Republican member of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee.

Borah said the present debt agreement was reached after consideration of all the facts and that France was satisfied at the time. He added that Great Britain might have some right to ask for a revision "in view of our liberality to others."

In Pleasant Mood.

"There is no better way to encourage war and the growth of armaments than to lend money and then collect only about 10 cents on the dollar," he added.

He expressed the opinion that the purpose of war debt revision talk at this time is "nominally to avoid repudiation."

Borah looked well and he was in a pleasant mood, answering nearly every question except those concerning the election and the Republican Party's future. Unlike Borah, Senator McNary, of Oregon, minority leader, who also arrived in Washington yesterday, declined to talk for publication.

Borah repeated his previous statements that he was not advocating an amendment to the Constitution, but he added that if the Supreme Court decision in the New York minimum wage law is allowed to stand, inevitably it would result in serious consideration of an amendment to make such legislation possible. He added, however, that the court had been known to reverse itself in the past. He declined to say whether he would support such an amendment.

"A constitutional amendment might result in a reorganization of our entire dual system of Government by placing in the hands of the Federal Government the police powers now held exclusively by the States," he said.

Borah said his bill for a Federal incorporation law would be similar to that proposed by Senator O'Mahoney (Democrat), Wyoming. He said the measure would require business engaged in interstate commerce to come under Federal charters.

The Idaho Senator said that such a law must come within the rules laid down by the Supreme Court and added that he believed the decision in the Schechter case outlawing the NRA was "perfectly sound."

O'Mahoney, he said, "would reach an issue the courts hold is in interstate commerce. There is a vast amount of intrastate commerce that ought to be regulated. O'Mahoney and I are not undertaking to write any new definition of interstate commerce."

Borah said that the principle object was to do away with the powers now existing under State charters that allow monopoly.

"I would give the Federal Government as complete control over interstate commerce as the States exercise over commerce within their boundaries," he said.

Asked if monopoly could not be controlled under the antitrust laws, he said:

"If you want to catch a lot of damn thieves you have got to have a lot of ways to catch them."

Borah said his bill did not contemplate wage and hour provisions for business in interstate commerce, but that such provisions might be included. O'Mahoney's bill would include such proposals.

Washington Scientist's Trail-Blazing Trip Covers 3,000 Miles of Unexplored Jungle

Dr. Serge Korff, Briton Depend on Canoes in South America.

Trapper of cosmic rays in the Andes and witness of sights rarely seen by white men, the lanky son of Washington's Baroness Serge A. Korff yesterday described his recent trail-blazing trip across Brazil's densest jungle country.

In an interview at his home, 2308 California street northwest, Dr. Serge A. Korff told here for the first time of his experiences while homeward bound from Peru on a route which, he is quite sure, was never used before.

Now attached to the department of terrestrial magnetism, Carnegie Institution, the young scientist is the son of the Russian baron of the same name who was lieutenant governor of Finland when that country belonged to czarist Russia.

Migrated in Revolution.

The baroness and their two children, Serge and a sister, migrated to the United States at the outbreak of the Russian revolution in 1917. Subsequently the elder Korff helped organize Finland's republican government. He was a professor in the foreign service school of Georgetown University at the time of his death in 1924.

Baroness Korff is the daughter of Admiral William K. Van Reypen, who was surgeon general of the United States Navy about four decades ago.

Nearly two years ago, shortly after he had received his Ph. D. at Princeton, Dr. Korff was sent down into the Andes country by Dr. Robert A. Millikan, renowned physicist of the California Institute of Technology, to trap cosmetic rays in instruments carried aloft by airplane.

Youthful—he is now 30—and adventurous, the son of Baroness Korff thought he was enjoying the last word in thrills as he soared 30,000 feet above the mountains, breathing pure oxygen and enjoying the scenery as his instruments measured the rays he had traveled thousands of miles to ferret out.

Accompanied by Briton.

"But I hadn't seen nothing yet," he said yesterday, laughing at his grammatical liberties. "The real excitement came later, canoeing down the Madre de Dios and looking in upon sights that were real eye openers."

He and an English friend, George Aked, decided to return to the United States the hard way, so to speak. That is, to take a northward route through a region seen by few white men rather than proceeding eastward to Rio de Janeiro in conventional fashion and embarking there.

The manner in which they began their journey was orthodox enough. They boarded a train at Arequipa, Peru, which took them to Trapata. Thence by auto to Lombani, where the motor highway ends. They arrived in Astillero by mulepack, then hired a canoe.

Paddling several hundred miles down the Madre de Dios, Dr. Korff and his companion witnessed one strange sight after another. They stopped at deserted villages, ghostly shells of towns which had sprung up mushroom-like more than a quarter century ago when the region was being exploited for its rubber.

Post Staff Photo.

DR. SERGE A. KORFF.

Boom Died Suddenly.

The boom had died as suddenly as it began when rubber prices took a sharp drop. Stores and houses were deserted, even as was the case in the Western States when gold mines ran dry and noisy saloons became forlorn in abandonment.

Dr. Korff peered through doors to see shelves of canned goods which rats, aided by rust, had succeeded in penetrating. The rodents had even gnawed away the corks in champagne bottles, though they spurned the contents.

He shot wild turkeys, ducks, pigs and deer.

At Guajara Mirim the canoe trip ended and the pair boarded a train for Porto Velho, Brazil, end of the railroad line. A wood-burning stern wheeler, not unlike the old Mississippi River packets, brought them into Manaos.

There Dr. Korff received the biggest surprise of the entire trip. He discovered that Manaos, entirely surrounded by jungle, had one of the most handsome opera houses he had ever seen.

They changed boats for the next lap up the Rio Negro, whose waters are as black as the Amazon's are brown. Reaching Caracarajy, Dr. Korff and Aked again switched to a canoe, which took them up the Rio Branco to the head of navigation in British Guiana.

Then they went overland to the Essequiba River, where they hitch-hiked a ride aboard a small boat in charge of a policeman who was taking a suspected murderer to Georgetown to face trial.

"We were lucky to have arrived just as the officer was getting ready to take back the prisoner he had traveled many miles to capture," said Dr. Korff. "And it was mighty nice of him to give us a lift."

At Georgetown, British Guiana, he subsequently embarked for the States. Dr. Korff believes he and Aked are the first ones ever to leave South America by the route they took. Altogether, it took them five months to negotiate the approximately 3,000 miles from Arequipa to Georgetown.

Attacker Beats Home Matron, Makes Escape

Police Seek Mystery Man Who Fled After Choking Mrs. Stalcup, 54.

Victim of a mysterious early morning attack, Mrs. Gertrude Stalcup, 54-year-old matron of the Luthern Walther League Hospice, 1420 M street northwest, was recovering from shock and undetermined injuries last night while police pressed their search for her unidentified assailant.

Mrs. Stalcup, strangled and beaten, was found early yesterday in her second-floor bedroom by one of the 18 young women who room and board at the hospice. Her throat bore imprints of powerful fingers and six stitches were required to close a deep gash over her left eye.

Admittedly puzzled by lack of motive for the attack, police traced footprints in the snow from a rear door of the house to a parking lot at Vermont avenue and L street northwest. There the tracks ended. Employes of the lot said a car bearing New York license plates had left the lot early in the morning. It developed later, however, that the car had no connection with the assault on Mrs. Stalcup.

During conscious moments yesterday, the boarding house matron attempted to explain the attack to physicians and police.

"I think it was a colored man," she said.

Mrs. Stalcup was awakened by a sound in her room. She said a man's form was kneeling or bending beside the head of her bed. But before she could cry out, hands clutched her throat and a hard instrument smashed against her skull.

Physicians said X-ray pictures would be taken to determine whether she suffered a fractured skull.

Groans from Mrs. Stalcup's room attracted Miss Elsa Reiche, a young woman boarder, about 2:30 a. m. She found the middle-aged woman semiconscious on the bed.

Investigators were unable to explain how the intruder gained entrance. It was suggested that the front door was left unlocked by the last person to enter the house Tuesday night. Other doors and windows bore no evidence of having been forced open.

Nothing was missing either from the house or Mrs. Stalcup's room. The injured woman is the mother of two grown children and maintains a home in Hyattsville, Md., with her husband, G. G. Stalcup, construction worker.

50 Sailors Made Ill.

Vallejo, Calif., Dec. 2 (AP).—More than 50 sailors from the cruiser Memphis became ill last night from what Navy physicians diagnosed as food poisoning. The physicians said none of the cases was serious.

Farmer Loans Will Be Feature Of Merged RA

Agriculture Head Plans Crop Insurance; AAA Revival Possible.

By Sidney Olson.

Secretary of Agriculture Henry A. Wallace sat in conference with the press last night and outlined the Department's present program as follows:

Absorption of the Resettlement Administration almost in toto, with future stress to be laid almost entirely on rehabilitation loans to farmers of integrity and ability.

A crop insurance program for the coming year, to be confined almost entirely to wheat.

Continued study of means of reviving the production control provisions of the defunct AAA, but no application of that principle in the present crop year.

Continued study of ways for disposal of a surplus wheat crop of 200,000,000 bushels, if the coming crop season misses another drought period.

A "new carburetor" in the 1937 model soil conservation program, under which the farmer can figure out for himself what he may earn by observing the Department's rules.

AAA Revival Urged.

The Secretary's personal working schedule includes an appearance befor the Pasadena, Calif., convention of the American Farm Bureau Federation December 9. He will deliver an address which may outline the possibilities of a revival of the AAA, as Edward A. O'Neal, president of the federation and many of its leaders, have repeatedly called for such a revival.

Wallace will reveal December 15 the "new 1937 model" soil conservation program in detail, setting forth the revised rules under which the farmers may earn benefits by observing the program's specifications.

On or about December 20 the Secretary's committee on farm tenancy, working in connection with the natural resources committee, will release a report on the tenancy problem. This is considerably in advance of the President's February 1 deadline for the conclusion of this study. The committee will meet as a whole on December 16 and 17 for the first time, and will come prepared with data and recommendations for the first hand-to-hand grapple that the subject has ever had, department spokesmen stated.

The secretary told reporters that crop insurance seemed slated for wheat only, at this time, because of the lack of any widespread demand for it by farmers producing other crops. He was unable to say whether this lack of demand was due to ignorance of its benefits or to other reasons.

Work Held Valuable.

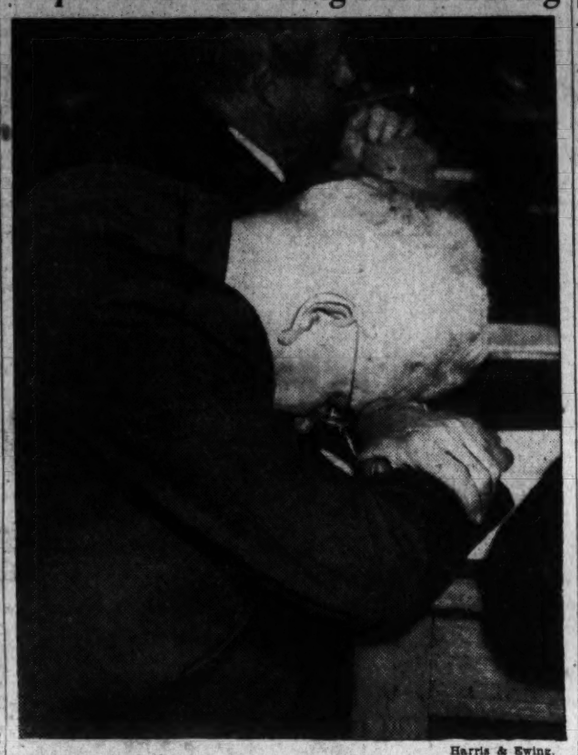
Wallace said that his recently concluded trip through the South with former RA Administrator Rexford G. Tugwell had opened his eyes to the "vast amount" of beneficial rehabilitation work being done by the RA, particularly in its small loans to farmers through county agents. He said:

"Ninety-five per cent of the RA's work is done in this field, and 95 per cent of its money goes for this purpose, yet the press has stressed the other negligible percentage, the Greenbelt sort of thing, to the exclusion of the valuable work."

He holds these functions of RA to belong more naturally to the Agricultural Department than to a relief agency of the Government, due to the agricultural base of the projects and the loans. The same is true of the chap housing program of the RA, the settlement projects, he said, because of the agricultural base on which the returns are figured.

Twenty representative wheat farmers, from Texas, Oklahoma, Kansas, Nebraska, the Dakotas, Minnesota and Montana met in the department yesterday and drafted suggestions for the President's crop insurance commission. Wallace, meeting with them in the afternoon, outlined the department's scheme to insure wheat farmers against lean years by taking a part of the yields above normal in good years and paying losses when yields are low.

Crop Insurance Meeting Proves Boring



Harris & Ewing.

Apparently the meeting of wheat farmers with the President's crop insurance committee wasn't lively enough for A. R. Shumway, president of North Pacific Grain Growers, for he promptly took a nap when the meeting convened.

Paper Banned In D. C. Schools For 'Pacifism'

fundamental principles of our democracy is that our children should have the opportunity to read anything decent, regardless of its political viewpoint."

The board's action, first of all, keeps the Scholastic, which in past years has been widely used in classrooms throughout the city, from the "required list." All periodicals placed on this list are purchased by the board and distributed free among the pupils who are to use it. As a result of yesterday's decision the magazine is also kept off the list of "approved" magazines for reference use in the classroom.

While defending the report of the teachers' committee, which recommended approval of the magazine on the ground that it was found free from communistic teachings, Dr. Frank W. Ballou, superintendent, sided with the board members, who would suppress the magazine.

"No magazine used in the schools should be anything other than one that gives factual information," he said. "It should have no editorial policy."

"I regret that Scholastic magazine has such an editorial policy as it has. Otherwise it is a good magazine and it is a difficult thing to find a magazine that is altogether suitable for classroom use. I think the teachers committee had this in mind when it recommended its continued use."

Before board members as they discussed the controversial magazine was a lengthy "memorandum" on behalf of the Federation of Citizens' Associations of the District of Columbia, opposing retention of "Scholastic" for classroom use.

Signed by George E. Sullivan, chairman of the Federation's special committee on "Elimination of Anti-Patriotic and Pro-Communistic Matter from Public Schools of the District of Columbia," the printed memorandum cited "Scholastic's" pacifistic platform among the "undeniable anti-patriotic and anti-American features of said magazine's editorial policy."

"The settled editorial policy of said magazine (Scholastic) to resort to persistent propaganda for the encouragement and promotion of the pacifism and slacker insubordination, plainly appears even from the incomplete and selected matter quoted in the pending report of the school committee.

"That such propaganda is flagrantly anti-patriotic and anti-American, is perfectly obvious, yet the school committee report accompanying the superintendent's aforesaid recommendation asserts that it is based upon a 'fundamental American ideal.'"

Miss Simmons Appointed.

Miss Edna Simmons was appointed to the position of assistant in education at Wilson Teachers College.

The superintendent reported the launching of a study of the time for parking in the vicinity of schools. According to present regulations, cars cannot be parked in these areas until after 5:30 p. m. Upon request of traffic officials, Dr. Ballou said he was attempting to find out if it would be advisable to change the restricted parking time to 5 p. m. or to 4:30 p. m.

Dr. Ballou called upon the board to put to some practical use the results of the character education experiment, dissolved this year for lack of funds to carry it on.

In submitting a 35-page typewritten report, the first of a series prepared by Miss Bertie Backus, director of the experiment, Dr. Ballou told the board "it would be a great pity" if some application were not found for some parts of the program.

Miss Backus' report, entitled "A Compilation of Documents Indicating the Philosophy and Progress of the Program," explains the scope of the experiment which she headed for the two years of its operation.

Stores to Give Workers Same Holiday as U. S.

Leading Shops Will Close Dec. 25-27 to Allow an Extended Rest.

Washington merchants are following the lead of the Federal Government in providing an extended Christmas holiday for their employes, the Merchants and Manufacturers Association reported yesterday.

Among the department stores which will be closed December 25, 26 and 27, the association announced, are the Hecht Co., Woodward & Lothrop, S. Kann Sons Co., Lansburgh & Bros., and Palais Royal, Inc.

In announcing the decision of the Hecht Co. to grant an extra holiday to its 1,800 employes, Charles B. Dulcan, sr., vice president and general manager, said:

"We want to give our employes and associates an opportunity to spend a well-earned, restful joyous week-end following the rush of Christmas business which always taxes the organization to capacity.

The Merchants and Manufacturers Association yesterday started polling its membership to ascertain whether its members will be open or closed on December 26.

Congress at the last session passed a joint resolution establishing December 26 as a legal holiday in the District. This was done to allow the closing of banks and Government Departments.

Officer Seeks $6,000 U. S. Seized in War

Suit to regain a banking account of $6,000, seized by the Government when the United States entered the World War, was begun in District Court yesterday by Herman Wessels, a former lieutenant in the German navy, on duty here prior to the war.

Wessels said he was arrested and held in jail for two years after nostilities were begun. Thereafter, he said, he found that a bank account of $6,000 had been taken over by the United States Government as German property. The account, he said, was his and was listed under an alias, Carl Roediger, which he used here in connection with his services in the naval intelligence service.

Wessels, now a naturalized citizen, said he had sought to recoup the money from the Alien Property Custodian and had failed. He contends he was not an alien within the meaning of the act of war and therefore is entitled to the money.

Maxwell Girl's Uncle Employs Aide for State

Bitterness of Family Feud Demonstrated by Act of Girl's Relative.

A tall, gray-haired man will sit alongside Commonwealth's Attorney Fred Greear at the prosecution table when Edith Maxwell, 22-year-old mountain school teacher, goes on trial at Wise, Va., six days hence for the "slipper murder" of Trigg Maxwell, her father.

He will be Oscar M. Vickers, one of the best criminal lawyers in the Lonesome Pine country. His job will be to assist Prosecutor Greear in persuading the jury to send Edith Maxwell back to jail for the death of her father.

A stranger might wonder over Vickers' interest in the case. He is not employed by the Commonwealth of Virginia. In most cases, he is found defending, not prosecuting, persons arraigned in court.

The answer is that Vickers has been hired to help the younger Greear by Lee Skeen, a former sheriff and an uncle by marriage to Edith Maxwell.

This situation, wherein a relative is helping the Commonwealth to try to put the 22-year-old girl in the penitentiary, emphasizes the bitter family feud in the celebrated case.

It is the Maxwell's against the Dotsons, Trigg's kinfolk against the kinfolk of Trigg Maxwell's widow—the former Anna Dotson.

Readers of The Washington Post—men and women who have never seen Edith Maxwell—are contributing money for her defense, convinced that justice miscarried when she was found guilty of murder in the first degree and sentenced to 25 years in the Virginia State Penitentiary. Their contributions already have won Edith a new trial.

On the other hand, there is the spectacle of her uncle by marriage hiring a criminal lawyer to send the girl back to the penitentiary.

There is nothing unusual about private interests hiring lawyers to assist the Commonwealth. In this instance, however, it is one of many strange aspects to a strange case that has aroused interest all over the world.

Do This For a Cold

1. Take 2 BAYER ASPIRIN tablets and drink a full glass of water. Repeat treatment in 2 hours.

2. If throat is sore, crush and stir 3 BAYER ASPIRIN tablets in ⅓ glass of water. Gargle twice.

The Modern-Day Way to Ease Cold and Sore Throat Quickly

The modern way to ease a cold is: Two Bayer Aspirin tablets the moment you feel a cold coming on. Repeat, if needed, according to directions in box.

At the same time, if you have a sore throat, crush and dissolve three BAYER tablets in one-third glass of water. And gargle with this mixture twice.

The Bayer Aspirin you take internally will act to combat the fever and ease the pains which usually accompany colds. The gargle will provide almost instant relief from rawness and pain, acting like a local anesthetic on the irritated throat membrane.

Try this way. Your doctor will endorse it. It is a quick, effective means of combating a cold. Ask for Bayer Aspirin by the full name at your druggist's — not for "aspirin" alone.

No Foreign Wives.

It must be assumed that the executive order practically barring foreign service officials from marrying foreigners was not issued light-heartedly.

The American tradition has never encouraged the authorities to regulate the private lives of citizens, even those who happen to be in the Government service. There can be no doubt that the new rule will work hardships in many individual cases. Young men stationed in remote places do not have opportunities to meet American girls. And honesty must contradict the patriotic assumption that the ladies of other lands are at all deficient in charm.

Thrown into constant contact with foreigners it is not surprising that, in the past, a goodly number of our aspiring diplomats have fallen in love and married women of alien nationality. The opposite has also been the case. More than one foreign representative stationed at Washington has married an American. As an instigator of reciprocal agreements Cupid can give many points to Secretary Hull.

Yet it is particularly clear today, with national passions rising, that a foreign wife may prove an embarrassament to a foreign service official and therefore to the government he represents. No wonder that ten other nations, aside from our own, have now raised the bars to international marriages among their diplomatic staff.

But if the goal is a completely disinterested and professional foreign service, it is not enough to stop with a prohibition of such marriages. For it is at least equally true that the presence in the foreign service of untrained individuals, appointed primarily because of the services they have rendered to some party or candidate, is also a handicap to efficiency and morale.

There can be no halfway stage in this matter. If the standards for the foreign service are to be set so high that even the right of a man to marry whomsoever he pleases is curbed, then there is no place in it for untrained amateurs, however politically potent. When the President interests himself in the marital ambitions of second secretaries he should simultaneously assure them of a chance to reach ambassadorial rank.

Memorial To Jefferson.

Planning a memorial to Thomas Jefferson is not a simple task, for the reason that the monument itself should be the essence of simplicity. To all Americans and to many people in other lands Jefferson is a symbol of democracy. Through his many years of public service he wished to be known only as a farmer. Indeed, his greatness lies chiefly in his persistent championship of government by the rank and file of the people.

It was Jefferson who first rejected European etiquette and introduced simplicity in the White House. Even while he was President he frowned upon special attentions to himself. By nature as well as conviction he was a true exponent of simple democracy. Today his name is used to designate that type of representative government which places all citizens on an equal footing and, so far as possible, guarantees to each equal opportunities.

To those who know Jefferson the current talk of a pretentious memorial—a monument bigger than the Lincoln Memorial—is painful. And these unhappy implications are further accentuated by the prospect that the Jeffersonian shrine may be located in an area which lacks a solid foundation. Everything we know of Jefferson suggests that he would have preferred a reversal of this order—a dignified and simple structure on bed rock.

From the esthetic viewpoint, the Tidal Basin site appears to be appropriate. Its suitability from the engineering point of view should be left for experts to decide. The public will be more concerned over the design of the structure than its location. Fortunately the memorial commission has not yet made a final decision upon tentative plans which appear to be more imposing than refined.

As the commission ponders the matter between now and its next meeting in January it should become more and more evident that only a memorial which accurately reflects the real significance of Jefferson in American history can properly be placed in the vicinity of the Washington Monument and the Lincoln Memorial.

How Non-Intervention Works.

According to well-attested reports, made to our Department of State as well as to the British foreign office, several thousand Germans have landed at Cadiz, presumably to reinforce the hard-pressed armies of Gen. Franco.

In Berlin it is denied that these German auxiliaries are in Spain with the consent of the Nazi government. But such denials cannot be regarded as anything but perfunctory. No one leaves the Third Reich without the consent of the authorities, above all nobody of military age.

The clear indication is, therefore, that the Fascist powers, alarmed by the ill-success of their Spanish puppet, Gen. Franco, whose mercenary troops have for a month battered unavailingly at Madrid, have now made up their mind to stop at nothing in their effort to overthrow the Spanish government. Since Franco cannot do it, they will regardless of the unprecedented and incendiary nature of the action.

Sensational as is this development, it follows logically and inevitably from the recognition prematurely and unjustifiably accorded Franco by Italy and Germany. When they took this wholly unwarrantable action, the Fascist powers in effect gave due warning to the rest of the world that they regarded Spain as their colony, to do with as they saw fit.

Recognition of Franco was deliberate sabotage of the non-intervention agreement which all the major European powers had accepted. But Great Britain and France saw fit, in their desperate anxiety to prevent a European war, to continue to act on the fiction that this agreement continued in force. Incredibly, the British government, even while making known the reports regarding the landing of the Germans at Cadiz, still hugs that delusion. Indeed it goes even further. If nobody else will observe the non-intervention agreement the London government will continue to do so. Indeed, a bill has now passed its second reading in the House of Commons prohibiting British ships from carrying munitions to Spain.

This prohibition, however, does not apply to the carrying of such cargoes to Portugal. When asked why, in view of Portugal's implication in the Spanish crisis, that nation was omitted from the scope of the bill, a British minister replied that it would be an affront to a friendly power to do otherwise. Apparently Spain, in British eyes, is no longer a friendly power. It is only a nuisance which has got Great Britain into a very embarrassing position by letting itself be made a battlefield.

In another week the Council of the League of Nations will, at the behest of the Spanish government, take formal cognizance of the Spanish crisis. There is little hope that Geneva can do much more than publicize what is happening. But the League can under no circumstances make more of a mess of the Spanish problem than has already been accomplished by the grossly misnamed Non-Intervention Committee in London.

Federal And State Taxation.

The Treasury Department's investigations into types of taxes imposed by both the Federal and State Governments compose an extremely useful study—an essential preliminary to any reforms designed to eliminate conflicts arising from duplicate and multiple taxation. The problems presented by adapting taxation principles to the Federal form of government have engaged the attention of experts for a long time. And the conflicts have grown sharper, the need for action greater, with the passage of each year.

Elimination of conflicts in taxation does not imply that there should always be a rigid segregation of Federal and State sources of revenue. Indeed, there is no single remedy for the chaos that now exists in the field of taxation. But that conclusion will not permit indifference to the evidence that the Federal Government's chief sources of revenue from income and excise taxes are being increasingly tapped by the States.

The number of States collecting income taxes has increased from 19 in 1930 to 30 in 1935. In the same period States applying general sales taxes have increased from 2 to 25, while those levying tobacco excise taxes have risen from 16 to 23. All but two States were collecting revenue from liquor excise taxes and licenses in 1935. And all States except Nevada, and the District of Columbia, had estate or inheritance taxes by that year. In other words, the taxes which provide the chief sources of Federal revenue are also becoming more and more a primary source of income for the States. Indeed, receipts from eight types of taxes listed, amounting to $1,655,000,000 in 1935, are believed to have constituted about two-thirds of all taxes collected in that year by the States.

The reason for these encroachments lies in the great expansion of governmental activities and the consequent increases in the cost of government. Until about 1910, there was little overlapping of State and Federal fields of taxation. The States depended largely upon property taxes, while the Federal Government relied chiefly upon customs, liquor and tobacco taxes to supply the needed revenues. The Federal income tax introduced a great change and the war, of course, brought many new excise duties, some of which lingered on after the emergency was over.

The depression period has spurred the search for sources of revenue that can be counted upon to cover pressing emergency needs. Since this search has gone on under the pressure of immediate necessity, no effort has been made to co-ordinate State and Federal tax systems, nor has there been any striving after uniformity by the several States.

Thus the situation now developed presents problems of extraordinary complexity for the tax experts. They cannot be expected to find any single solution for the evils of multiple taxation but they can bring a measure of order out of the existing chaos. In some cases, it may be possible to allocate certain classes of taxes to the Federal Government or to the States, as the case may be, although the practical question of giving effect to such decisions presents still another problem.

Additionally, some kinds of taxes might be levied and collected by the Federal Government and shared with the States, or the States might receive Federal credits for taxes paid to them. But before any action is taken, the data supplied by the Treasury should be analyzed exhaustively. A long step toward solution of present evils has been taken when the facts are known, and a basis for intelligent reform measures thereby afforded.

The Crystal Palace Crumbles.

There is something appropriate in the destruction of London's Crystal Palace by fire. A symbol of the triumph of the Industrial Revolution, it has been destroyed at a time when social advantages of that revolution are being strongly questioned everywhere.

The famous showplace of iron and glass was built to house the exhibition of 1851, the first of the great international fairs to feature scientific progress as its central theme. The displays that Prince Albert gravely supervised set the style for dozens of similar exhibits, first in nearly every capital of Europe, then in America. All have followed the Victorian model set by the Crystal Palace in emphasizing in varying degrees the marvels of science and industry.

But it has been noticed that the public is surfeited with the machine and its magic, and is inclined to return to a simpler and more natural curiosity. Sally Rand's fan was more important to Century of Progress visitors than functional architecture; San Diego offered a nudist camp to supplement Spanish scenery; a "Street of All Nations" and a frontier saloon were the greatest drawing cards at the Texas Centennial and Fort Worth festival.

Now those in charge of the New York fair of 1939, accepting Lewis Mumford's verdict that the wonders of science are no longer news, announce a totally different policy, to "show not merely manufactures and merchandise but the social consequences of these new processes and products."

The 1851 exhibition was more than a good show. It was the representation of a period in political thought. The Crystal Palace symbolized Victorian faith in the ability of perpetual scientific progress to set the world right. But this idea is less strong today, as it becomes apparent that scientific progress is of doubtful value unless political institutions can develop with equal facility. "The social consequences of these new processes" are attracting more critical attention than the Victorians ever thought of giving. That trend is not likely to diminish.

The ideas that the Crystal Palace represented had become as out of date as its architecture. But the ruin of the garish old structure will be mourned by all of England. It was a monument to a lusty era which has gone, leaving us beneficiaries of its advantages as well as heirs to the problems it created.

The End Of Dollar Passes.

Disappointing as it may be, fair study of the District transit situation seems to justify the abolition of dollar passes as announced.

Three years ago the Public Utilities Commission suggested that some part of the then Washington Railway Company's protracted difficulties might be eased by a more progressive technique in merchandising its one commodity—transportation. As a result, a survey of street-car management in other cities was undertaken, particular attention being paid to pass systems. In consequence, a plan offering unlimited rides at a dollar a week was adopted on an experimental basis. Now, after three years, it has been declared impractical. That this would be the result has been evident for some time. The fact that the transit company delayed so long in ending the experiment suggests that this attempt to render more service at a lower price has been thoroughly tested.

Those who saw in the pass system a means of attracting additional business which in the aggregate would more than offset the reduction in unit fares are now disillusioned. Capital Transit Company books show that the added volume of traffic brought so large an increase in operating costs that the net result was a loss. Especially was this the case following the wage increase ordered for street car employes in April, 1935.

In sum, too many passengers used their passes too often to permit the continuance of the dollar-a-week rate. The new $1.25 rate may prove more feasible. In adopting it, Washington becomes the fourth of seven cities throughout the country with populations of 300,000 or more to charge regular street car patrons $1.25 a week. The remaining three cities ask only $1, but in each case street car tokens cost 8 1-3 cents apiece as compared with the 7½ cents still charged here. Bus fares, too, are generally higher in those cities.

Prayer For Peace.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: During the last four days of 1914, a group of men and women met at Cambridge and recorded their agreement upon the following—among other—points:

That love as revealed and interpreted in the life and death of Jesus Christ, involves more than we have yet seen; that it is the only power by which evil can be overthrown, and the only sufficient basis of human society.

That in order to establish a world order based on love, it is incumbent upon those who believe in this principle to accept it fully, both for themselves and in their relations to others, and to take the risks involved in doing so in a world which does not yet accept it.

That we are, therefore, as Christians forbidden to wage war, and that our loyalty to our country to humanity, to the church universal and to Jesus Christ our Lord and Master calls us instead to a life service for the enthronement of love in personal, social, commercial and national life.

And it was resolved that each one should pray daily for "a speedy, a righteous and an enduring peace."

Twenty-two years have passed, and today in this Western Hemisphere, the fulfillment of that prayer is envisioned as a reality. Spiritual forces move slowly. Who shall say that the prayers offered daily by this small group and by others the world over, are not being answered in the congress assembled at the Argentine Republic?

"Thou shalt love thy neighbor as thyself" said the Christ. This admonition has been the motive power back of Roosevelt's first administration. He takes it with him to the Argentine, and in a world torn by fear, hatred, suspicion and intrigue, he holds out his hand to the representative of a great sister republic, and calls him "my friend."

The President is returning. Could this country better show its appreciation of a great task beautifully accomplished than by asking him to set aside the Sunday nearest Christmas as a day for united prayer that his journey shall not have been in vain?

Personal Property Tax.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Will you kindly correct a misstatement appearing in your issue of November 29.

In discussing the question of the tax on personal property in the District, stating that writs of mandamus were to be issued against many failing to file returns, the statement was made (referring to the recent case of Cogger vs. Hazen, et al.) that "by refusing to review Cogger's case, the Supreme Court ruled the Commissioner's tax levy was valid."

This statement is not only erroneous, but is misleading. The Court of Appeals refused to pass on the constitutional phase of the question. I quote from the decision of the court which may be found in 85 Fed. (2d) 695:

Constitutionality of act levying tax on intangible personal property of residents of District of Columbia could not be questioned in statutory mandamus proceeding to compel District of Columbia resident to file personal property return.

Finally, the court said:

Our opinion in this case therefore is not conclusive of the questions raised by the appellant concerning the constitutionality of the taxing act, inasmuch as, in any event, the judgment of mandamus entered by the lower court should be sustained.

In short, the court held, and possibly correctly so, that the question of the validity of the act would come after the filing of the tax return.

Who's Afraid Of Bugaboos?

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I dare you to print this letter. failure to do so will stamp you as a pusillanimous person, devoid of courage. You know as well as I do that the lying capitalistic press abhors the truth, especially when it's beneficial to the common people. I am sorry I am only a visitor here so I have no subscription to cancel. If I were a subscriber I should only regret that I had but one subscription to cancel.

It's very well for you to sit in your warm editorial office (by the way, what is the temperature in your office?) and criticize those poor unfortunates who have to work for a living, but did you ever stop to consider, etc., etc., etc.?

The above is, I believe, standard form for a certain type of letter which is familiar to readers and perhaps more familiar to editors. It is a composite of the usual challenges and dares and reflections upon editorial courage, the sole standard of courage in the writer's eyes being whether or not a particular letter is printed.

So I should like to inquire of writers who so prefix their missives: How do they get that way and if so who cares? R. C. O'BRIEN.

Labor Spies.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: On November 21 there appeared an editorial under the heading "Industrial Iscariots" in your paper. It discusses the "Senate Committee inquiring into the status of workingmen's civil liberties."

The first paragraph of your editorial reads, "A taste of their own medicine is in store for certain conscienceless persons who have betrayed fellow industrial workers in order to line their own pockets." This refers to spies appointed by employers for the purpose of detecting paid workers who are quietly deceiving their employers by advocating trouble of some sort detrimental to the interest of firms that are supplying both capital and brains to give them work.

The police department has a right to set traps to snare burglars and the same right belongs to an employer whose interests are being upset by men he is paying to do his work. No argument can be produced to confront this just theory regardless of what labor unions may think or assert. There are more people in this country to be considered than what is known as the laboring element. There is the storekeeper and his clerks, the bookkeepers in banks and so on, all useful members of society and quite as important as members of the American Federation of Labor.

There is a strike every week in the year very hurtful to the country, and to the strikers.

Another David's Fate.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: One of the many names of King Edward is David. Recall the story of another king by the name of David who coveted his neighbor's wife and the severe punishment God meted out, not only to the king himself but to the entire kingdom of Israel. The words of the prophet, Nathan, are as applicable today, in showing God's displeasure, as they were centuries ago. God did not consider David had the right to lead his own life.

From his boyhood, King Edward has always been, to his people, a standard bearer of the highest ideals of national duty and honor. His people know him to be a knight without fear and they have hitherto looked to him to be a knight without reproach. He cannot flout the law of God and retain the respect of the nation, nor has he a right to inflict such a grievous wound upon England by lowering her moral standards.

The watchwords of the British army and navy are, "England expects every man to do his duty" and as commander-in-chief of the British forces, England has the right to expect her king to do his duty in that state of life in which it has pleased God to call him. H. N. C.

Local Suffrage.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: May I congratulate you on the editorial appearing in The Post of November 27 on the "Local Suffrage Problem." I heartily agree with your views when one thinks of the many reasons against suffrage for the District mentioned. We have too many ignorant residents here. And only a small proportion pay taxes, yet they would have a voice. I hope you will continue your opposition.

A Stadium For Washington.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The Army-Navy game of 1936 has been played. The 101,519 seats available were sold out more than two weeks before the game and scalpers were getting $50 for some of the seats. Hotels were crowded and rooms anywhere in the city were in great demand. Night waited on the gala celebration of the victors until dawn.

But this famous service game was not played here in the Nation's Capital, the logical place for the Army-Navy game to be played. No, there wasn't a suitable stadium. There is a suitable site, the property already owned by the Government. There are millions of dollars lying idle here in the vaults of the city's banks.

The welfare organizations of Washington are spending millions of dollars every year feeding thousands of able-bodied, idle men who need work, but the influential men here who should put their shoulders to the wheel to plan and direct the work have not got the civic enterprise to start the job and put it across.

A stadium seating 125,000 people would make Washington the center of the Nation's athletic life, drawing many capacity crowds every season, filling the hotel foyers and the restaurants with the red-blooded, virile life of America.

Washington has had two world series of baseball during the past 50 years. It could have as large and as enthusiastic a gathering of football fans three or four times every autumn requiring 40 or 50 special trains to bring the crowds to each of the events.

Nearly 30,000,000 people live within ten hours conveyance of Washington. Streamline trains, fast, luxurious buses and millions of automobiles await their desire. Great intersectional games played by the season's famous teams as well as the well known gridiron classic of the year for which Washington is largely drawn upon to furnish the social and official color, would arouse an urging desire.

Social life in the Nation's city would throb with renewing energy. Suppers, dances, furs and mums would be in urging demand.

Millions of dollars would be drawn here into the commercial coffers of Washington every season for the next 100 years.

The people of Washington that have attended these Army-Navy games during the past 37 years have taken enough cold cash from this city to finance the construction of the different stadiums where this gridiron classic has been held from year to year. Why not begin building a large stadium right here in Washington this next spring?

The Post Impressionist

Detours And Dead-Ends.

OLD MAN CURIOSITY has prominent features, an eye for the main chance, an ear to the ground, a nose in everybody's business, lips forever framing questions, and a chin invitingly stuck out for everything coming. He has been prowling around the world for a long time, and though he has done a tremendous amount of good his reputation is none of the best. He is constitutionally lazy, forever seeking some easy way of doing what must be done, and (here's a tasty bit of gossip!) there is strong presumptive evidence that he is the father of Mother Necessity's best-known child.

Which brings us to the interesting fact that during the recent automobile show it was authoritatively stated in this newspaper that at least 100,000 inventions went to the making of an automobile. To which may be added that there is strong possibility that for every invention there were two or three inventors; that two or more men stumbled on the same improvement unknown to each other. That is a little matter probably true of all inventions, big and little.

A monument to the Unknown Inventor would be a symbol of more men and women than there are in the world today, for pretty nearly every person who ever lived has wittingly or unwittingly done his or her bit.

Naturally there has been much misdirected effort. Long before the best shield possible came into existence lances went out of fashion. If the very best possible tallow candle ever existed (which is doubtful) it was long ago cast into the shade. The very best of stage coaches was run down by a locomotive. It really looked for a time as though the locomotive, long before it reached perfection, would be derailed by a rampaging herd of automobiles. And the newspaper telegrapher, with one ear to the radio, has been listening for "30" for years past.

People inclined to pessimism are at times convinced that since the beginning of time the world has been packed with futilitarians; that not only does one never reach a goal, but there is small likelihood that his successor will ever reach it; for the road of progress is dotted with detour signs, and Antic Fate, a busy traffic cop, sees to it that you keep agoing till you reach another detour sign. This haphazard progression is true of every age, every science and every school of philosophy.

There is something pathetic about the careers of the dear little inventions that died in their infancy or early childhood; sleeve links and cuff holders and dickeys (the original false fronts) and buttonhooks and antimacassars (with the plush chairs they protected and the macassar oil they warded against), and mustache cups and shaving mugs. And dear, oh dear! We might have had something really fancy in the way of buggy whips if that plaguy old horseless carriage hadn't come wheezing and coughing along.

Detours and dead ends! How many inventions are not only dead, but altogether forgotten? Incomplete records enable us only to faintly surmise. Something in the pigments used by the earlier painters, something now forgotten, caused them to endure. Some unknown ingredients of ordinary plaster in days of long ago gave it the strength and hardness of cement.

And how about modern times? When we build a new house, a new ship or a new car, we say of it that it has all the modern improvements, but the old houses, ships, cars, continue for a long time, though lacking the latter better things. Sometimes useful inventions are held in abeyance for the reason that their introduction would mean the costly scrapping of present equipment. And right here there is room for startling conjecture. Many inventions die in infancy. How many really useful ones never actually know the breath of life?

Two or three years ago I chanced on an excerpt from an article by a naval officer telling of an inventor of a cheap illuminant who was never allowed to put it on the market. This startled me because it tallied somewhat with something that had happened to me some 30 years before.

On a brief visit to New York I chanced to meet a reporter I had known in Pittsburgh, and he told just such a story. The inventor boarded with him. He had gone out the day before to see an oil man and he had not returned. He had left the lamp burning. It was still burning. He urged me to go with him and see it. I did. The light was high and clear and smokeless. He tipped the lamp (a common glass one) until the liquid flowed over the wick and the flame was promptly extinguished. The inventor said (the reporter told us) that precisely the same thing would happen if the lamp fell and smashed. There would be no explosion; no fire. With the flame extinguished we examined the liquid. It was tasteless, odorless, colorless. It seemed to be just plain water. The inventor claimed it contained ingredients which could be purchased in any drug store for a few cents; it could be mixed by anybody, and the cost was negligible compared to kerosene.

Weird yarn? Yes, indeed. And a man would have a sweet time proving it. But there it is. Life is made up of incomplete short stories, and this is one of them.

The Jitters.

Hangover is a malady in two phases, cerebral and gastric, but the gastric phase is only secondary and in some cases does not occur at all. Cerebral hangover, which is known also as the jitters and the shrieking meemies, comes from the absorption of alcohol into the tissues of the brain. This does something to the centers governing the emotions, and the attack continues until the alcohol has vanished.

There is no medicine or treatment to cure or mitigate hangover, although science has made faithful efforts to discover such a boon, and many fiends in human form have marketed various kinds of fizzing salts and waters for which false claims of miraculous powers were made. It is a terrible thing indeed thus to impose on the hopes of suffering victims, but they do it, nevertheless, and there you have another instance of man's inhumanity to man. Some people think a raw egg in a cup of Worcestershire sauce gives relief, but they are just crazy, because the net result is a cold, clammy moisture on the forehead. Others have a wan faith in canned tomatoes, but they don't do any good, either. Finally, there is the hair of the dog that bit you, but that only deadens the pain and postpones the suffering, because eventually that alcohol, too, must be eliminated from the brain.

The only cure for hangover is suffering, and this may be mild or awful, brief or prolonged, according to the amount of alcohol absorbed. For some curious reasons, which science has not discovered, certain beverages and combinations of them produce distinctive types of hangover. Beer, for example, causes a dull, tenacious misery, but beer and champagne result in sharp, uncontrollable twitches and a sense of detachment from one's body. Champagne in excess gives the subject a feeling that his scalp is flopping around like an old cap several sizes too large, and the brandy victim sometimes has an alarming sense that he has died and mustn't move the body until the coroner has been there. He doesn't actually think that, because his intelligence remains acute, but he feels that way just the same. It is kind of hard to explain.

All types of hangover are accompanied by a numbness of the fingertips and toes and by remorse and a firm determination never to drink alcoholic bevarages again. These manifestations abate gradually as the alcohol itself disappears from the brain tissue, and upon complete recovery the subject forgets not only his sufferings, but his excellent resolutions and readily succumbs to temptation.

There is also a tendency to exaggerate the importance of unbecoming remarks and conduct of the night before and to compose mentally, as one lies abed the next morning, letters and speeches of apology to one's hostess for foolish utterances and pranks which were not so bad as all that but merely consistent with the occasion. In other words, all who were present the night before feel the same way, and the best procedure is just to forget it.

However, it will be seen that the state of being hung over, painful though it be, is accompanied by a brisk moral and intellectual stimulus. The character is momentarily burnt clean of sinful and frivolous traits, and the mind perceives the wanton folly of excess more clearly than at any other time. If these elements of the malady could be preserved after the period of suffering has passed, the patient would be much better off, but a few days or weeks pass, and, lo! it is the same old story. (I think that is the first time I ever used the word "lo!" and I have never used "alas!")

The worst place to have a hangover is in a jail, where there is no human sympathy and there is likely to be a clamorous moaning and babbling of other victims in a really bad way. They can't get any coffee, they can't get sleep, they can't shave, and if it is Saturday night when they are picked up they have to lie in the can till Monday morning.

But next to a jail the worst place for a hangover is on a train, and persons about to go away should try to remember how terrible it is to wake up in a stuffy berth about 4 o'clock in the morning and peer out the window at the freight house in High Point, N. C., or Cairo, Ill. It is a long way to the water cooler in the end of the car, and you can't bring back a drink and set it on the window sill in those little paper envelopes, because they don't have any bottom to sit on. Ten minutes later you have to go and get another, and that means putting on your bathrobe and slippers, and pretty soon they hitch on the diner and the fumes of pork sausage, eggs, bacon and German fried potatoes begin to seep through.

I don't know why I am telling you all this.

The New Europe

War Not Imminent, At Least, Reports Observer.

By Walter Millis.

This article by Walter Millis, author of "The Road to War," is the last of a series of close-up views of Europe today.

NOT LONG AGO the Russians in effect broke up the Spanish non-intervention agreement and made gestures — though cautiously — toward doing something dramatic for the Madrid government. So the Fascist powers made gestures, too, and there was another war scare to flutter the European cables. It is possible. In contemporary Europe the next world war is always possible. But a casual tour of the principal capitals this fall left me with a tourist's impression—a very definite one, however—that the likelihood is usually exaggerated.

War in Europe is an endemic disease; there is not, I think, any great danger for the time being of its passing into the epidemic stage. I actually found one diplomatist, even, to agree with me that quite conceivably it never would. And he was a Russian. Military preparations and military fears are, of course, everywhere; talk of the next world war is a wearisome commonplace; the whole continent is infected and debilitated, like a malarial or bookworm area, by this poison for which it knows no remedy and from which it has ceased to expect relief. But it is conditioning itself to the scourge. It is developing its own kind of resistance—to a greater extent than most Americans seem to realize—to the sickness in its blood; and the fatal paroxysm may yet be delayed so long as to permit of a real cure being developed.

British Will Not, French Can Not Fight.

THE BRITISH have decided simply that they will not fight; the French cannot; the Germans are not ready even if they actually wished to risk it; the Russians have no reason to start a war. I was not in Rome, but Mussolini's assurances that Ethiopia is enough for him for the present appear to be taken at their face value.

No doubt it is to the unstable lesser powers that the investigator ought to go—to Poland, struggling against poverty and social revolution with a dictatorship devoid of a dictator, or to Czechoslovakia, a sturdy state in an impossible situation, or to the Balkans, which always were impossible—in order to discover the powder trains capable of touching off the explosion. I was in none of those countries. But is it really so easy to set off the magazine? The new alliance system, so similar to that of 1914 on the surface, is in fact a very different affair beneath. One cannot help being struck by the looseness, the uncertainty, of the whole edifice, and by its capacity for that very reason to absorb shocks that would have destroyed the pre-war Europe more quickly than did the bullet at Sarajevo.

In Paris, representatives of the embittered Right will tell one without hesitation that the Franco-Soviet pact will never be fulfilled; Russia sold out France in 1917, and France will repay in kind. But those close to Leftist and Soviet sources will imply the same thing, hardly less baldly. One hears that "the first day of international war will be the first day of civil war in France." Should Hitler march eastward, the Russians expect that for the first week of the war, at least, France would do nothing. Czechoslovakia may look at Spain, and draw her own conclusions as to what faith to put in the promises of the democratic powers. Nor in Moscow does one gather a much better impression of the Czechs' chances for help—if the preservation of Czechoslovakia should mean the starting of the world war.

France and Britain Might Be Embroiled.

Naturally, should the Nazis get themselves deeply involved in a war in eastern Europe, the French and British might then come in. But that raises complications. For one thing, the Germans appreciate the possibility. Their diplomacy seems all directed still to the hope of neutralizing France and Britain and securing the free hand, as dictated in "Mein Kampf," for the attack on bolshevism and the collaring of the Ukraine. But their strategy, realizing the improbability of securing any reliable guaranty on the west, may be turning back to the old Schlieffen plan of a west front war.

In September there were many rumors that the Germans had reversed their strategy to face once more into the west. One heard about new mechanized corps concentrated along the Rhine. Mysterious divisions were supposed to be shuttling from the east front across to the other side of Germany. Perhaps they were as mythical as they were mysterious; but at least, the formation of a new Twelfth Corps in the Rhineland has since been officially announced, while the French recently declared their intention of plugging the remaining gaps, along the Swiss border, in the Maginot Line.

Undoubtedly a good many informed minds are occupying themselves with the possibility that the Germans intend to attack westward, on the 1914 model. If their staff plans do now call for a war on that pattern, it might mean that such a war was coming and coming soon. On the other hand, however, it might mean only that the Reichswehr high command was engaged in proving to Hitler that there must be no war at all.

For the moment, at least, the Reischwehr is commonly regarded as the most pacific element in Germany. It is not ready. It was over the nervous protests of the army that Hitler marched into the Rhineland. The complete success of that gamble might tempt him to a repetition elsewhere. But if the staff studies demostrate that a relatively lesser war in the east is not possible; that Germany must begin any war, no matter where the exciting trouble arises, by launching her main strength once more upon the French defenses, it should be a powerful deterrent to adventure in any quarter.

Germany Learned Of Two-Front Wars.

FOR IT IS difficult to believe that after the disastrous failure last time any German government, even a Nazi one, would risk another two-front war on the old model until the military problem of winning it had been solved. And it is equally difficult to believe that the Reichswehr has yet succeeded in solving it. Nor is it simply that the rearmament program is still incomplete. The Reichswehr lacks trained officers and noncommissioned officers for its new conscript levies; it is still short of airplanes and artillery, especially in the heavy calibers. These requirements can presently be filled. But there is more to it than that. The gasoline problem has been only partially solved by the development of the expensive synthetic substitute, and this in turn has restricted the process of motorization and mechanization.

Most of the infantry is still on foot instead of in trucks; the field artillery is still horse-drawn. But the typical division is provided with advance-guard units of armored cars and motorized antitank and machine guns, while the corps artillery is motorized. The combination of these different means of transport appears to have raised difficulties as yet not satisfactorily solved; their use in battle against an enemy with ample supplies of gasoline would raise more difficulties still.

The airplane is a great enigma, presumably for the German as for all other staffs. Nobody knows what it can do, or how terrible would be the reprisals which a resort to air power might instantly bring down. It is possible that the bloody experience in Spain will yield somewhat clearer data on the subject; it is conceivable that it was partly for that reason that the German aviators and airplanes were dispatched to Gen. Franco's aid. But the air will still be a great unknown quantity in the calculations of any contemporary European general staff. And it is not the only one. The maneuvers of the ground armies themselves — which teach every lesson that can be learned about war except the one lesson of what will happen when there are real bullets in the guns and real TNT in the bomb-racks—raise as many questions as they answer.

Infantry Attacks Show No Ordered Lines.

AT THE GREAT German second army maneuvers this fall I saw a full infantry regiment advancing across open ground to the attack. It was coming down off a rather distant ridge, crossing a wide, shallow valley and mounting the slope on which I happened to stand. It had no lines, no order, no regular arrangement of companies, or battalions. There were just little strings of men, each a squad in single file led by its corporal (and looking for all the world like microphotographs I have seen of certain types of disease germs), scattered all over the whole area. They were moving generally in the same direction, but some were headed at the moment in one way, some in another. With wide intervals between each string and its nearest neighbor, there was no mass to attack, nothing to shoot at, nothing to be stopped. But they filled up the place. It was an example of the current application of World War lessons in "dispersion."

It was manificent; but was it also war? The movement demanded, to begin with, a degree of training, initiative and independent responsibility in every corporal equivalent to what was expected of a captain or a major, perhaps, in the World War. Would such formations stand up in action; and if they did, what about the enemy formations of the same sort?

I talked with one thoughtful student of war who wondered whether with such chicken-wire armies it would be possible to have attack, shock and victory on the old system. Might the hostile armies not tend simply to intermingle, coalesce and mutually paralyze each other and the devastated countryside which they filled? How would either maintain supply—enormously difficult when, to the inordinate quantities of ammunition which the modern power-driven shooting-iron can eat up, one adds the great tank-loads of explosive gasoline which the power-propelled troops require if they are to move?

The tank, I gathered, was another pretty great unknown. The military people I saw in Europe, who had been watching the various fall maneuvers, all seemed interested in the tank. I rather gathered that the German tactics in both defense and attack were built around the tank. I was told of one continental maneuver in which no less than 1,200 tanks were launched in a single great attack. At the German maneuvers, which I saw, the machines were present in much smaller numbers.

But even the Germans were undecided as to how to use them. Should they be advanced in thin, dispersed lines, as the British used them in the World War? Or should they be massed upon a narrow front and in great depth, like the Greek phalanx or the heavy infantry assault column of Napoleonic times, with the idea that, by sacrifice of the leading ranks, the rest would crash through? It is another among many problems in unknown quantities with which the planner of the next war must deal.

1914 General Staffs Underestimated Chances.

IN 1914, too, of course, the staffs realized that there were uncertain quantities upon which they could not definitely calculate. But they did not know how many of them there were. Now they do know. If the staffs, in 1914 did not quite promise quick victory, all of them felt pretty certain that they would achieve one. It is hard to see how any staff today can feel certain of anything.

It seems to me a pretty salutary and optimistic circumstance. And on top of all the uncertainties as to tactics, all the uncertainties as to the higher strategy, there is one dominant uncertainty as to politics. Every practical calculation concerning the next general war must allow for the role of Great Britain. A war can hardly be planned satisfactorily without knowing what the British army, the British air force and the British fleet will do. And nobody—least of all the British—knows what they will do. I think it a great aid to peace.

Among foreign observers in London, in Paris and in Moscow one hears that the next war is inevitable, of course, but that it won't come until the Germans start it. And among observers in Berlin one hears that the next war is, of course, inevitable, but, of course, it won't come now, no, not "for another year or two" at least. Well, the world war has not been coming for another year or two for a long time now.

Auto Industry, Oil Men Reject Bids to Parley

The Automobile Manufacturers Association and the American Petroleum Institute have declined invitations to Maj. George L. Berry's conference of business and labor representatives, to be held here December 10 and 11. As was the case when Berry, as co-ordinator for industrial co-operation, called a similar meeting a year ago, others of the larger industries are not expected to be present next week when legisltaion covering hours and wages will be among the major topics.

Berry made public the letter of the automobile manufacturers in which they explained that there had been a steady rise in wages within the industry and expressed the belief that new legislation would "interrupt the upward trend of the industry."

No replies have been received from the steel, textile and chemical industries.

Acceptances from smaller industries, however, assure a large attendance at the meeting.

A definition of inter-State commerce "which recognizes the nature and economic functioning of industry and commerce today" is expected to be "one of the highlights" of the legislative program to be formulated at the meeting, Berry said.

Citing divergence between the rise of employment and wages on one hand and production and profits on the other, Berry said:

"The low wages paid and the long hours of work exacted by a minority of employers in some industries are exerting an irresistible competitive pressure on employers who wish to maintain standards of hours and wages that will spread employment and increase purchasing power to choose between reducing wages and lengthening hours of work or going out of business."

Berry referred to a statement he said was made at a meeting of trade association executives to the effect that his organization was "a sponge to sop up the complaints of industry, but not to do anything about them." He declared that something was going to be done about them.

The co-ordinator denied any knowledge of the basis of reports of discord within the Administration over his activities. It has been reported particularly that the Business Advisory Council of the Commerce Department was not in accord with his ideas.

Tugwell Discusses Planning.

New York, Dec. 2 (AP).—Rexford G. Tugwell, former Resettlement Administrator, says in the next issue of the New Republic that the future of economic planning in the United States depends largely upon the willingness of business men to cooperate.

In his first public statement on Government affairs since the election, Tugwell says:

"We shall know quite soon whether what is to be expected during the next four years is the simple exploitation of a boom, or whether they will be used to build something more permanent. • • •

"How we plan for the future will be so largely determined by the business men of America that all of us, I think, in these post-election days, are looking anxiously for the signs of their consent to co-operation. If this is withheld, the four years on which we are entering will be difficult ones. If they consent everything will be easy."

At Buenos Aires

By Barnet Nover

Out Of Monroe By Wilson.

THE FELICITOUS speech made by President Roosevelt at the opening of the Buenos Aires conference was deeply rooted in the American tradition. Its spiritual progenitors were none other than James Monroe and Woodrow Wilson. Indeed no small portion of the address may be regarded as a cogent reinterpretation of views that found expression in notable state papers bearing the names of these Presidents.

And it was entirely fitting and proper that President Roosevelt saw fit to hearken back to Monroe and Wilson. For the world situation in which the United States now finds itself has certain striking parallels with the situation that confronted this Nation at the time of Monroe and more recently at the time of Wilson.

• • • •

IN MONROE'S DAY the Holy Alliance of European autocrats constituted in the eyes of the American people a threat to our security and our institutions. In Wilson's time, the Monroe Doctrine, which by implication adumbrated the idea that the western hemisphere must be made safe for democracy, was given a universal emphasis.

There can be no peace in the world, said the War President in effect, unless the autocratic principle is rooted out and the world of nations becomes a collectivity of democracies. His famous phrase was far more the expression of what he considered a realistic principle than a prediction of the course of events.

As a prediction it was a disastrous failure. But events have shown how clearly Wilson envisaged the realities of the world situation. The Fascist dictatorships in Europe today are both more autocratic and more warlike than were the autocracies of the pre-war era. If peace is threatened today it is from the side of those nations. And if peace breaks down in the Old World, as many fear it will, such a development can not be viewed with equanimity in the New.

As President Roosevelt said: "Even though the Americas become involved in no war, we must suffer too. The madness of a great war would affect us and threaten our good in a hundred ways." And he expressed the confident hope that the nations of this hemisphere might, even now, help Europe "avert the catastrophe which impends."

• • • •

FOR SOME MONTHS the Fascist nations, in particular Nazi Germany, have been beating the tomtoms regarding the dangers of communism. In pursuit of distinctly nationalist policies, and it may be in preparation for eventual aggressions, these nations have sought to persuade the world that all must join them in a crusade against the Red peril.

But thus far they have succeeded in converting only themselves to the view that the world must choose between fascism and communsim. The great democracies have remained aloof from the developing struggle between Red authoritarianism on the one hand and Black and Brown authoritarianism on the other. Democracy is clearly in opposition to both.

The real division in the world today is not so much on the basis of governmental forms as on the basis of international intent. It is a division between those nations which want peace and those which, in the President's words, regard "war as an instrument of policy."

So far as this division is concerned the democratic nations are all lined up on the side of peace, even though, unfortunately, they manifest no such unity of purpose and policy as is now being manifested by the Fascist dictatorships. President Roosevelt has now come forward and has suggested that in this hemisphere, at least, such unity can be achieved, first by "strengthening the processes of constitutional government" in the New World and by so doing, stabilizing peace.

• • • •

MR. ROOSEVELT is certainly aware of the fact that in more than one nation in Latin America, democracy has disappeared and totalitarian philosophies have gained the upper hand. Both Bolivia and Paraguay are now Fascist states. The Fascist spirit is also strong in Brazil and Chile while Germany has made a strenuous and not unsuccessful effort to Nazify the German elements in Argentina and elsewhere and through these groups expert pressure on the governments. The Dominican republic is and for some years has been in the grip of a dictatorship. In Nicaragua, not long ago, the constitutional government was overthrown by a military coup d'etat. In emphasizing the virtues of democracy as a force for peace, President Roosevelt was obviously not directing his remarks to Italy, Germany and Japan alone.

The danger of the spread of Fascist ideas in the New World is a danger not only to the political stability of Latin American nations. It is also a danger to the peace of this hemisphere. For these Latin American Fascist movements may, it is feared, serve as the spearpoints of Fascist aggression.

This second danger President Roosevelt would meet not by invoking the Monroe Doctrine in its original, unilateral form but by broadening it into a collective instrument of peace to be employed by the New World as a whole against outside aggressors.

• • • •

IT IS AN interesting fact that in thus suggesting the transformation of the Monroe Doctrine into a multilateral policy, President Roosevelt is reverting to an idea that found currency as long ago as the Paris Peace conference. As Felix Morley points out in his book, "The Society of Nations," when the question of giving recognition to the Monroe Doctrine came up before the Commission on the League of Nations in 1919, Lord Robert (now Viscount) Cecil drew up an article declaring that no coercive action to enforce peace in the Western Hemisphere was to be taken except at the request of the United States and other New World states members of the "Executive Council."

This plan was rejected. At that time we insisted that the Monroe Doctrine was our policy, to be enforced by us alone. Times have changed. The Monroe Doctrine may now become the concern of all the American republics. That collective action which we have repudiated, so far as Europe is concerned, we may now be prepared to accept with regard to the Western Hemisphere. Our first great step toward peace in the post-war area may ostensibly be limited in its scope to the North and South American continents. But that same threat of war which is uniting us with our neighbors of this hemisphere may drive us further along the path of international co-operation for peace.

The force of events is stronger than old ideas, old prejudices, even long standing shibboleths.

The Twelfth Month

By William Lyon Phelps

December.

Lord Byron, having no love for the critics, wrote:

As soon seek roses in December, ice in June;
Hope constancy in wind, or corn in chaff:
Believe a woman or an epitaph,
Or any other thing that's false, before
You trust in critics.

Well, that is strong language and striking figures; but there is a way to have roses in December. Some one said, and Barrie quoted it, "God gave us memory so that we might have roses in December."

It is interesting to observe that those who speak of inconstancy in woman or who call women liars are themselves most vulnerable. Byron suggests that women are not to be trusted, but was there ever a woman who could trust him? Hamlet said, "Frailty, thy name is women!" and immediately decided to jilt the constant and loyal Ophelia. Shakespeare made a woman say, "Men are April when they woo, December when they wed."

I wish I knew what the song was that the bibulous Sir Toby Belch starts to sing in Shakespeare's "Twelfth Night:"

"O! the twelfth day of December!"

He is immediately told to keep still; but I wish he had gone on. What was it that made December 12 so interesting? It must have been some popular song, well known at the time. But all the scholarly research hounds have failed to find any trace of it.

December nights are far more beautiful than nights in June. And the finest description I have ever read anywhere of a midnight outdoors in December is in the second chapter of Thomas Hardy's novel, "Far From the Madding Crowd."

State Legislatures

Commonwealths Expected To Await Hint From Washington On Federal Aid Plans Before Calculating Budgets.

By Goodrich Wilson Lineweaver.
Special Correspondence of The Post.

BY THE SECOND WEEK in January the legislatures of 43 States of the Union will have begun wrestling with a variety of problems, most of which are largely of a State character, but others that will have national import in the light of existing Federal legislation and Federal activities.

It is not being presumptious to say that the eyes of practically every one of the 5,000 or more State legislators will be turned on Washington or to be more accurate on the White House, hoping for a hint from President Roosevelt as to his policy with respect to Federal relief aid to the States during the remainder of the current Federal fiscal year and for the new fiscal year beginning July 1 next.

Each one of the 43 States will unquestionably put Federal relief at the head of its list in making up their budgets or appropriation bills and what will be done about tax reduction in the States will depend in no little measure on the word from Washington as to what may be expected in the form of Federal allocations for this purpose.

Farm Stabilization Concerns South And West.

IN THE FARM States of the South and West and the Far West, the question of State legislation to aid in implementing Federal farm stabilization proposals will come to the front.

Thirty-one of the 43 States will be concerned about social security and old age pension legislation. The other 12 have taken care of the situation at regular or special sessions during 1936 and have protected the 90 per cent credits on payroll collections or 1936. Two States not having legislative sessions this year have enacted security laws.

The others, and likewise the five States where regular sessions are not scheduled until 1938, are vitally interested in what Congress will do with regard to proposals that the time for States to adopt legislation under the social security act so that they may receive the 90 per cent credit on 1936 payroll assessments. Something like $100,000,000 is involved in this and the Federal Treasury will hold on to the full payroll collections should the State's time to act not be extended.

A flood of memorials asking for the extension will doubtless emanate from State capitols before the sessions are well under way.

In Virginia, for instance, the legislative assembly does not meet in regular session until 1938 and Gov. Peery is being urged to call an extraordinary session to act before the end of the calendar year in order that the State may not lose the 1936 share and also be assured of the 1937 portion. The Governor, however, believes Congres will extend the time for States to act and that Virginia as well as other States will not lose by delay. In 1936 at the regular session the Virginia assembly turned thumbs down on State security legislation, the opposition raising questions as to the constitutionality of the Federal law and fighting off action.

Slight Debate Expected On States' Rights Issue.

IT MAY BE forecast, without fear of contradiction, that no serious question of State's rights or Federal invasion of the prerogatives of their respective commonwealths will be raised in any of the legislative sessions.

In fact, it has been many years since the Federal Government was attacked on that score on the floors of the Legislatures and the most that has been heard of the issue, even in the deep South, was in the recent Presidential campaign when the self-styled Jeffersonian Democrats undertook unsuccessfully to stir up opposition to President Roosevelt on the ground that he had done all but abolish State capitols and State lines.

Most of the States, if not all, have been looking longingly at the Federal Treasury for decades and have invited Federal supervision and, more important, Federal highway aid, health and farm assistance, and any other aid that might be proposed. The so-called wealthier States that pay the heaviest taxes into the Federal Trasury have joined the procession on the theory they would have to pay their proportionate share, so they should get what they could while the getting was good.

For a time, there was agitation for lump-sum appropriations to States to spend as they might desire and under State jurisdiction, but when that was seriously proposed in connection with relief in the recent campaign, it did not appear to make an impression except perhaps in Maine and Vermont, the only two States carried by the Republican Party.

Nevertheless the President and his relief advisers may cast a wary eye over State finances with a view to determining whether or not the Federal Government shall continue to support that particular function in the manner to which the States have been accustomed since 1933.

Tax programs will await information from Washington in all probability, although there may be gestures, if not actual effort, toward reducing the tax load for State purposes, especially where there is a surplus.

Just how much the State Legislatures will expect from Washington in the way of relief aid or in other respects remains to be seen.

It may be exceedingly helpful in election years to have State administrations of the same political faith as a candidate for President, but in this instance it may have its burdens.

A.T.& T. Orders Big Reduction In Phone Rates

$12,000,000 Slash Made in Long Distance Tariffs.

By the Associated Press.

The second major reduction in long-distance telephone rates since the Government's investigation of the American Telephone & Telegraph Co. began was announced yesterday by the Communications Commission.

The reduction—amounting to $12,000,000 a year—will become effective, Commissioner Paul Walker said, as soon as new rate schedules can be prepared "and in any event not later than mid-January."

Both Walker and Walter S. Gifford, A. T. & T. president, commended the method in which the rate reduction was negotiated, without long drawn out legal battles. In New York, Gifford noted it was the ninth reduction in the past ten years.

The new cut, Walker said, was the result of informal conferences between the commission and the company, and followed a $10,000,000 reduction by the company last September, just prior to the first hearing in the commission's far-reaching study of the company's capital structure.

Walker disclosed the commission was running short of funds and would ask Congress for a new appropriation of $350,000 to assure completion of the inquiry. Funds now on hand, he said, would finance it only through January.

Dr. Chadbourne, 73, Hoover Aide, Dies

Dr. Arthur Patterson Chadbourne, 73, during the World War an aide to Herbert Hoover in the Food Administration, died yesterday at his home, 1423 Newton street northwest. He had been ill for a month.

Dr. Chadbourne retired two years ago from the Veterans' Administration, which he entered after the war. He served as a cardio-vascular specialist here, in Denver, Colo., and in Dwight, Ill.

Born in Boston, he was educated at Harvard College and at Harvard Medical School and at several European capitals. Dr. Chadbourne was attached for a time to the Massachusetts General Hospital staff.

His wife, Mrs. Eva Wilson Chadbourne, survives. Funeral services and burial will be held in Cambridge, Mass., at 2 p. m. tomorrow.

J. J. Burns, Retired U. S. Printer, Dies

John Joseph Burns, a retired stereotyper of the Government Printing Office, died Tuesday at the home of his son, John T. Burns, at 433 Oneida place northwest.

Mr. Burns, who was 82, was the oldest parishoner of St. Aloysius Church. He retired from the G. P. O. in 1921 and after 21 years' service. He was an active member and former officer of the Stereotyper's Union. He was born at Troy, N. Y.

Funeral services will be held tomorrow at 10 a. m. at St. Aloysius Church, with burial at Mount Olivet Cemetery. Survivors are his three sons, John T. S., the Rev. Walter Joseph Burns, S. J., and Harry T. Burns, and a daughter, Sister M. Fernanda.

James MacEwen, Ex-U.S. Aide, Dies

James MacEwen, 72, retired Department of the Interior guard, died late yesterday at his home, 23 Takoma avenue, Takoma Park, Md., where he had lived for the past 16 years. Death was attributed to heart disease.

Surviving Mr. MacEwen are his wife, Mrs. Bessie Black MacEwen, and a son, the Rev. Thomas MacEwen, pastor of Laurel Springs (N. J.) Presbyterian Church.

MacEwen was a member of the Fourth Presbyterian Church and a Mason.

Short Circuit in Radio Starts Apartment Fire

A short circuit in a radio last night caused a fire that destroyed a two-room apartment at 705 H street northwest.

Bandit at Gas Station Robs Attendant of $35

A gunman late last night robbed Willis S. Wright, 31, attendant in a gasoline station in the 4800 block of Conduit road, of $35.

The bandit covered Wright with a pistol and ordered him to turn over his money. Another sum, deposited in a safe in the rear of the station, was overlooked by the robber as he escaped.

First Toy Fund Contributor

ANNE CARY HAWFIELD.

Girl, 3, Makes First Gift To Post Toy and Doll Fund

'Sissy' Hawfield Wins 'Miss Santa Claus' Honor With Hoarded Pennies Donation; District Responds to Yule Cheer Call.

Anne Cary Hawfield is her real name. "Sissy" is her nickname. But yesterday, unofficially and for a short time only, she became "Miss Santa Claus."

For blonde, 3-year-old little Miss Hawfield was the first contributor to the 1936 Washington Post Toy and Doll Fund.

"Sissy" (her family calls her that, perhaps, because Anne Cary is a trifle long for her to remember) didn't really know that she had acquired a temporary new name. All she knew was that her father had told her that Santa Claus was going to need a great deal of help this year, if he were going to be able to visit every home in Washington.

And then Dr. Hawfield told her about The Post Toy and Doll Fund to help make Christmas happier for boys and girls less fortunate than herself.

So be-dimpled, blonde "Miss-Santa-Claus-for-a-day" decided that she could help. And she did. With 23 hoarded pennies, she became the first contributor to the 1936 fund.

Gives Hoarded Pennies.

"Sissy" didn't understand all the details of the fund: how The Post is collecting old and new toys, as well as money in all amounts, large and small; how the toys will be renovated and repainted (those that need renovating and repainting) by the District of Columbia playground department, under the supervision of Miss Sibil Baker; how the Washington Council of Social Agencies will take charge of the distribution of the toys, so that no Washington child will go giftless on Christmas.

But "Sissy" did know that her 23 pennies meant that the real Santa will visit one more Washington home this year, that might otherwise be missed. And, although she probably never will know just what boy or girl will benefit by her own generosity, some day she will realize—as The Post Fund hopes to be able to make everyone in Washington realize this year—just how much happiness and joy 23 pennies can bring.

The purpose of The Post's Toy and Doll Fund is to make as certain as possible that every boy and girl in Washington, on Christmas Day, has the opportunity to reflect the true Christmas spirit—that every boy and girl in Washington can really rejoice and be happy.

So, on this one day of the year when no child should know tears, the Fund wants to make sure that each one of the less fortunate youngsters in the District really has something—no matter how small—to rejoice and be happy about.

Toys, themselves—old and new—already have started to come in to The Post Building. One woman brought in a pair of old roller skates, and then returned a short time later with a brand new pair to supplement her first contribution. Another thoughtful Washingtonian brought in a big box, completely filled with a large assortment of toys and dolls and games.

Hundreds of other gifts have arrived and thousands more are needed. And many more pennies, in addition to those that came out of Anne Cary Hawfield's bank, are needed, too.

Contributions of cash, old toys and new toys, should be brought or sent to The Post Building, 1337 E street northwest.

It is true that this location may be many, many miles from the North Pole and Kris Kringle's home—but any Washingtonian who wants to know that old gentleman better has only to call at The Post, leave a card (in the form of a dollar, a quarter, a dime, a nickel, a penny, a toy or a doll) and go away feeling certain that he will send them the true Christmas spirit in return.

HAPPY RELIEF FROM PAINFUL BACKACHE

Caused by Tired Kidneys

Many of those gnawing, nagging, painful backaches people blame on colds or strains are often caused by tired kidneys—and may be relieved when treated in the right way.

The kidneys are Nature's chief way of taking excess acids and poisonous waste out of the blood. Most people pass about 3 pints a day or about 3 pounds of waste.

If the 15 miles of kidney tubes and filters don't work well, poisonous waste matter stays in the blood. These poisons may start nagging backaches, rheumatic pains, lumbago, leg pains, loss of pep and energy, getting up nights, swelling, puffiness under the eyes, headaches and dizziness.

Don't wait! Ask your druggist for Doan's Pills, used successfully by millions for over 40 years. They give happy relief and will help the 15 miles of kidney tubes flush out poisonous waste from the blood. Get Doan's Pills. (Adv.)

Investing Firm Work Admitted By NRA Aide

Hettinger Denies at Inquiry Investment Reports Came From Files.

By the Associated Press.

Acknowledging he worked for a private investment service at the same time he was an official of NRA, Albert J. Hettinger, of New York, denied before the Securities Commission yesterday that reports he made to the firm were based on NRA files.

Hettinger now is vice president of the General American Investors Co.

Questioned by James Austin, counsel in the commission's investigation of investment trusts, he said he served as economic expert for the NRA from August, 1933, to May, 1934, while retaining his association with the Investment Research Co., of Detroit.

Hettinger said 32 reports written while he was in Washington represented his deductions from newspaper reports.

One report which Austin quoted contained a suggestion that investment companies buy Gypsum stock. Hettinger said this was suggested intuitively on newspaper predictions the Government would embark on a huge building program.

He testified neither Hugh Johnson, the NRA administrator, nor other superiors were aware he was sending out reports, but that he "didn't think" he would have been embarrassed had any of the reports fallen into their hands.

He said he did not consider that he had been on leave of absence from his firm while with the NRA.

Postlude

By Ray C. B. Brown.

Gertrude Clarke Whittall Foundation presents the Stradivarius Quartet (Wolfe Wolfinsohn, Alfred Pochon, Marcel Dick and Ivan d'Archambeau) and Beryl Rubinstein, pianist, in a concert at the Library of Congress Wednesday night. Program: Passacaglia in C minor (Bach-Pochon), Sonata in D for violoncello and piano, Op. 102, No. 2; Quartet in D, Op. 18, No. 3 (Beethoven).

When Mrs. Gertrude Clarke Whittall placed in the custody of the Library of Congress the four Stradivari instruments known as the "Betts" violin, the "Castelbarco" violin, the "Cassavetti" viola and the "Castelbarco" violoncello, it was not with the intention that they should thereafter remain voiceless museum pieces. Last season they were brought forth for a singing occasion, and last evening, in the hands of the Stradivarius Quartet of New York, they started on a series of eight concerts which will be spaced at intervals until the end of January.

Washingtonians are fortunate in being neighbors of this "chest of viols" and able to hear their dulcet concord at home. Elsewhere in the world, an opportunity to listen to such a family group of strings would occur only when some chance brought together four musicians owning Strads. That the privilege is appreciated was evident in the attendance that filled the chamber music auditorium.

The sole novelty on the program was more than 200 years old, the C minor Passacaglia of Johann Sebastian Bach, and its newness was a matter of costume, for it appeared in the admirable transcription designed by Alfred Pochon. At its debut in this guise there was no diminishing of its stateliness and its inherent nobility. The transcribing has been excellently done with a fine sense of balance and proportion.

The D major sonata for violoncello and piano is one of the two that Beethoven composed in July and August of 1815 for Joseph Linke, a member of the Schuppanzigh Quartet. That it is not more often heard may be attributed to its lack of what has come to be called popular appeal. Its superficial aspect is somewhat dry and unamiable, but its speech is of the utmost interest, for it tells what was going on in Beethoven's mind as he was feeling his way toward freer expression.

Between this personalized music and the succeeding quartet the contrast was striking. The D major quartet, one of the set of six with which Beethoven introduced himself as a writer in this form, has a youthful confidence and a forthright manner. It posits no problem for solution, but goes its way with a blithe assurance.

France Plans 15 Battleships, 1,500 Planes

Five 35,000-Ton Fighting Craft, 10 Cruisers to Be Built by 1943.

By the Associated Press.

Paris, Dec. 2.—France tonight announced plans for a huge naval-building program as an answer to increased warship construction by Germany and Italy.

The minister of marine outlined his program to the chamber navy committee and said he would ask Parliament to make funds available as soon as the superior navy council completes study of the plan.

The construction plan calls for five 35,000-ton battleships, ten 10,000-ton cruisers by 1943 at an estimated cost of $572,000,000.

The keel of one of the larger battleships already has been laid and another will be put down shortly.

The 26,500-ton Strasbourg, the last of the previous batch of new battleships, will be launched December 5.

The navy minister recommended addition of 4,000 men to the fleet immediately.

At the same time Air Minister Pierre Cot told the chamber finance committee 1,300 new warplanes will be built in 1937 instead of the 1,085 planes previously contemplated.

He said France's air force "compares favorably" with those of other great powers.

Strike Committee Approves Truce

Cumberland, Md., Dec. 2 (AP).—The committee of 100, representing the strikers at the plant of the Celanese Corporation of America, approved today the agreement to settle the 20-day-old strike.

This approval was reported at the start of a mass meeting of the strikers to consider the agreement for ending the strike. Strike leaders expressed certainty that the agreement would be approved at the mass meeting.

If the agreement is ratified by the majority of the 9,000 striking workers, company officials planned to have the local plant in full operation by next Wednesday.

The agreement, it was understood, calls for an average increase of 12½ per cent in wages. The union demanded a flat 15 per cent increase when the strike started. The company offered originally an average increase of about 11 per cent.

Pending the action of the workers at the mass meeting, the details of the agreement were not made public.

Hitler Holds Decision In Nobel Peace Award

Berlin, Dec. 2 (AP).—Reichsfuehrer Adolf Hitler today reserved to himself the final decision as to whether Karl von Ossietzky, German Pacifist in disfavor with the Nazi government, may go to Oslo to receive his 1935 Nobel Peace award. Ossietzky was only recently released from a Nazi concentration camp.

A foreign office spokesman warned against taking for granted that Ossietzky would be permitted to make the trip. The foreign office was unable to say when Der Fuehrer would pass on the case.

Prof. Anderson Sails To Claim Nobel Prize

New York, Dec. 2 (AP).—Prof. Carl David Anderson, of the University of California, co-winner with Prof. V. G. Hess, of the Nobel prize for the advancement of science, sailed on the Queen Mary today to receive his share of the prize.

Viscount and Lady Astor and Lady Furness, sister of Mrs. Gloria Morgan Vanderbilt, also sailed.

Northern Va. Women Told of Benefits At Democrat Organization Meeting

Members Urged to Interest Selves in Community Work of P.-T. A.

The part Democratic women can play in progress of the Nation and their duties in their home States were outlined by Mrs. Emily Newell Blair at an organization meeting of women Democrats of northern Virginia in Warrenton, Va., yesterday.

The meeting was called by Mrs. Richard Strong, wife of Judge Strong, of Warrenton, and a business meeting was followed by a luncheon. The afternoon meeting was featured by the address of Mrs. Blair and greetings from other party leaders.

Delegates from Fauquier, Prince William, Fairfax, Loudoun, Frederick, Shenandoah, Culpeper, Madison, Page, Stafford, King George, Rappahannock, Clarke, Warren, Orange, Rockingham attended the meeting.

Discussion of the national and District of Columbia work of the United Daughters of the Confederacy took place at the conference of the organization at 1322 Vermont avenue yesterday. Mrs. Richard A. Allen, division president, who has recently returned from Texas, presided.

Every member of the family should play a part in community recreation plans, Mrs. Henry Grattan Doyle declared at a meeting of the Wheatley P.-T. A. last night in a program that also included music and Christmas carols.

Miss Ruth Sheldon, president of the District of Columbia Home Economics Association, called on representatives of all occupational groups to give a brief survey of her profession and of the work of the most prominent members at the dinner meeting in Wesley Hall last night.

Mrs. Paul Kaufman, president of Brown Alumnae Club of Washington, gave a report on the recent Brown Alumnae meeting at Alumnae Hall, Providence, R. I., at the meeting last night in the home of Miss Doris Nash in Chevy Chase. Mrs. Kaufman attended the meeting as representative of the Washington club.

Miss Elsie Hill, of the Woman's Party, sees an argument for equal rights in every happening, and even was able to link the Miss Mabel Duncan, cellist at a concert of the Cremona String Quartet for benefit of the District National Woman's Party in Alva Belmont House Tuesday evening with the campaign now being carried on by the Woman's Party for equal rights.

Miss Hill explained that Miss Duncan, a Scottish woman, who came to America since the World War, was denied in her childhood the opportunity to study the 'cello because her father considered playing of that instrument a man's vocation, and compelled her to play the piano. By happy accident, she obtained the opportunity to try playing the 'cello and finally gained her father's consent.

"If a woman is never allowed to try the 'cello, no one will ever know whether she has ability to play it. And it is the same for every occupation, profession and vocation in life," Miss Hill says.

Following the concert supper was served, Mrs. Karl W. Greene, chairman of arrangements, was assisted by Mrs. Lucy Cooper Shaw and Mathilde Bahar. Among who attended were:

Judge and Mrs. William E. Fort, Judge Albert Levitt, Mr. and Mrs. Theodore Coe, Mrs. Norman Underwood, Mrs. James Garvin Field, Miss Mary Dean Powell, Mrs. Charles Will Wright, with her dinner guests: Miss Margaret Lambie, Miss Lucy Alexander, and Miss Lottie Manross; Mr. and Mrs. Lucien Greathouse, with their guest, Mrs. Kenric Leighton; Mrs. Harvey W. Wiley, Mr. and Mrs. Berton Slocum, Miss Mary Denison Hope, Miss Patricia Collier, Mr. and Mrs. Frederick E. Brash, Mrs. Kenneth Mulford, and Mme. Mulford, Commander and Mrs. Colbert, Mr. Lau, Mrs. Grace Bailey, Mrs. Virginia Bolt, Mrs. Nina Allender, Mrs. Helena Hill Weed, and her daughter, Miss Mary Hill Weed.

Proceeds from the annual card party of St. Gertrude's Guild, to be held at Wardman Park Monday afternoon, will be used for the St. Gertrude's School of Arts and Crafts. Mrs Robert Whitney Imbrie, president, has arranged a program of music in addition to the card party.

Hundreds Slain As Rebels Again Bomb Madrid

Bodies Litter Streets of Capital After Worst Attack in Siege.

bombers, projectiles were dropped so near the American Embassy, just north of Madrid's main business sector, that windows in the building rattled.

The British protested directly to Gen Francisco Franco, commander of the Fascist forces against the "outrage" of bombing the civilian population. Their telegram was sent to the insurgent chief through diplomatic channels.

Five Fascist shells fell in the area between the Plaza de Colon and Lista street, a district which hitherto had been considered comparatively safe.

The shells crashed into a house directly opposite the British Embassy on Fernando el Santo street, filling the embassy gardens with bricks, splintered wood and clouds of dust. Another shell fell in Castellana street, a fourth on Lista street and the fifth on the corner of Lista and Serrano streets.

The raids came while Pablo Yague, commissar of food supplies, was telling the British M. P.'s that food shortages threatened the 1,300,000 inhabitants of the besieged capital.

The government entrenchments near the Princessa Bridge suffered the brunt of the second raid when nine bombers concentrated their fire on that sector.

On the Guadarrama front insurgents stormed San Augustin Hill near Escorial in an attempt to cut off Madrid from its forces in that area.

In ferocious fighting throughout the afternoon, the Fascists attacked Pozuelo Lasrozas, their artillery and trench mortar fire shaking the center of Madrid.

Government planes, whose pilots apparently could not sight the high-flying raiders, had to rely on bursts of antiaircraft shrapnel in the sky to locate their enemies. A guazy haze clouded most of the ships.

The Madrid defense junta was shaken up just before the raids, with the Communist, Mije, replaced as war commissar by the proletarian youth representative, Enrique Garcia. Col. Jose Miaja, however, retained his post as head of the defense junta.

A Scottish ambulance driver returning to Madrid with a load of wounded from the front said although the government casualties were heavy, their forces were still holding lines in the Casa de Campo along the bank of the Manzanares River.

Gustav Regler, German political commissar of the Second International Brigade of Antifascists, said the insurgents deliberately were sniping at Red Cross men and that it had become necessary to send tanks to protect stretcher bearers.

Evacuation of noncombatants continued, although the Scottish ambulance chief, Dr. Duncan Newbiggin, said his men had not been able to take old refugees from subway stations.

Sales Group Plans Banquet Saturday

The Washington Sales Representatives Association will hold its third annual banquet at the Washington Hotel, Saturday, at 7 p. m., it was announced yesterday by George Cook, president, who will preside at the banquet. This association is composed of food brokers and representatives of national food manufacturers and was organized three years ago to promote closer co-operation not only among the salesmen but with the buyers of food products.

The guest of honor will be Melvin C. Hazen, Commissioner of the District. The guest speaker will be Drake M. Hubertson, who has recently returned from England, where he made a thorough study of food distribution in that country. Prior to his investigation in England, he spent more than three years in Russia studying the same subject and is considered an international authority on food distribution.

According to Charles D. Wright, chairman of the entertainment committee, several vaudeville acts will be imported direct from New York for this occasion. Music will be furnished by Sydney's Mayflower orchestra under the direction of Moe Baer. Wright also stated that no expense has been spared to furnish the best available entertainers.

Approximately 300 reservations have been made to date. These include not only members of the Washington Sales Representatives Association, but many of the country's prominent executives of national food manufacturers.

John Ringling, CircusMagnate, Is Dead in N. Y.

Washington Friends Reveal Showman Was Planning to Visit Here.

John Ringling, who rose from a Wisconsin farm boy to circus tycoon beloved alike by Presidents and burley canvasmen, died in New York yesterday of bronchial pneumonia. On the eve of visiting again the city that was one of his favorites—Washington.

Deeply affected by the death of the last of the five Ringling brothers, who cashed a children's "pin show" into a portable world of entertainment, two close friends yesterday revealed he was about to come here en route to his winter home in Sarasota, Fla.

They are Melvin D. Hildreth, local attorney and president of the Circus Fans Association, and Dr. William M. Mann, director of the National Zoological Park. In New York ten days ago, the 70-year-old president of Ringling Bros.-Barnum & Bailey Circus told Hildreth he was about to leave for Sarasota, but planned to come to Washington next month for the opening of the zoo's new elephant house.

Philanthropy Recalled.

He called it, in the tanbark and canvas idiom, the "bull house."

Neither Hildreth nor Dr. Mann had any conventional eulogies for Ringling. Rather, they recalled his generosity and his many human qualities, his almost uncanny memory for names and his unceasing philanthropies.

The circus fans' leader said that years ago the "Sunday school showman," a nickname gained early in John Ringling's career as a result of the pains he took to please the children, offered his vast art collection to the Government. It was rejected because the priceless works could not be housed for exhibition.

Though "the greatest show on earth" thrives on publicity, its head shunned the limelight. It may come as a surprise to many that he was one of the world's most important collectors of fine paintings.

When failure attended his plans to give his art to the American people, he built the $2,500,000 John and Mabel Ringling (his first wife) Museum in Sarasota and there installed America's greatest private collection of Rubens' works and representative paintings by Rembrandt, Titian, Murillo, Velasquez, Raphael and other old masters.

Among his stanchest admirers were Presidents Taft, Harding and Coolidge. Ringling made frequent trips to Washington until he retired from active duties as route man for the circus. He often visited the Library of Congress to pore over that institution's incunabula—books printed before the year 1500.

John Ringling was the sixth of seven sons born to a McGregor, Iowa, harness maker, an immigrant from Germany named Rungeling. As small boys the brothers became infected with the idea of a grand circus.

Started as "Pin Show."

Their "pin shows" evolved into a troupe of traveling musicians. In 1884, they started their circus, which went in wagons from village to village. They gradually grew bigger, until by the turn of the century they needed more than 40 double-length railroad cars to transport their circus.

The youngest and eldest of the seven brothers dropped out of the partnership early in the Ringling saga, leaving Alf T., Al, John, Otto and Charles to carry on.

Eventually Ringling Bros. bought out their most important rival, the Barnum & Bailey show. Charles, the last of the brothers to die before John, passed away in 1919.

John Ringling, married twice, leaves no children. His first wife was Mabel Burton Ringling, who died in 1929. In December, 1930, he married Mrs. Emily Haag Buck, but this union was dissolved by divorce last July.

At his bedside when he died at 2:45 a. m. yesterday in his Park avenue apartment, were his sister, Mrs. Ida Ringling North; a nephew, John Ringling North; Frank Hennessey, a life-long friend; Dr. Maurice Costello, his physician, and two nurses and family servants.

Cleveland, Dec. 2 (AP).—The will of the late O. P. Van Sweringen, railroad magnate, filed today for probate, disposed of personal property appraised at $600,000 and an interest in two residences jointly appraised at $100,000.

The estate was left in trust to J. J. Anzalone, an official in one of the Van Sweringen companies; John P. Murphy, legal adviser to O. P. and his late brother, Mantis J., and John D. Fackler, attorney specializing in real estate.

Van Sweringen died of a heart attack aboard a train at Hoboken, N. J., November 23.

The famous brothers estimated their joint worth in 1929 at approximately $100,000,000.

Rep. Glover H. Cary Critically Ill in Ohio

Cincinnati, Dec. 2 (AP).—Representative Glover H. Cary (Democrat), of the Second Kentucky Congressional District was critically ill in Bethesda Hospital today after a blood transfusion.

Dr. George Rockwell, physician who operated on Cary two weeks ago for complications that developed from pneumonia last winter, said the Congressman had rallied somewhat since being given the transfusion.

Quints' Nurse Rests.

North Bay, Ontario, Dec. 2 (AP). The Dionne quintuplets' nurse, Miss Yvonne Leroux, is taking a holiday. Dr. A. R. Dafoe announced today that Miss Leroux had been granted leave from the Dafoe Hospital staff for an indefinite period.

Typhoon Batters Philippine Coast

Manila, Dec. 2 (AP).—A typhoon battered the Philippine east coast and flattened temporary buildings in Manila tonight, with its full intensity yet to be felt.

Striking the coast 100 miles southwest of here, the storm sent huge waves against the Tayabas province shore and whirled inland on a 60-mile-an-hour wind.

Weather observers said the storm center would strike close to Manila if it held to its indicated course.

Only six weeks ago a fierce typhoon swept across Tayabas and other Luzon Island provinces.

How Are You Feeling Today?

ARE you nervous . . . weak . . . rundown? Are you able to do your housework as easily as you used to? Does the world look drab and dull? Do you feel cross . . . irritable . . . blue? Do you cry for no good reason? Do you lie down often?

Don't be discouraged. Perhaps all you need to put you on your feet once more is that good old reliable medicine—Lydia E. Pinkham's Compound. Made from Mother Nature's own roots and herbs, it has helped four generations of American women to feel better and look better. It MUST be good when so many praise it. Why don't you get a bottle today? All druggists sell it.

"It Keeps Me Feeling Good and Looking Young" says Mrs. Clara D. Ambrose of 105 West Poplar Avenue Wildwood, N. J.
"I started taking your Vegetable Compound when my first baby was born, 19 years ago. I felt terribly sick and nervous and my back ached all the time. I took five bottles then and since then I usually take it Spring and Fall. I am now 36 years old. I have a daughter 19 and a boy 17, and I am often taken for their sister when I go walking with them."

"I Wanted To Be By Myself"
says Mrs. Mildred Comstock of Box 375, Tonkawa, Oklahoma.
"At the Change I thought I was losing my mind. I had indigestion from a nervous stomach, terrible headaches, I lost weight and was blue and discouraged. My sister-in-law told me to take your Vegetable Compound. I took four bottles and I also followed your fine advice in your little book on health. Now I can do all my work and I am gaining every day."

Ask Your Neighbors About This Medicine

"I Had Trouble Every Month Until I Took Your Wonderful Medicine" says Miss Ella Nelson of 445 Nicollet Avenue, North Mankato, Minnesota.
"Before I took the Vegetable Compound I was irregular, had terrible sick headaches, felt tired and had no pep. I felt mean and everything used to bother me so. I was so nervous that I could hardly work. So many people recommended Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound that I got a bottle. It did me so much good that I kept on. Now I am much better, do not have the pains and am able to work. I am glad to tell other girls and women how good it is."

Church Unit Gathers Here In Next Week

Mrs. Harper Sibley Plans Entertainment for Several Guests.

Women's Council Heads to Enjoy Busy Round During D. C. Stay.

Teas, luncheons and dinner parties, as well as executive meetings will occupy the time of officers of the National Council of Federated Church Women while they are in Washington next week.

Mrs. Eugene V. Pugh, president of the Women's Council of the Washington Federation of Churches, will entertain at a tea in their honor Monday afternoon as the opening function of their visit. It will be from 4 to 6 o'clock at her home, Woodacre, in Edgemoor, Bethesda.

Prominent women from all parts of the United States will be here for the meeting, the mid-year session of the board of the national council. Mrs. Harper W. Sibley, who is a national vice president, will open her home for the sessions and will also have several of the members as her guests. She will entertain the president, Mrs. J. N. McEachern, of Atlanta, Ga., an aunt of Mrs. William D. Owens, of this city, the recording secretary, Mrs. Owens, was in Atlanta for the Thanksgiving holidays. Mrs. James T. Ferguson, executive vice president, and Mrs. Ralph S. Latshaw, a department chairman, who will be here from Kansas City, also will be guests of Mrs. Sibley.

Mrs. Pugh will have at her home, Mrs. Jesse M. Bader, a vice president of the national council and wife of Dr. Bader, chairman of the preaching mission, and Mrs. John Trent, who is coming from New Rochelle, N. Y.

Others who will have members of the board as guests at their homes will be Mrs. T. E. Robertson and Mrs. W. O. Tufts.

Mrs. Sibley, although she will go to New York on Tuesday to speak with the Preaching Mission, will return on Wednesday and, each day of the sessions at her home, the guests will be entertained at a buffet luncheon at noon.

The vice presidents of the Woman's Council of the Washington Federation will receive with Mrs. Pugh at her tea Monday. They include Mrs. George A. Ross, Mrs. H. C. Briscoe, Mrs. F. E. Edington, Mrs. Joy Elmer Morgan and Mrs. Tufts.

To Entertain Guests Here for Meeting

Hessler Studio.

MRS. HARPER SIBLEY,

wife of the president of the United States Chamber of Commerce and a vice president of the National Council of Federated Church Women, will have several members of the executive board of the council as guests next week during the mid-year session of the national officers in Washington. The Sibleys are occupying a house at 2412 Massachusetts avenue for the winter

Blisses to Fete Archeologists At Home Dec. 9

The former United States Ambassador to Argentina and Mrs. Robert Woods Bliss will be hosts on the occasion of the 191st meeting of the Archaeological Society of Washington, of which Mr. and Mrs. Bliss are life members. Invitations have been issued for 3 o'clock Wednesday afternoon, December 9, when they will receive the members at their home, Dumbarton Oaks.

Mr. Wade H. Ellis, president of the society, will introduce the guest of honor, Dr. Alfred V. Kidder, of Beverly Farms, Mass., chairman of the division of historical research of the Carnegie Institution of Washington, who will speak on "Lights and Shadows of an Archaeologist's Life."

Dr. Kidder, accompanied by Mrs. Kidder, soon will return to Guatemala City to resume direction of excavations in the Guatemalan Highlands, where he has made unprecedented discoveries in what was once a civic and religious center of an ancient Maya community. In course of excavating a stucco-covered structure of pyramidal form, he found three superimposed pyramids and several tombs which contained a remarkable collection, including pottery and jade ornaments. The Minister of Guatemala and Senora de Recinos will be invited as guests for the occasion on Wednesday.

Dr. Kidder gave a lecture on Mayan explorations in 1933 for the society at the home of Mrs. Anne Archbold.

January Chosen As Wedding Date

Miss Southworth to Marry Dr. Carter at Church of Epiphany.

Mrs. Grace Thyson Southworth has announced the engagement of her daughter, Miss Blanche Pauline Southworth, to Dr. Albert Hayden Carter, son of Dr. and Mrs. Albert A. Carter, of Malden, Mass.

Miss Southworth has chosen January 2 as the date for her wedding which will take place in the Church of the Epiphany. Yesterday, with Miss Kate Harrison, she left for Norfolk, where they will bid bon voyage to Miss Southworth's uncle, Commander Lee C. Thyson, who is sailing today on the transport Henderson for China.

Dr. Carter is a graduate of Dartmouth and is now engaged in practice in Hingham, Mass.

New Yorkers Plan Dance Party Dec. 12

State Society Announces Prizes for Feature Number.

A Christmas party and a rainbow dance are two social events on the calendar for this and next Saturday.

The west ballroom of the Shoreham Hotel on December 12 will be the scene of the Christmas dance being sponsored by the New York State Society. A prize waltz will be a feature of the program.

This Saturday in the Cafe de la Crystallerie at the Broadmoor, the District of Columbia chapter of the Rainbow Division Veterans will give their annual Rainbow dance.

Tonight the California State Society plans to open its winter season with a football frolic in the Willard Room at the Willard Hotel. Dancing and bridge will be from 9 to 1, with music by the California Statesmen.

Organ Music Arranged For St. Gertrude Party

Mrs. Robert Whitney Imbrie, president of St. Gertrude's Guild, has arranged for a program of organ music at the card party for the benefit of St. Gertrude's School of Arts and Crafts on Monday afternoon, December 7, at Wardman Park Hotel.

Mrs. James Edward Duke, chairman of the committee, is assisted by Mrs. Augustus E. Giegengack.

THE MERRY WHIRL by MARYLYN

Moving day is and has been here for many of us. The Victor Alfaros have taken a large house 'way out on Sixteenth street, near the Reservoir, where they will remain for a year at least. It is surrounded by lots of ground, and is just the place for Dr. and Mme. Alfaro and their family. Speaking of the family, Amelita and her husband, Frank Weller, are quite well settled in their apartment out in Chevy Chase. Ivan is pleasantly hard at work down in Argentina with the prospect of three years there before he can come home for even the shortest of visits. Rogelio is skimming along through his last year at Georgetown and little (?) Yolande is impatiently waiting for the day when she can take her place in the social whirl.

* * * *

And more moving. Zoe and Ernest Schlatter are about to desert their house down in Alexandria. They have taken an apartment on California street. Zoe's sister, Olga Patterson, and her father, the Cuban Ambassador, are simply delighted at the new nearness. No more of those long, hours-beforehand-planned trips down the river. Now, all one has to do is to whip around the corner and there they are!

One of the best dancers in the Capital, Stig Unger, of the Swedish Legation, is leaving Saturday for his homeland. Christmas is all very well here in town, but it is even nicer "at home" with his parents and host of friends. However, it will be many moons before Stig will be returning to these parts. While he was telling us about his plans, sketching a happy and glowing picture, Lilita Dawson stood it for a time and had us practically weeping tears of sympathy for her brother, Allan, who will be on the high seas sailing back to his post at the American Embassy in Rio, just when Santa Claus is making his rounds.

Wonder what the Rudolf Smits think now that Washington has kicked over its traces and had the first snow of the season? Here, only last week, they hurried back from Cleveland all because that fair city was indulging in bit of snow and blow, and what are they greeted by but more of it?

Howser-Davis Marriage Set

Wedding to Be Celebrated Tomorrow at 4:30 at Washington Club.

Miss Mary Louise Howser, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Harry Rutledge Howser, whose engagement was announced several weeks ago to Dr. Harry Porter Davis, son of the late Mr. and Mrs. David Melling Davis, will be married tomorrow afternoon at 4:30 at the Washington Club.

The bride's only attendant will be her sister, Miss Elizabeth Gardner Howser, and Mr. John E. Reeside will be best man. A small reception at the club will follow the ceremony. Owing to illness of the bride's father, only relatives and close friends will attend the wedding.

Margaret Tilson Is Engaged to Wed Mr. Bruce Shafer

Of interest to Washington is the engagement of Miss Margaret Tilson, daughter of former Representative and Mrs. John Q. Tilson, to Mr. Bruce Shafer, of San Francisco. The engagement was recently announced by her parents, who are now residing at their home in New Haven, Conn.

Miss Tilson lived in Washington when her father was minority leader of the House during the Administration of President Hoover. She attended the Fontaine School in Cannes, France, and was graduated from Smith College in 1934. The wedding will take place next summer.

Bohns Returns to City.

Dr. and Mrs. Frank Bohn have reopened their apartment in the Wardman Park Hotel for the winter season. Mrs. Bohn is the former Grace Roper, daughter of the Secretary of Commerce and Mrs. Daniel C. Roper.

Hectic Round of Parties Looms for D. C. Society

Dinners and Cocktail Affairs Give Evidence of Surprising Seasonal Peak in Next Few Weeks Here.

By Dudley Harmon.

The life hectic which characterizes Washington society in the "season" shows signs of becoming even more so during the next few weeks, with dinners and cocktail parties piling up in quick succession.

The Polish Ambassador and Countess Potocka shortly will issue invitations for a dinner to take place January 6 at the embassy. Additional guests will be invited in afterwards for music. This will be the first large party at which the ambassador and his charming Peruvian wife will have entertained since their arrival in this country.

Lady Marler, wife of the Canadian Minister, will be guest of honor at a tea to be given Monday afternoon by Mrs. William R. Castle, wife of the former Undersecretary of State. Among the smaller and less formal parties being planned within the next few days is a dinner which the Attache of the Brazilian Embassy and Mme. Lobo are having tomorrow evening. Another member of the embassy staff, Mr. J. E. de Sousa Freitas, Second Secretary, with Mme. de Sousa Freitas, entertained a small group of friends at a cocktail party yesterday afternoon at their home on Forty-fourth place.

The evening of January 9—to look ahead a bit—has been selected by Miss Audrey Campbell as the date of a dance at the Sulgrave Club. Her aunt, Mrs. Joseph Leiter, will entertain at a dinner at her home on Dupont Circle before the ball.

The only Cabinet debutante of the season, Miss Mary Senate Howes, who will be introduced to society on December 26, will be guest of honor at a luncheon to be given Saturday by Miss Betty Galt, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Dwight Galt. Yesterday Miss Howes was honored at a luncheon given at the Shoreham by Miss Laura Johnson, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. William Bridges Johnson.

Another debutante, Miss Alice Noel Tuckerman, returned yesterday with her mother, Mrs. Walter R. Tuckerman, from Baltimore, where they attended a tea given by Mrs. Tunstall-Smith, a sister of Lord Fairfax, for Miss Tuckerman and Miss Anne Jackson, a Baltimore debutante. Mrs. Tuckerman poured at the tea and later attended a dinner given for her at the Mount Vernon Club.

Miss Carlile Porter, daughter of Brig. Gen. and Mrs. David D. Porter, and Miss Eleanor Flood, of Washington, also were guests at the tea. Miss Porter made her debut at a reception at the home of her parents shortly before Thanksgiving.

Two other debutantes will be honor guests at a luncheon to be given today by Mrs. Harry R. Fulton in honor of her daughter, Miss Carrie Roper Fulton, and Miss Mary McKim Crane, daughter of Col. and Mrs. John A. Crane. The luncheon will be held at the Cosmos Club.

The guests will include Miss Lillian Willetts, Miss Mary Maxon, Miss Virginia Price, Miss Eleanor Fitts, Mrs. James A. Gaston, Mrs. Crane, Mrs. Guy O. Dove, Mrs. Numa Montet, Mrs. Earl Holman, Mrs. Marion R. Wilkes, Mrs. William E. Forbes, Mrs. Geoffrey Creyke, Mrs. Arthur Houghton, Mrs. LaNoe Matta, Mrs. Charles Carroll, Mrs. David W. Hauseman, Mrs. William Laird Dunlop, Mrs. Jerome DuCrest, Mrs. Harold Meadow, Mrs. Thomas J. Burke and Mrs. William Foster.

Eliots Have Left On Trip to Midwest.

The General Counsel of the Social Security Board and Mrs. Thomas Eliot, who have left for a trip to the Middle West, will return to Washington shortly after Christmas.

Brig. Gen. Robert C. Van Vliet, U. S. A., retired, has come to the Martinique from Shrewsbury, N. J., to spend a month before going to Florida for the winter season.

The Misses Anne and Aletha Harcourt are spending a few days in New York City.

Society Notes

The Ambassador of Belgium, Count van der Straten Ponthoz, is expected to return today from New York, where he stayed at the Ritz-Carlton.

The Ambassador and Countess van der Straten Ponthoz will entertain at a dinner at the embassy Tuesday, December 15.

Mr. John Cudahy, United States Ambassador to Poland, sailed yesterday from New York on the Queen Mary to return to his post. Lord and Lady Astor, who have been visiting in this country and in Bermuda, sailed on the same ship.

The Third Secretary of the French Embassy and Mme. Saint will leave Sunday for a trip of several days in Charleston, S. C. They will be accompanied by the latter's brother-in-law and sister, Senor and Senora de Tagil, of Santiago, Chile.

From Charleston, Senor and Senora de Tagil will go to Florida and Havana before sailing for Chile from Panama.

The Attache of the Polish Embassy, Mr. Michal Budny, will leave Saturday for a two weeks' motor trip to Florida.

Mrs. Anne Archbold returned to her residence on Reservoir road last evening after a brief stay in New York. The engagement of her son, Mr. John Dana Archbold, to Miss Elizabeth Brown, of Rye, N. Y., was announced last week-end.

Mme. Claude Clarac, who returned from New York with Miss Barbara Wright, is spending the week-end at the home of Mrs. Hamilton Wright and her daughters.

Mme. Clarac has recently arrived from Persia, where her husband, M. Claude Clarac, is First Secretary to the French Legation in Teheran.

Mrs. Howard LeRoy has gone to New Rochelle to visit Judge and Mrs. Walter Otto. Judge Otto is former Mayor of New Rochelle.

Mrs. Richard Buchanan and Mrs. Gerald Linke have returned to their home in Bancroft place from Atlantic City, where they spent the Thanksgiving holidays.

Dr. and Mrs. Lloyd Parker Shippen have issued invitations for a tea on Sunday, December 6, from 4 to 7 o'clock, in honor of Miss Louise Fairfax, of Baltimore, whose engagement to Mrs. Shippen's nephew, Mr. W. Hall Harris 3d, also of Baltimore, has just been announced.

MARY HAWORTH'S MAIL

Man Who Is Introduced by One Girl to Another Tries to Sever Friendship While Courting Both.

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: Three months ago I met a man through a mutual girl friend. He liked me from the first. I didn't see him again for about a month after the first meeting and then he called on me and told me the other girl was no special friend of his and that he had been going around with her only until he could meet someone he really liked. Furthermore, he said he didn't want me to be friends with her.

• • • •

Then he started coming to see me, although he never took me out any place, nor did he so much as send me a card on my birthday or even wish me a happy birthday. He said he wasn't seeing the other girl any more; that he had told her to stay out of his sight because he didn't care to see her any more.

• • • •

A short time ago this girl came to see me and tried to persuade me to go with her to her cousin's house. I refused to go, but later learned that the man was waiting to take her. A few evenings later she telephoned me and after a short conversation she ended by saying that this man was waiting to take her home. I saw him later that same evening and he said nothing about having seen her.

• • • •

Now this man claims to love me and has almost asked me to marry him. But I cannot understand him. As I say, he never asks me to go out any place. He just comes to call. But during the last week he hasn't even been to see me, and I did seek him out once. What I want to know is this: Should I continue to see him, or should I let him go? I must admit I really love him, and I am just about crazy over the whole situation.

• • • •

Do you suppose he cares more for the other girl than he does for me? Of course, he says he doesn't love her, but it seems to me he must care something for her or he wouldn't be seeing her on the sly. What must I do? Please advise me. ELLEN V.

Cheap Two-Timer.

DEAR ELLEN V.: Your masculine acquaintance seems to be more of a skunk than a man. He seems to be playing a very low variety of two-timing game, and it would appear that such virtues as honor and truthfulness are unknown to him. I have no doubt he is deceiving the other girl, but I believe he is practicing the greatest deception on you. It seems plain that his intentions toward you are completely dishonorable and anything but complimentary. My advice to you is to have nothing more to do with him.

• • • •

If he has mentioned his meetings with you to the other girl at all, he has probably taken great pains to give the impression that you are running after him. His only purpose in trying to break off your friendship with the other girl, it would seem, was to prevent both of you from finding him out in his cheap double-dealing. His intelligence, if any, seems to be of the same low order as his principles, or lack of them.

• • • •

The more deeply involved you get with a rotter, the more painfully you are bound to be hurt. So you should offer up thanks to Providence that you have found out just what sort of creature he is, in time to spare yourself further humiliation and exploitation. It might be a good idea to try to re-establish your friendship with the girl, and make what amends you can for having dropped her at this cad's suggestion. M. H.

Problem of Alcoholism.

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I am 31 years old and have been married for ten years to a man who is 11 years my senior. For seven years my life was a hell on earth. He was continuously drunk and I was supported by different charitable organizations. Finally I left him. After one year's separation I was taken ill and had to have an operation. As I did not expect to survive the operation, I sent for him.

• • • •

He said if I would get well he would be a different man. Well, he kept his promise. For two years he changed and was a wonderful husband. He saved his money, bought me beautiful furniture and we lived very comfortably in a grand five-room apartment, where we are living today.

• • • •

One month ago, for no apparent reason, he went back to drinking. He is drunk every night and neglects his business. Every morning he is sick at his stomach and he claims liquor alone helps him. I am working now—I have to in order to live. Shall I give him up and leave our 8-year-old daughter with him? Or shall I stay and bear the situation for her sake? He is a grand person when sober and good at heart. I have no relatives to go to. Thanking you for any light you can throw on my problem, I remain,

HELPLESS WIFE.

The Thing to Do.

DEAR HELPLESS WIFE: The income from your earnings is probably not sufficient to maintain a 5-room apartment indefinitely. And judging from your past experience, your husband ceases to be a dependable provider once he starts drinking. Therefore, you cannot risk becoming dependent primarily on his potential earnings to maintain the present set-up. And it would be downright inhumane, it seems to me, to leave your daughter to her father's irresponsible guardianship if he has indeed given himself over once more to continuous heavy drinking.

• • • •

It seems to me the only common sense way to deal with the situation is to tell your husband, quite quietly and kindly, but firmly, that in view of his lapse you have no choice but to leave him again and take your daughter with you. Find a one-room apartment or a couple of unfurnished light housekeeping rooms that your own earnings can pay for, and furnish with a few necessary articles taken from your larger apartment. You may leave the remainder for your husband to dispose of, as he chooses. If you cannot make arrangements for having your daughter adequately chaperoned during your absence at work, place her in a convent or boarding school in the city, and have her with you for week-ends. Such an arrangement, which leaves much to be desired from both the parent's and the child's point of view, is still to be preferred to having the child grow up in an atmosphere of complete insecurity, irregularity and heartbreak.

• • • •

If your husband sees that you mean business, he may pull himself together once more. If he doesn't, that is all the more proof that it is high time you assumed full responsibility for your own and your daughter's future. You are fortunate, indeed, to have a job. It affords an all-important toe-hold at this time. If you wish to know what your legal rights are under the circumstances, consult Miss Beatrice Clephane, of the Legal Aid Bureau, 1010 Vermont avenue northwest. Make an appointment by telephoning National 8674.

Pink Gowns and Feminine Accessories Way to Masculine Heart, Says Designer

Miss Beulah Spilsbury Advises Color for Summer Styles.

By Malvina Lindsay.

ANY DISCUSSION of feminine style (at least so far as this interviewer is concerned) always gets round to the inevitable question, "Just what do men prefer?" And the answer invariably comes, "Something dark, simple and sophisticated."

Consequently, the reply made to this hoary enigma by Miss Beulah Spilsbury, designer, was disconcerting.

"Pink!" said Miss Spilsbury emphatically.

Not pink! It was impossible! Here, had not all of us since the beginning of the Simpson era been heroically stifling our primitive urges for red and green dresses and even more heroically ripping the frilly white collars off our black dresses and venturing forth in the stark simplicity that the King of England is said to admire? No, surely, not pink!

"Yes, pink," insisted Miss Spilsbury firmly. "But——"

"You were speaking of 'pink,'" we interrupted.

Pink Is Feminine.

"As to pink," continued Miss Spilsbury, who was looking very sophisticated herself in a white dressing gown, "it is this way: Men simply adore pink. Contrary to general opinion they prefer it to blue, which is a cold color. They always associate pink with femininity, fragility, romance. A woman would do well to wear pink at night—especially if she wants a man to propose. And a bride in a pink gingham house dress easily can make her husband forget the soggy biscuits. But—on the other hand, pink is not the color for the street or the office. Those are the places where men admire tailored correctness in women."

We breathed easily. After all, our remodeling on our black dresses was not in vain. However, our relief was short-lived.

"While men react pleasantly to simple dresses in offices," continued Miss Spilsbury, "they adore little touches of femininity such as lingerie collars or accessories. Unless a woman can wear extremely well a starkly simple dress, she would do well to add some softening touches."

Color for Summer.

After that, it seemed there was nothing to do but to turn over a new leaf and look toward the summer wardrobe. Of that, Miss Spilsbury could speak with authority. She had just been in New York buying bolts of goods and having some of her own designs manufactured for the Donnelly Garment Co. of Kansas City, which annually outfits millions of American housewives and office workers. Started 20 years ago by its present owner, Mrs. James A. Reed, the wife of the former Senator, it was branched out from the making of aprons to the manufacture of all forms of daytime clothes. As head of the design department of the company, it is Miss Spilbury's goal to see that the woman with an average purse looks as much as possible like the casual, wind-blown girls in the fashion magazines.

If you want to be on the safe side for summer, she advises, prepare to wear plenty of bright colors, prints with designs "so big they will appall you" and a lot of sheer fabrics, such as dotted Swiss, voiles and crisp batistes. Moreover, it's to be a very feminine spring nad summer so far as clothes are concerned.

"The cycle of femininity will continue," prophesied Miss Spilsbury. "It's going to be one of the biggest lace and embroidery seasons we've had. Our emergence from the depression will manifest itself in a riot of color in clothes. Prints will be more popular than ever and will have enormous designs. But don't let that worry you if you're not as slim as you used to be. The print designs and colors are so beautifully blended that anyone can wear them."

Prints for Sports.

Prints even are going into the classic sports style in a big way, says Miss Spilsbury. In fact, they are going to appear on almost every occasion. And the princess silhouette will remain, she promises.

"Women like it," said Miss Spilsbury, "because it gives slimness at the waist. And it can always be balanced with wide sleeves and full skirts. Classic lines with interesting sleeve treatments are generally becoming to women."

Of the employed woman who would achieve smartness by simple means Miss Spilsbury has this to say:

"Any businesswoman is an idiot to have very many clothes. All she needs is one costume for each type of activity. She should buy basically good garments and she should look well to line and fabric. Above all, she should plan her wardrobe as a whole, on a five-year plan, if necessary, and never, never buy a 'darling little dress' that doesn't fit in, merely because she is unable to withstand it."

"Is the old copybook maxim true that a woman really doesn't need money to dress well?" Miss Spilsbury was asked.

"Certainly!" came the answer. "But—she must have time, brains and restraint."

MISS BEULAH SPILSBURY, designer, advises business women seeking smartness to have few costumes and to plan their wardrobes on a long-term basis.

Today's HEALTH TALK

By Dr. Irving S. Cutter.

An Avoidable Pestilence —Smallpox.

The pages of history are replete with tales of the horrors of epidemic disease. No one of us would be willing to step into the shoes of our seventeenth century ancestors and face bubonic plague, smallpox, or Asiatic cholera. Each of these diseases occurred periodically and literally decimated the population. In the presence of one of these widespread scourges business was paralyzed sometimes for months, even for years.

With the growth of knowledge, however, came a better understanding of the sciences of health and medicine. We may say with full justice that advances in the field of sanitation are more responsible for the progress of commerce and trade than all the professors of economics put together. Let plague or smallpox attack 100,000 people in New York City, and spread at the rate of several thousand daily, and industry would be at a standsill.

Relation to Cowpox.

The situation that presented itself in Montreal in 1885 can be duplicated anywhere in the world if vaccination is neglected. In that year 3,164 persons died of smallpox and tens of thousands were left with the scars of battle.

Many years ago Edward Jenner, a country doctor practicing in Gloucestershire, listened and heeded. He decided to test the popular rumor that dairy maids who had contracted cowpox were immune to smallpox. A lad by the name of James Phipps volunteered for the experiment and went through the typical vaccination illness—soreness of the arm wtih a slight scar remaining. A few weeks later the boy was exposed to active cases of smallpox, virulent in type, and failed to develop the disease.

Jenner repeated the experiment on numerous individuals thereafter —all with the same result. Thus the boon of vaccination was given to a scourged world. It has been estimated that in the eighteenth century 60,000,000 deaths resulted from smallpox alone and many who survived were disfigured—some almost beyond recognition. "Rare" Ben Jonson called it "an envious and foul disease" and the historian, Macauley, termed it "the most terrible of all the ministers of death."

Highly Contagious.

What is the disease? While the cause is not known it is assumed to be one of the filterable viruses of which we have heard so much. It can be communicated by contact with an afflicted patient and is highly contagious. There is usually an intense headache, sore throat, backache, and then within a few days the characteristic eruption appears on the body.

Jenner's book on vaccination was published in 1798, giving notice to the world that means were at hand which, if taken advantage of, would stamp out the disease. The reason we still have it is because every one is not vaccinated. Were the world population to be thus immunized there would be no soil upon which it could grow. It would be starved into extinction.

Child Who Runs To His Mother Needs Firmness

Parent Errs in Permitting Young to Share Her Bed at Night.

By Alice Clarissa Richmond.

MARY had a habit of crawling into her mother's bed at night. She had her own room and bed, but if she woke up during the night, or for any reason found herself unable to sleep, she climbed out and pattered in to her mother, who never sent her back, but moved over to give the child room to curl up beside her.

An occasional occurrence of this kind cannot be harmful. Everyone knows the terror of waking from a nightmare and wishing for a human contact to break the spell of the dream and restore the normal atmosphere of reality. Children are often even more haunted by dream terrors than adults.

But if crawling into mother's bed becomes frequent, it should be stopped. It very easily becomes a habit, and the habit may be a symptom of the child's whole life pattern.

What if the child has a nightmare every night or two, or is frightened when it wakes in the dark? If it has nightmares so often or is in the habit of not sleeping the night through, the chances are either that it needs to be taken to the doctor or that it is unconsciously bringing on its nightmares or wakefulness.

First it should be thoroughly examined by a doctor. Possibly a change of diet or routine is all that is necessary to make the child sleep soundly. If no physical cause for the trouble is found, the mother will have to be hard hearted and refuse to act as refuge.

She can take the child back to its room, turn on the light, smoothe out the bed and tuck the child in again for the night, without any display of emotion.

A WOMAN'S NEW YORK

By Alice Hughes

New York, Dec. 2.

WHEN Oscar of the Waldorf—that benign and rotund Oscar Tschirky who has been publicized for many years into the Nation's No. 1 Maitre d'Hotel—is finally transplanted from the Hotel Militant to the Hotel Triumphant I don't know what on earth we newspaper people are going to do for copy about food and its serving. He's our arbiter elegantiorum on all such matters—and when a worried hostess wants to know whether to throw an artichoke with a half-Nelson or a flying tackle she trots to the phone and calls Oscar.

ALICE HUGHES.

In addition to presiding majestically over the internal workings of the Waldorf-Astoria, the old boy is always on his legs somewhere making a speech about grub and cookery. The other day, passing through that famed inn, I heard the familiar voice, and there was good old Oscar addressing a group of 200 eager Brooklyn ladies interested in the use of herbs on the dinner table. And Oscar told 'em, and I listened in.

Oscar began by launching a headlong attack on cocktail drinking as the great modern foe of good home cooking. His thesis was that this sinful practice kept young girls out of the kitchen, where they should be learning to shake up a meal. He denounced that New York curse, "the delicatessen dinner," consisting of liverwurst and canned goods snatched at the corner store and slammed on the table in nine minutes or less. Then, considering his audience, he said some nice, soothing things about the use of yarbs. I heard all sorts of half-forgotten names—chervil, tarragon, thyme, marjorem, basil and the rest. And as Oscar spoke his honeyed words the good ladies beamed on him, their herb-love growing by the moment, and I began to wonder how in the dickens we could ever do without Oscar!

GIRL ABOUT TOWN — The marriage of night-club-singing Frances Maddux to a Washington gentleman didn't slow her career an iota, or jot. She's warbling now at the very nice La Rue's on Park avenue—and if you want to assault some delicious viands when you're in town, try that place. It's at Fifty-ninth street . . .

When I read about that St. Louis man who has had 173 operations and then thought of the fun some old biddies have over one little cutting-up, I realized what a sparkling conversationalist that chap must be! . . .

Who should be in town but Mistinguette, the ancient French musical show star whose legs were famous for their pulchritude before ever Marlene Dietrich was born! Well over 60, the old girl is, and there's a fiendish rumor being whispered about that she proposes to appear in some sort of a show here. Even so, she's remarkably well preserved—a sort of Gallic Fanny Ward . . .

The Times Square district doesn't usually go for them, but smart press-agenting has put over a Chinese eatery on W Fifty-second street. It is run by Ruby Foo, who also has a famous place in Boston called "The Den" . . . But I'll still take Chinatown, any time of night . . .

Every year I try to do my best at our annual Siamese cat show, and every year I fall back whipped. The other day I went in, hopefully, to see the champion, Djerkits' Chinkaling of Newton, mother of 85, and her cold, sneering stare drove me completely out of the place with a chill. I can cope with the dirtiest looks that humans can hurl, after long training, but that grim, contemptuous gaze of a blooded cat I simply cannot stand. What is this—some sort of an inferiority set-up? Or are the darned animals really so superior to us?

When the milk is scalded add to 2 tablespoons butter melted and mixed with 2 tablespoons flour. Stir until mixture boils and strain into double boiler.

Just before serving add 1¼ teaspoons salt and a few grains pepper. Serve in bouillon cups with 1-3 cup cream beaten stiff, to which 1 tablespoon green pepper cut fine has been added.

Modern Kitchen Shown at New York

A typical example of the modern kitchen in the Brides' School in New York, which is now in its second successful year.

This kitchen, named the Dorcas Boardman Kitchen for the president of the school, has metal sinks and other working surfaces and has a new Swedish coal stove.

All of the pots and pans are hung on open racks where they can be found at a glance and where they just have to be kept clean.

The kitchen system is divided into three sections, the raw material division, the cooking division and the serving division.

Improve Your Conversation

AT A DANCE, when another wants to "cut in," and you'd rather continue with your present partner, do you know what to say without giving offense?

Conversation is an art and ability in clever repartee and small talk can be cultivated.

Those who make mistakes in speech, or use trashy slang — who are tongue-tied and self-conscious in the presence of others, are generally ranked as uneducated—even stupid. It is sad that this is true, but it is a social handicap that must be overcome.

The clever girl learns the art of talk. She speaks easily and naturally, and knows how to fill in the awkward pauses with the right sentence, or to direct the conversation into new channels.

She knows how to handle the overinquisitive person by saying "I'd rather not answer that"—how to ask a person to hold the wire without giving offense—how to introduce people—to extend an invitation—to congratulate someone—give gracious thanks for a gift or favor.

All of the many problems that arise every day in contacts with other people and how to correctly solve them are fully described in our new 40-page booklet, "Improving Your Conversation." It is full of hints on voice, tact, poise—practical definite guidance—entertaining.

Send 15 cents for our booklet, "Improving Your Conversation," to The Washington Post Home Institute, 109 West Nineteenth street, New York, N. Y. Write plainly your name, address and the name of booklet.

The Federal Diary

By Samuel Lubell.

TVA Policy

TVA's labor policy is generally regarded as trail-blazing in the field of Government personnel administration and perhaps one of the reasons is that the authority's personnel division has not confined its activities simply to hiring and firing employes but has gone in for numerous studies on how to improve the job it has been doing.

Among the service studies completed in the last fiscal year, for example, are analyses of the use of overtime leave, of new appointments of annual employes to develop a training program, how overtime service can be reduced, of the qualifications of the TVA training staff, studies showing sick leave is not being abused, of the turnover of annual employes, of problems of standardizing hours of work and five-day week, analysis of grievance cases, and a comparison of Civil Service Commission policies and procedures with those of TVA.

The authority is also conducting studies to establish standards for selecting and promoting typists and stenographers; to formulate oral trade tests to assist in selecting skilled workers for construction projects; to define qualifications in examining and selecting administrative and professional personnel, and of the actuarial problems in establishing a retirement plan for TVA employes.

The pamphlet on "Personnel Administration in the TVA," from which we got this list of studies, also shows that from August, 1935, to June, 1936, 12 grievance cases were appealed to the Personnel Division of which 8 were settled in favor of the supervisor, 3 for the employe, and 1 compromised.

The wage rate project at the Bureau of Labor Statistics is expected to terminate toward the end of December in the field and in mid-January here in the city. From 20 to 30 project workers here will be let out when the work is completed; another 60 or so are slated to go when the machine tabulation division project ends about New Years.

Photographic Register

The State Department has just gotten out a 171-page photographic register of all the persons in the foreign service and it does our heart good to see how many passport photos are included.

Every foreign service man, and the three women, were asked to send in a photo—it took about a year to collect them all—and the result is an amazing collection of varied shots. Most passportish of all is that of our Ambassador to France, William C. Bullitt (maybe it was because the picture was taken in Russia); most diplomatic looking (cut-away-wing collar effect) Philip Adams at London; most "what's it all about?" Harry D. Myers, of Panama, and most "wanted dead or alive," George H. Adams, at Callao-Lima.

Joseph C. Grew, Ambassador to Japan, has the most attractive smile, but there's a good deal of competition for the man with the scowl, our choice is Cecil M. P. Cross, in Paris; for dreamiest, J. V. A. MacMurray, Ambassador to Turkey (maybe there's a reason); most worried, William A. Bickers, at Ottawa; and, above all, now that American women have been given a monopoly on the affections of our foreign servicemen, the handsomest is Burton Y. Berry, appropriately enough in Greece. (The selection was made by the prettiest girl on The Post.)

So many persons have written in to call our attention to the fact that the quotation "well done thou good and faithful servant" which we attributed to Shakespeare comes from the Bible, that an explanation is in order. We knew of the Bible quotation—the copy editor whose job it is to look out for such errors in the column, called our attention to it—but as we explained to him we preferred to refer to Shakespeare for a little sentimental reason of our own.

Our only bit of Shakespearean acting virtually centered on that line. It was in "As You Like It" and we were selected to play the part of old Adam, the servant. (The only reason we got the part was that at one scene the script called for the hero to carry Adam off the stage and no one else in the class was small enough.) Every time old Adam succeeded in a mission his master, Orlando, would put his hand on Adam's shoulder (in this case our shoulder) and say, "Well done thou good and faithful servant." Ever since, whenever we've run into someone who has done a good job, we've always wanted to place our hand on his shoulder and say, "well done" in our best Shakespearean fashion.

Cox vs. Buck

Very little fireworks are expected at tonight's meeting of the Railroad Retirement Board Union, one of the five ousted A. F. G. E. lodges. Vice President Raymond Jewell will be in the president's chair while J. Cox, who has been removed from the presidency by the union's executive committee, led by Jessica Buck, may not even be present. Cox has adopted the attitude that the revocation of the temporary certificate dissolved the union and that he is being "kicked out of an office that no longer exists."

One of the charges raised by the executive committee is that Cox has been negotiating with A. F. G. E. officials and has refused to reveal what these negotiations are about. This is true and it isn't at all unlikely that the Cox faction may seek a new temporary certificate from A. F. G. E. headquarters. However, no action of this sort seems likely until after the results of the adjudicators exam to be taken tomorrow show how many of the railroad men who form Cox's principal supporters survive.

Postals

Also on tonight's schedule is the mass protest meeting of WPA unionists at the Harrington and three annual apple, cider and gingerbread party of the West Virginia Society at the Raleigh . . . Add November retirements Willard E. Buelle, of the Loans and Currency Division of Treasury, 49 years; and the following from the Bureau of Engraving and Printing, Leo Diegelmann, 19 years; David L. Hardaway, 42 years; John F. Hardie, 40 years, and Joseph D. McCauley, 49 years.

Traffic Toll For District Mounts to 82

Woman, Hurt Saturday, Dies; 9 Injured in Auto Mishaps.

Seal's Warning Letter Plan Strikes Snag at Parley.

While Corporation Counsel Elwood Seal conferred with Maj. Ernest W. Brown, superintendent of police, and Judge John P. McMahon, of Police Court, on the traffic situation yesterday, the death of an aged colored woman from automobile injuries brought the 1936 toll in the District to 82.

Georgie Lemon, 70, colored, of 1411A Carrollburg street southwest, died yesterday from injuries suffered Saturday night when she was struck by an automobile.

The accident occurred at South Capitol and M streets. Mayme G. Robinson, 26, of the 800 block of Fourth street southwest, driver of the death car, will appear at a coroner's inquest.

Nine persons were hurt in automobile mishaps yesterday and last night. Six of them were treated at Emergency Hospital for cuts and bruises suffered in a two-car collision on Highway Bridge.

Police said the automobiles were driven by Noble H. Glidewell, 39, of the 1800 block of Lamont street, and Earl W. Young, 21, of the 2000 block of Perry street northeast. Glidewell was charged with driving while intoxicated.

Those treated at the hospital included both drivers, Mark Robinson, 29, and Henrietta Robinson, 21, both of 323 Jefferson street northwest; Florence Young, 21, of 2018 Perry street northeast, and Roland G. Carlson, 25, of 204 Rugby avenue, Bethesda, Md.

Hit-Run Victim.

Mrs. Anna Glass, 50, of 3646 New Hampshire avenue, was bruised and cut when she was struck by the automobile of a hit-and-run driver as she crossed the street in front of her home last night. She was treated by a private physician.

Thomas F. Shell, 45, of Brentwood, Md., an inspector for the Capital Transit Co., was injured seriously late last night when he was struck by an automobile operated by Lloyd R. King, 31, of the 1300 block of K street southeast, at Florida and New Jersey avenues northwest.

He was examining a rail on the right-of-way. King placed his victim in his automobile and drove toward Sibley Hospital, but on Florida avenue, just west of B street, he crashed against a parked truck.

Shell was taken to the hospital in a passing car. Physicians said he had a possible skull fracture and cuts and bruises.

Fractures of both of her legs below the knees and possible internal injuries were suffered by Martha Edwards, 39, of the Chastleton Hotel, when she was struck by an automobile operated by Henry Barnes, of Ballston, Va., at Fourteenth and K streets northwest.

She was taken to Emergency Hospital, where physicians described her condition as critical.

No Agreement Reached.

Meanwhile, Seal's plan for eliminating the annual congestion of unserved warrants for traffic violations ran into opposition at a closed conference with Maj. Brown and Judge McMahon.

The conference was called to discuss Seal's proposal that letters of warning be sent traffic violators three days after a ticket had been placed on a car. These letters would allow the motorist seven days to deposit collateral, after which a warrant would be issued and served.

In proposing the scheme, Seal called attention to the accumulation of about 7,000 warrants which this year confront automobile owners applying for 1937 license plates.

Following the parley, Seal issued a formal statement, explaining that no agreement had been reached, and declining to discuss the matter further.

"An informal conference was held with the judges of the Police Court today," the statement said, "at which we discussed the general traffic situation, with particular reference to parking violations and warrants issued because of such violations.

"We also discussed the service of warrants and the failure of motorists to respond to courtesy tickets placed on cars for traffic violations.

"We were unable to arrive at any definite decision and we will continue to study the matter and meet at an early date for further discussion."

15 Lose Permits.

It was learned that plans to adopt a practice of "fewer warrants and quicker service" also were proposed.

Judge McMahon, it was understood, criticized the number of shipping entrances authorized by the Department of Vehicles and Traffic, and suggested something be done to eliminate unnecessary zones where only commercial vehicles are permitted to park.

Meanwhile, 14 out-of-town motorists lost their right to drive in the District, along with one Washington motorist.

Sidney J. Burgunder, of Baltimore, had his permit revoked for speeding 52 miles an hour.

Thirty-day suspensions went to George R. Hardesty, Baltimore, 40 miles; Martin J. Manning, Arlington, Va., 44 miles; William F. Phillips, Silver Spring, 46 miles; Ted Poland, Baltimore, 50 miles; George W. Quick, Mount Rainier, 42 miles; Harry Somers, Philadelphia, Pa., 44 miles and Edward E. Warren, Baltimore, 46 miles.

Fifteen-day suspensions went to Allen Cluster, Baltimore, 40 miles; Elaine P. Heiskell, Oxon Hill, 40 miles; Leonard J. Murphy, Alexandria, 38 miles; Harold A. Pierce, Alabama Apartments, 26 miles; James C. Royer, Vienna, Va., 38 miles; Irene U. Trowbridge, Chevy Chase, Md., 35 miles and John T. White, Mount Rainier, 36 miles.

Innocent, He Confessed Slaying To Shield Fiancee, Jordan Says

Love Led to Sentence of Death, Bandit Asserts; Stay Is Granted.

When living nears its end and love brings death, both can be dismissed with a shrug. Each kills the other and neither matters.

It was a meditated story that Thomas Jordan, "the bungling bandit," sentenced to die as a murderer, told in a conversation at District Jail yesterday on the occasion of his stay of execution by the United States Court of Appeals.

The stay was granted to give Jordan's attorney an opportunity to apply for a writ of certiorari. It is his contention that the jury law permitting Government workers to serve on criminal juries made it impossible for Jordan to receive a fair trial.

The importance of a sweetheart's wish put him on his last mile. That wish is still important to him, not because she cares for him any longer and not because he cares for her any more, but because it once meant something to him, a man to whom nothing ever meant anything.

Met in Hospital.

For a while he and Jean Beierholm meant something—not to the world, to be sure—but to each other. He met her in a hospital at Mount Vernon, N. Y., and before long he had asked her to marry him.

She was a telephone operator and he was a cook in a restaurant. In his day, he had been more. He had been a forger and had done time in West Virginia, he had seen two men hanged and he had contemplated robberies and talked with hot-shots of the underworld.

He had killed Lizzie S. Jaynes, a cashier in the Garden T-Shoppe, in Washington, Good Friday night of 1931 in a holdup. So, at least, found the jury. He says he didn't do it. But, as he said yesterday, "the law is right, the law must be upheld."

Jordan's death will be no great loss to society, nor will it be to him. He is ready for it.

He remarked these things rather aimlessly before telling the story of what love did for him. First he lighted a cigarette.

Conscience "Clear."

"When I was released after being questioned in the shooting, I went to Mount Vernon, N. Y. I had had nothing to do with the shooting, and my conscience was clear," he said. "Later events proved I had no feeling of guilt."

"I got a job as a cook. I could have been manager of the restaurant, but bonding companies are rather funny about people who have been questioned in murders. One day I cut my wrist at my work and was taken to a hospital.

"In the same room with me was a man—the girl's uncle. She came to see him and I used to talk to her. After I was released I met some of her folks on the street and they told me she liked me and suggested I call her up.

"It was kind of a courtesy call at first, but I came back, and then before I knew it I was in love with her and asked her to be my wife.

"Naturally I told her all about my past. I told her I had been in prison and she said that was all right, so I told her that I had been suspected in a murder. That seemed to worry her at first, but then she dismissed it and we made plans to get an apartment and my boss gave us a little engagement banquet.

Thought He Was O. K.

"I thought things were kinda looking up a bit for me. It was the first time I ever had that feeling.

"Then she asked me one day if I was sure I was clear on the murder charge. 'Certainly,' I said. 'I was cleared in 1931.'

"'I'd feel better,' she told me, 'if you knew. It would be awful to have something like that coming up again. Why don't you write to Washington and find out for certain?'

"Well, I did. She wanted it and I wanted her to have what she wanted. She had done a lot for me; that's all there was to that.

"I got a letter back from District Attorney Garnett saying my letter had been referred to Maj. Brown.

"After a movie we went in a little beer garden and I showed her the letter, then burned it in an ash tray. I laughed and told her not to morry.

"Next day we met again and she was all wrought up. She talked a while, then handed me $100. She had taken all her savings out of the bank. She told me: 'I'll feel better if you take this and go some place and I'll come to you later.'

Called On by Detectives.

"I laughed again and said 'I have nothing to worry about.'"

But Jordan had something to worry about. Two detectives inquired for him at his place of work, saying to the manager Jordan's car had been in a wreck. He knew what they wanted him for was something entirely different. He telephoned headquarters and walked into the station in surrender.

THOMAS JORDAN.

"She begged me to keep her name out of it," Jordan said yesterday. "She was afraid of her job with the telephone company * * * telephone companies sort of frown on that kind of publicity. Her job seemed terribly important to her.

"So I never did tell her name and never have. In fact, when the detectives were questioning me, one of them said 'I either want the girl's name or a confession. We'll find her name anyhow, but if you confess, we'll go away and won't bother her.'

"I gave them the confession they wanted, verbally, a lot of stuff which I knew they couldn't verify—just anything to get them out of town. They took me to Washington."

And here Jordan is today, convicted of murder. "I know 99 convicts out of 100 go to the chair saying they're not guilty," he said. "My words don't add anything to that old verse.

Calls Self "Complete Fool."

"They used my so-called confession against me. There never was any check-up on it to see if it was true or untrue. I was an ass. I was a complete fool.

"No, the girl never writes to me. That's all dead and gone. But it was pretty darned wonderful while it lasted. Love can get a man into some terrible places, but I don't think hardly anybody ever let it get them where it got me.

"I don't particularly care any more. The bottom went out of everything anyhow when the police got her to testify against me. My head was swimming at the trial and the walls spinning around and I felt like getting up and yelling 'All right! all right! kill me if you want to! I don't care!'

"So the girl is gone and pretty soon I'll be gone. There's something awfully final about walking through the rotunda to the electric chair.

"I don't blame her. I wish she had never met me. The poor kid is in plenty of hot water on my account. They told her a lot of stuff and she believed them. She'd never been in any trouble before.

"Today was my birthday, 31. It was hers, too. No, she didn't write to me. Why should she?"

Court Refuses To Drop Charge Against Nolan

Justice James M. Proctor, in District Court, late yesterday refused to direct a verdict of not guilty in favor of William J. Nolan, local automobile dealer, who is on trial on a charge of bribing two witnesses in his wife's divorce suit to leave town.

Shortly after over-ruling the motion, Assistant United States Attorneys Walter M. Shea and John W. Fihelly sent thrill through the courtroom when they questioned William E. Leahy, a defense attorney and one of the city's better known lawyers, about threats reputedly made on his life by Nolan.

Leahy, it was explained, represented Nolan in the divorce suit, in which Mrs. Alice Nolan obtained a limited divorce. He was called to refute testimony of Government witnesses. At the end of his general examination, the Government shot at him:

"Isn't it true, Mr. Leahy, that Mr. Nolan has threatened to kill you?" Leahy denied any knowledge of the assertion.

Thereafter he was queried about statements attributed to Henry I. Quinn, Mrs. Nolan's attorney, who is suposed to have said Nolan had threatened to kill Mr. Leahy. The latter had denied he ever heard of the statements.

Francis M. Kearney, one time sales manager of one of the Nolan branches, indicted with Nolan, has entered a plea of "nolo contendere."

Tidal Basin As Memorial Site Opposed

Hard Fight Foreseen at Jefferson Monument Final Meeting.

Officials Declare Cost at That Spot Will Be Prohibitive.

Sharp divergence of opinion arose yesterday over the proposed location of the Thomas Jefferson Memorial on the Tidal Basin banks, presaging a stiff battle on Capitol Hill when the site comes up for final approval next month.

H. P. Caemmerer, executive secretary of the Fine Arts Commission, said his group has consistently favored the location south of the Washington Monument, on the Mall's cross axis.

Other officials, however, were less optimistic over the views expressed Tuesday by Representative John J. Boylan, chairman of the memorial commission, when he stated the Tidal Basin site was held in high favor by fellow members.

Cost Is Criticized.

Dissenting Government executives, none of whom would be quoted, criticized the grounds on the following points:

"Tremendous" cost of building foundations for the $3,000,000 marble monument to the third President due to unfavorable subsurface conditions.

The necessity of filling in most, and possibly all, of the Tidal Basin to make way for the memorial and its elaborate approaches, one of the results being elimination of many of Washington's famed single-blossom Japanese cherry trees that now fringe the minature lake.

The Tidal Basin has an indispensable function as a flushing agent for Washington Channel. Water from the Potomac River flows beneath the inlet bridge and, when the tide goes out, rushes into the channel through the outlet gate at Fourteeth street.

Another criticism is that some sections of the city which is not so "top heavy" with memorials as West Potomac Park should be chosen for the Jefferson monument.

Said one Federal official:

Up to Engineers.

Provision will have to be made for a substitute if the Tidal Basin is removed as a Washington channel cleanser.

The Engineers Corps, U. S. Army, would have to pass upon any plan to change practices pertaining to the Capital waterfront. The proposed memorial site is under control of the National Park Service, Interior Department.

Another office head said not only that the foundation cost would be prohibitive but that additional sums would be necessary to integrate the memorial's landscaping plans with those of Washington Monument.

Representative Boylan said following Tuesday's meeting that the next session of the commission will be held about January 15, when final decisions on location and design will be made.

Man Long Sought In Hotel Stabbing Seized by Police

Sought for nearly four years in connection with stabbing of a manager of the Annapolis Hotel, Nick Pittas, 32, of the 1300 Massachusetts avenue northwest, was arrested and charged wtih assault with a dangerous weapon yesterday.

Pittas is charged with having wounded Hugh Neason, 42, who is now manager of the Cairo Hotel, January 1, 1933, after Neason asked him to leave a party at the Annapolis.

Neason was near death in Emergency Hospital for almost three months.

According to Detective Sergts. Michael Dowd and Leo Murray, who have not ceased working on the case, Pittas intruded on a private New Year's party at the hotel. When Neason asked him to leave Pittas is alleged to have cut him.

Pittas will be arraigned in Police Court at a preliminary hearing.

Monroe Kin Praises Roosevelt For Stand on Famous Doctrine

Laurence Gouverneur Hoes, great grandson of President James Monroe, and his son, Monroe Randall Hoes.

Great Grandson Here Finds President's South American Visit, Speeches Help Purposes Behind Declaration; Plans Shrine for Virginia

President Roosevelt on his South American visit has shown an understanding of the principles of the Monroe Doctrine unsurpassed since it was enunciated by President James Monroe December 2, 1823.

So declared Laurence Gouverneur Hoes, great-grandson of President Monroe, last night on the 113th anniversary of the enunciation of the Doctrine.

Seated beneath an oil painting of his distinguished ancestor in his home at 1410 Twentieth street northwest, Hoes, a PWA official, said:

"President Roosevelt, in furthering the idea of collective security is acting in a manner which I am sure, would please President Monroe if he were alive today.

"All of President Monroe's writings reveal that he had in mind a bicontinental pact of mutual defense when he laid down his famous Doctrine in a message to Congress 113 years ago.

"The Monroe Doctrine suffered great abuse at the hands of Presidents Cleveland, Theodore Roosevelt, Taft, Coolidge and Wilson President Monroe never intended that his policy should be used as an excuse for landing marines in South American countries. The Monroe Doctrine will be a source of annoyance as long as statesmen interpret it as an excuse for armed intervention in internal, political disputes of our sister republics.

President Roosevelt has shown he believes the policy of this country should be one of friendly understanding with the 21 republics of South and Central America unhampered by intervention from abroad. That is what President Monroe believed 113 years ago."

Hoes said he was surprised when reporters called on him in the belief descendants of President Monroe would celebrate the anniversary of the declaration of the Monroe Doctrine.

"I like to study President Monroe's papers on the anniversary," said Hoes, "but we do not have any celebration."

Hoes' grandmother was Maria Monroe Gouverneur, who married Samuel Laurence. Her daughter, Rose, married Capt. Roswell Randall Hoes, U. S. N.

In 1927 Hoes purchased President Monroe's law office in Fredericksburg, Va., and transformed it into the first Monroe shrine in this country.

Hoes explained he equipped the law office with furniture used by President Monroe in the White House.

"When the President left the White House he sold his furniture to the Government for $10,000, but stipulated in the contract that his family should be allowed to buy it back for the same price at any time they pleased," Hoes explained.

Among Hoes' treasures are a portrait of President Monroe painted by Rembrandt Peale and a portrait of Mrs. Monroe painted by Benjamin West.

Eventually, Hoes said, all of his Monroe collection will be turned over to the State of Virginia.

2 Workmen Killed By Electric Wire

Grasping the sides of a rain-soaked, electric coal loader in the Griffith Consumer yards, First and N streets northwest, two colored employes were electrocuted yesterday.

The men, John Davis, 34, and William Keys, 53, were killed instantly when 440 volts were grounded in a puddle of water near the loader. Coal company officials said the men were preparing to move the automatic scoop from one bin to another. Both took hold of an iron brace and one of them pulled an electric cable from a connection socket.

An end of the cable fell into the water, it is believed, and grounded the circuit. The ground connection increased the voltage and the powerful current surged through the men's bodies.

Davis, who lived at 63 Decatur court northeast, was employed by the Griffith concern. Keys, of 1145 First street northeast, worked for the Chapman Coal Co., police said.

C. T. C. Liable For Paving, Judge Rules

Must Remove Old Tracks and Bear Cost of Street Work.

Decision May Bring D.C. Thousands in Back Repair Bills.

The District government will be saved thousands of dollars in street paving costs if a decision announced yesterday by Justice Daniel W. O'Donoghue in District Supreme Court is accepted or sustained.

At the conclusion of a three-day trial, Justice O'Donoghue granted the District Commissioners a writ of mandamus against the Capital Transit Co., thereby upholding an order that the transit company remove abandoned tracks on E street between Eleventh and Fourteenth streets and repave the street. Hinman D. Folsom, assistant corporation counsel, prosecuted the case.

The suit was the first test case over paving costs since the merger of the street railways and its success gives District Officials hope that they may be able to collect a substantial amount from the transit company on paving jobs done by the District at its own expense after previous track removals.

The District probably will have to instigate further suits, however, to determine the liability of the company.

The highway department in the past has done the work and sent the company bills, none of which has been paid. If the District wins this fight, the paving costs it may collect ultimately from the transit company will run into several hundred thousands of dollars.

The ruling on the E street tracks, however, will act as a precedent, if accepted or sustained, for similar situations as on the Le Droit Park and Anacostia lines and a dozen or more minor cases of track abandonments brought about by the re-routing of street cars.

The transit company, which has indicated it will appeal from Justice O'Donoghue's ruling, contended that the law which compelled the two former street railways to remove abandoned tracks and repave the streets was repealed by the merger act.

Maddock Wins Divorce.

John J. Maddock, husband of Lillian Maddock, who only recently was acquitted of the slaying of Edward Killeen, reputed gaming overlord of the city, yesterday in District Court obtained a divorce on the ground he and his wife had been separated more than five years. The decree, ordered by Justice F. Dickinson Letts, will not be effective for six months.

Hoover Loses Key.

A YOUNG LADY who was the toast of Broadway only a few years ago is now checking hats at the Fifty-ninth street Longchamps . . . J. Edgar Hoover, the head G-man, was locked out of his room at the St. Moritz Saturday when he couldn't find his key! . . . The mink-coated members of the League of Women Shoppers are picketing the 5 & 10 . . . Dr. Franz Sarga, the nine-duel man, has an unusual name. In his native Hungarian, Sarga means "yellow" . . . Peggy Fears and A. C. Blumenthal met at the door of "21" the other night, with Blumey snubbing his separated spouse. Libby Holman observed these proceedings and then nudged her escort, who was about to wave to Blumenthal. "When," she berated, "will you learn not to talk to peasants?" . . . Attorney General Cummings is making private recordings of gag-stories to send to his intimates.

THE ONION WEEK ballyhoo really is the forerunner of a new mouth wash to be marketed soon by Zonite . . . Gene Tunney, who surveyed the present fistic scene, is confiding to pals, "If all the present-day heavyweights were laid end to end they would be where they are now.

A MONTH AGO Bill Robinson had a pair of dancing shoes made for Shirley Temple as a birthday present. The shoes, size 11½-C, were presented this week. In the meantime Shirley's feet have developed to 12-D. Robinson, whose film career is linked with the youngster's, now goes to bed praying, "Please, God, keep Shirley Temple a little girl." . . . MRS. HEYWOOD BROUN met Roy Howard, her husband's employer, and tried to ararnge a soft assignment for Heywood. "You see, we've been working so terribly hard," she explained to the publisher. "Yesterday, for instance, we worked on Heywood's article in the Nation, a short story for Collier's, finished another article for McCall's and then knocked off his column in 20 minutes!"

LAST MONTH the press agent for the "Ziegfeld Follies" wanted Fannie Brice to aid him in a press stunt. The idea was for Fannie to enter a cab, hold her bag outside the window and have it snatched by a purse-lifter. The police would receive the report, and—ergo, publicity. But Fannie wouldn't go for this ancient stunt. The other day every newspaper front-paged the jewel robbery of Gypsy Rose Lee, of the "Ziegfeld Follies!" . . . The advent of radio may affect the succession to the British throne. Any desire by King Edward to abdicate in favor of the Duke of York has been offset by officials. Their plaint is that the Duke of York's ascension would be ill-advised in these days, when it's customary for rulers to broadcast their messages to the subjects. Such a step, the officials urge, would be a reflection upon all Britain—for the Duke of York stutters.

In Hollywood With Jimmy Fiddler

Settin' Around.

HOLLWOOD, DEC. 2.

After a slow summer of building new sound stages, Twentieth Century Fox studio is poised for a brisk 1937. Many new pictures are under way and all vacations have been canceled, which is about as cheerful to the stars as a cat's mew is to a mouse.

ADOLPH MENJOU.

Even the studio cops have new orders in keeping with the spirit of fresh endeavor. They have been instructed to recognize and call by name every newspaperman who visits the lot. Woe betide the copper who confuses names, because, take my word for it, newspaper columnists are every bit as temperamental as the stars.

Interesting to watch two such fine actors as Adolph Menjou and Jean Hersholt, who were on the "One in a Million" set. Jean rarely blows a line, Menjou muffs them by the dozen. Today I found Adolphe in high glee "because" (he said) "Hersholt missed a cue."

The scene being filmed called for Sonja Henie, Arline Judge, Hersholt, Menjou, Don Ameche and Ned Sparks to rush through a narrow doorway, and someone was bound to be bounced around. But the men insisted on being polite. Finally the director snapped at them, "Can't you get through that door ahead of those women?" "Try it yourself," returned Menjou. "I'd have to knock them down to get through first." "All right," retorted Director Lanfield, "knock 'em down!" "Why not," cracked Miss Judge, "put the men on horses."

I stopped momentarily on the Shirley Temple "Stowaway" set. The troupe was filming a tedious scene of Shirley walking along a cobblestone street through a mob of Chinese extras. Time and again the director had made that particular sequence, and when I walked on the set everybody was tired of it all. Everybody, that is, except Shirley. She was having great fun, riding the camera truck back to the starting place each time the scene had to be retaken. I arrived at the end of a bad take. "We'll have to do it over," the director said, then asked the tiny Temple, "Do you mind?" "Oh, no," she replied, "I don't care how many times you take it, if I can ride back with the camera each time. Maybe this idea would work with Katharine Hepburn. Let her ride on the camera truck, and keep her happy.

Leon Errol, Rubber-Legged Comic, Coming to Earle; Ethel Waters Once Saved Day for a Leslie Show

Former Comedian of "Follies" and Other First-Line Revues, Stars in New Fanchon and Marco Musical; Foremost Songstress of Her Race at Loew's Capitol Tomorrow; Notes on Local Activities.

IT IS not the general policy of this column to "jump over shows" to announce the coming of future bills, but occasionally there comes along the justly celebrated special exception to prove the rule. I have never understood precisely how an exception proves anything, but that is the saying and there it is for what it may or may not be worth.

BELL.

At any rate, it seems worth mentioning that a week from tomorrow, on the stage of the Earle Theater, there will be presented one of the important living entertainments of the season. This will take the form of "Leon Errol's Hollywood Follies of 1937," which, needless to say, has as its star that eminent, rubber-legged comedian of "Follies," "Hitchy-Koo," "Fioretta," "Sally" and other fame, whose name it bears.

Leon Errol has not been seen on a Washington stage, if memory serves, since he appeared at the National with the last of the "Lambs' Gambols" to play this city. That was several seasons ago.

In the old days, Errol was a regular visitor to these precincts, having first made the acquaintance of Washington audiences as a costar of Clark's "Jersey Lily" burlesquers with the late "Blutch" Cooper, the greatest grouch comic that ever utilized a peeve as a source of humor. That was at the Gayety before the day of the contemporary Col. James Jeremiah Lake on Ninth street. I suspect that the good colonel still was playing "straight" in burlesque on his own account at about that time.

However, getting back to the Earle on Friday, December 11, we find that the malleable Mr. Errol will be supported in this elaborate Fanchon and Marco production by a long list of luminaries, entitled to serious consideration for their own achievements.

For example, the principal feminine role has been intrusted to Sunnie O'Dea, star of Earl Carroll's "Sketch Book" and recently seen in "Strike Me Pink" and "Show Boat" on the screen. Others in the cast include Jimmy Hadreas, comedian and specialty dancer, featured not so long ago with Olsen and Johnson in "Anything Goes;" Yola Galli, blonde songstress; Graham and Blake and Kraft and Gaut, two teams of comics, and Lou Ashe, barytone soloist. These principals will be supported by the Hollywood Models, a hand-picked chorus of West Coast beauties especially assembled for this tour.

When Leon Errol opens on the stage at the Earle, Washington amusement seekers will be privileged to view one of the foremost of the stage's contemporary funny men in a handsomely staged revue, with special scenic, lighting and costume effects, at a scale of admissions that represents a considerable abatement of the $6.60 at which certain of the Errol earlier vehicles have been bartered at local box offices.

Speaking of revue artists, when Ethel Waters opens on the stage at Loew's Capitol tomorrow, I wonder if she will recall the hectic early week she once put in at the Belasco Theater trying to get Lew Leslie's "Rhapsody in Black" whipped into shape for a "first time on any stage" over on Lafayette Square?

The "Rhapsody" first was announced to open on Sunday night. It was postponed to Monday and then to Tuesday. On Tuesday night, having been first to the opening game of the American League season out at Mr. Griffith's concrete and steel ballyard, I presented myself at the Belasco to see a show and, instead, was ushered in to still another fragmentary, disjointed, completely cockeyed and incomprehensible rehearsal from which it seemed to me nothing but chaos could issue. That rehearsal continued until 6 o'clock the next morning and through all of those grinding, nerve-jangling, heart-breaking hours, Ethel Waters was the one who held the thing together more than Mr. Leslie, the distraught impresario. Her good nature, willingness to fight with lyrics she had not yet learned and otherwise placate those in command, as well as her associates in the cast, was the dominant factor in the Belasco that night.

And the amazing part of it all was that on Wednesday night she and her associates stepped out and gave a letter-perfect performance. What a trouper!

The Cue and Curtain Club of George Washington University will present Elmer Rice's comedy in three acts, "See Naples and Die," in Wardman Park Theater on Friday and Saturday nights of this week. Originally produced in New York in 1929, the play starred Claudette Colbert in the role of Nanette Dodge Kosoff and Roger Pryor as Charles Carroll. These roles will be played in the current production by Peggy Gusack and Charles McVickers. The play is being produced by Marvin Beers, widely experienced in this sort of thing.

* * * *

"The Other Wise Man," world-famous legend of the Yuletide, written many years ago by that distinguished American cleric, Dr. Henry Van Dyke, and since then translated into many languages the world over, will be presented in the Capital for the twelfth consecutive season at Luther Place Memorial Church for three evenings during Christmas week, December 27, 28 and 29. Performances will be at 8:30 p. m. This Christmas play is produced annually under the direction of Bess Davis Schreiner, with a cast of the foremost of Washington's resident actors in the principal roles.

* * * *

The Montgomery Players Little Theater Group will present J. B. Priestley's play of "Laburnum Grove," as the second production of its season, in the auditorium of the Leland Junior High School tomorrow night. Frederick Kerby appears in the role created by Edmund Gwenn.

Thanks-for-the-Beer-and-the-Buggy-Ride Note.

Ed Hill, public relations counsel for the C. & P. Telephone Co., has been by the dramatic desk during my absence. I know, because I have two of those blue glass miniature Liberty Bells—no relation—paper weights to take the places of the two that were pilfered by a group of light-fingered and playful kids going through the plant the other night. Many thanks for the perpetuation of this sentimental business.

Quite Obviously, "The Show Is On!"

Washington, hungry for a modern, musical, stage revue, already is on its figurative toes in anticipation of the arrival of the new Shubert production of "The Show Is On," scheduled for the National Theater next Monday night. Beatrice Lillie and Bert Lahr are the costars of the piece, but above are pictured two of its more enticing decorations, typical of a hundred or so others of comparable pulchritude.

Laughton Again Assumes a Role Out of the Past

By Nelson B. Bell.

"REMBRANDT." United Artists' release of London Films' picturization of a screen story by Carl Zuckmayer, starring Charles Laughton, with Elsa Lanchester and Gertrude Lawrence, supported by John Bryning, Richard Gofe, Walter Hudd, Lawrence Hanray, Roger Livesey, Abraham Sofaer, Edward Chapman, William Fagan, Austin Trevor, Marius Goring, Basil Gill, Herbert Lomas and an imposing ensemble. Directed by Alexander Korda. Reviewed at RKO-Keith's Theater on Wednesday night.

The combination of producer, director and star that achieved so conspicuous a success with "The Private Life of Henry VIII" has wrought a film play of comparable artistry in "Rembrandt." If it exerts a slightly diminished popular appeal, it will be because the great Dutch painter is a less known figure than the most married and most jovially murderous of the Tudor kings.

"Rembrandt," as revealed for the first time upon a Washington screen at RKO-Keith's yesterday, is difficult to classify. It is not a drama of conflict in the usual sense, it is not strictly a biography, but perhaps may best be described as a series of clearly etched vignettes in the life of one of the world's greatest artists, depicting the vagaries of temperament that made his domestic life a plague, his art an intermittent pursuit and his personal history a record of poverty, dispossession and dire want.

The portrait of this genius of pigments and the palette is picked up on the screen beginning upon the eve of the death of his idolized wife, Saskid. Rembrandt van Rijn has just purchased her a bejeweled necklace and admits that he must paint the picture of the Civic Guard—whose "faces he does not like"—to pay for it. So engrossed is he in placing her likeness upon canvas from memory after her death that he forgets to be present at the funeral breakfast celebrated in her honor. His painting of the Civic Guard is laughed down as an atrocity.

He becomes next the husband of a nagging shrew, who makes his life a torment, and falls in love finally with a country housemaid, with whom he is happy until they are dispossessed for debt and their every belonging sold under the hammer of a relentless auctioneer.

The last we see of him, he is the toast of a gay party of revelers, unrecognized until his identity is divulged by a friend who seeks him out to give him alms against the likelihood of starving. This money he takes to buy fresh paints, instead of food, and, at the end, is painting a self-portrait and soliloquizing in the words of Solomon. "All is vanity."

Charles Laughton was confronted with a difficult task in the visualization of the title role of this picture and he has met it, as usual, with a complete histrionic equipment. In fact, one wonders if especial pains were not taken now and again to permit Mr. Laughton elocutionary opportunities akin to the one afforded him by the recitation of Lincoln's Gettysburg Address in "Ruggles of Red Gap." On three occasions during the action of the film, he is permitted to apostrophize to his heart's content—or, at least, to that of his director. His first sustained speech is an apostrophe to woman; his second a superb delivery of the Psalms of David, and his third a brief recital of a fragment of the wisdom that was Solomon's.

Laughton, in this subject, is surrounded by a completely British cast of whom the only familiar members to American audiences are Gertrude Lawrence, recently here with Noel Coward, at the National, and Elsa Lanchester, who, in private life, is Mrs. Laughton. Miss Lawrence, as the nagging second wife, does a splendid piece of work and no less may be said for Miss Lanchester in the role of the slavey who was Rembrandt's last love.

A new issue of "The March of Time" comprises the principal auxiliary feature of the program. This release of the most comprehensive of the screen's documentary films concerns itself with the cutting loose from treaty ties by young King Leopold of Belgium, the St. Lawrence waterway project, and its effect on Southern commerce, and Uncle Sam's entry into theatrical production.

The Pathe News, with a Technicolor insert devoted to the Dionne Quintuplets, and a natural color Toonerville cartoon comedy, featuring the terrible tempered Mr. Bangs, supplement the feature.

Belasco

"GYPSIES." Amkino release of the Meshrabpom-Film picturization of a story by Z. Markina and M. Vitukhnovsky, featuring Alexander Granach and Lala Chernaya, supported by N. Mordvinov, M. Siachnikova, M. Yanshin, F. Blefschvich, E. Rogulina, P. Sanin, S. Kmara and S. Koleskidy. Music by G. G. Lobachev. Directed by Evgeni Schneider and G. Goldblatt. Reviewed Wednesday night by Richard Q. Jones.

The story of the metamorphosis of nomadic people into one settled in the relative serenity of the kolkhoz (collective farm), such as was attempted and carried to a reasonable conclusion in the Ukraine by the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics, "Gypsies," the first of this season's Amkino releases at the Belasco, describes dramatically this venture in revolutionizing racial habits.

Played by several "Honored Artists of the Republic," the picture is done, with a modicum of lightness, with music and dance, but mostly straight drama. Tricked out with English dialogue titles (more plentiful than usual, and, as a consequence, a bit more distracting), "Gypsies" deals with the government's ultimately successful attempt to have the Romany tribes settle on the land.

Fabricated in such a way as to bring out the vicissitudes of their peripatetic and precarious existence and to picture the workings of various of the Gypsies' unwritten law, the picture becomes more a sociological document than an eagerly articulated narrative.

While the charge of propaganda may be attached to this film, such aspects are far from being dominant. In this respect, "Gypsies" is, perhaps, the least tainted, being, as far as is known, a somewhat fictionized document of what the Soviet tried and did accomplish in the Ukraine.

Persons in a picture such as this mean little. In "Gypsies" the several actors are finely cast, delivering for eyes and ears, even of non-Russian learning, performances which seem to plumb the dramatic essentials.

A special interest to the film is added in the musical score, written largely for strings and based upon traditional Gypsy melodies. Many of the ensemble songs are a capella. The dances are nicely done.

Photographically, "Gypsies" is for the most part fine, with some exquisite landscape and cloud effects.

Supplementing the Russian drama are "We Drivers," a "drive safely" subject of pith and moment, and a release of the Fox Movietone News.

Season's First Big Revue Will Arrive Monday

'The Show Is On' Leads New Theater Week of Notable Programs.

The first big, new musical revue of the year will make its appearance upon the stage of the National Theater next Monday night, when the Messrs. Shubert will present The Show Is On," prior to its Broadway engagement. The costars of this elaborate production are Beatrice Lillie and Bert Lahr. They will be supported by a long list of artists of the first rank, including Reginald Gardiner, Mitzi Mayfair, Paul Haakon, the dancer; Gracie Barrie, Charles Walters, Vera Allen, John McCauley, Evelyn Thawl and the Continentals. Most of the witty skits and blackouts in the revue are from the prolific pens of Dave Freedman and Moss Hart. Two pretentious ballets are staged to exploit the rare gifts of Paul Haakon as a classic dancer. The music of the piece has been contributed by a considerable roster of composers, headed by Duke & Fetter, Rogers & Hart, Dietz & Schwartz, George and Ira Gershwin, Harburg & Arlen, Carmichael & Adams, Zeno & Irwin and Herman Hupfield. There will be the usual Wednesday and Saturday matinee.

"Go West, Young Man" brings Mae West to the screen of the Warner Brothers' Earle Theater tomorrow as Mavis Arden in her new Paramount picture, adapted from the stage comedy, "Personal Appearance." Warren William, Randolph Scott and Lyle Talbot are the star's leading men in this lively bucolic farce of a famous movie star and a smalltown automobile mechanic. By some add quirk, the first scene of the picture is said to be laid in Washington. As headliner of the stage portion of the new bill, the Earle will present Clyde Lucas and his versatile orchestra, Buster Shaver, with Olive and George, and the Andresens.

* * * *

Laurel and Hardy, because each becomes half of a pair of twins in "Our Relations," chief screen feature for the week beginning tomorrow at Lowe's Capitol Theater, are said to be twice as funny as they ever have been before in this latest of their feature-length comedy creations. In this subject both Stan and Ollie encounter twin brothers who give rise to situations that are said never to have been paralleled for hilarious humor. On the stage, the Capitol will present Ethel Waters, foremost singing comedienne of her race, as headliner, with Lucky Millinder and his Mills Blue Rhythm Band, the Four Step Brothers, Conway and Parks and Chuck Richards.

* * * *

"Love on the Run," the gay continental comedy costarring Joan Crawford, Clark Gable and Franchot Tone, will be held for a second week of laughter on the screen at Loew's Palace Theater, beginning tomorrow. This frivolous frolic is one of the laugh hits of the season.

* * * *

Johnny Weissmuller and Maureen O'Sullivan transfer their jungle romance to the screen at the Columbia Theater for the week beginning tomorrow—the Columbia has reverted to Friday openings—in "Tarzan Escapes," latest picturization of the legend created by Edgar Rice Burroughs.

* * * *

The screen version of that quaint study in urban contrasts, "Three Men on a Horse," will be the screen attraction at the Metropolitan Theater for the week beginning tomorrow. The principal roles are taken by Frank McHugh, Joan Blondell, Guy Kibbee, Allen Jenkins, Sam Levine and Teddy Hart.

* * * *

At the Rialto Theater, the chief feature of the current bill continues to be "Roberta," the film version of the Jerome Kern stage hit, in which the foremost roles are played by Irene Dunne, Fred Astaire and Ginger Rogers and Randolph Scott.

* * * *

"Of Human Bondage," the picturization of the story by W. Somerset Maugham, costarring Leslie Howard and Bette Davis, is the current attraction at the Little Theater.

* * * *

The Gayety Theater, beginning with the usual matine performance next Sunday, will present Mike Sachs in a new Independent Burlesque Association production, in which the principal feminine role will be played by the gorgeous Lillian Dixon. Another featured member of the cast will be "Coo-Coo" Morrisey.

Huskies Plan To Pick Bowl Foe Today

Rose Bowl Officials and Washington U. Heads in Long Huddle.

Team Favors Game With Pittsburgh; Group to Announce Team.

By the Associated Press.

Pasadena, Calif., Dec. 2.—Rose Bowl officials promised today to announce within 24 hours the name of University of Washington's opponent for the New Year's Day football classic.

Newly arrived athletic heads of Washington and Tournament of Roses officials went into an executive huddle today, came out a little drawn but smiling, and promptly went into another huddle. Athletic Director Ray Eckmann of Washington, called time out during one session, and mopping his brow laboriously, declared:

"I hope to complete negotiations which we have been working on and have the entire matter cleaned up in the morning. I can assure you that nothing will be done or announced before tomorrow."

Announcement Today.

The general impression, based on nothing but surmise, was that an Eastern team would get the bid, but rabid supporters of the two outstanding Southern candidates, Louisiana State and Alabama, remained hopeful.

The affable Eckmann, adriotly sidestepping questioners declined to be led into a discussion as to whether his negotiations were being conducted in the East or South.

"I won't say," he declared, "and any rumors you hear about this team or that team being the choice—well, they're just rumors. Whew, I've never bumped into so many rumors since this business started. It's the old Army game——"

"Army? is Army being considered? We thought it was the Navy," a questioner interjected.

Eckmann smiled and repeated that the secret would not be divulged until tomorrow. Then he went into another huddle with the tournament people in the next room, and the game went on—behind closed doors.

Team Favors Pitt.

Meanwhile, just to refresh the records, Pittsburgh, Alabama, Louisiana State, Dartmouth and a few others are the outstanding guesses to get the bid.

Members of the Washington team would "like to meet Pittsburgh" in the New Year's Day clash. The team took an unofficial vote at Seattle yesterday.

"The boys decided on Pittsburgh as probably their best foe for the big battle," said Max Starcevich, a guard.

The vote does not necessarily represent the university's attitude on the question.

Formal Ivy League Urged by Papers

Princeton, N. J., Dec. 2 (AP).—Undergraduate newspapers of seven leading Eastern universities will advocate in front-page editorials tomorrow the formation of an ivy league in football.

The editorial, result of a month's conference and study by undergraduate editors, will call for the ultimate extension of the league's activities to all sports.

It will appear in papers at Princeton, Yale, Harvard, Columbia, Cornell, Pennsylvania, and Dartmouth. The editorial points out that the league has existed unofficially for several years.

"The ivy league," it says, "exists already in the minds of a good many of those connected with football and we fail to see why the seven schools concerned should be satisfied to let it exist as a purely nebulous entity."

Barney Ross Ordered To Defend His Title

New York, Dec. 2 (AP).—The New York State Athletic Commission today notified Sam Pian, co-manager of Welterweight Champion Barney Ross, to appear before the commission December 10 to sign contracts for Ross to defend his title against Ceferino Garcia, of Los Angeles, within 60 days.

Ross successfully defended his crown against Izzy Jannazzo last Friday in Madison Square Garden.

Quiet and Kindly Demeanor Belies 'Jimmie' La Fontaine's Reputation

Legendary Figure in D. C. Makes Hobbies of Fights, Movies.

(This is an intimate portrayal of a guy with $100,000—cash. A man whose movements evoked reams of publicity, but about whose personal characteristics very few words have been set on paper. In other words, we give you Jimmie LaFontaine, the man who laid ten $10,000 bills on the line to underwrite Jim Braddock's $400,000 guarantee to fight Joe Louis.)

By Bill McCormick.

"JIMMIE" LA FONTAINE.

The gnomelike little man who looks like somebody's math professor dragged to the fights by mistake, leans forward with avid interest as two second-rate pugs attempt to pound each other into physical wrecks.

"Pardon me," begs the writer, who has been commissioned to get an interview with a legendary figure, "Pardon me, but I'm looking for Mr. LaFontaine."

"I'm Jimmie," admits the serene little figure, "Sit down and let's enjoy a good fight."

The writer plops down next to the kindly looking gent, firmly convinced that he is the victim of a first-class hoax. A pair of kindly, yet shrewd eyes twinkle in a placidly round face as the calm little figure watches the fisticuffs. Surely this inoffensive little guy cannot be LaFontaine—the notorious "Jimmie." A question or two will decide that.

It Is, Indeed, "Jimmie."

"Jimmie," begins the writer, still doubting that he is addressing the elusive one, who never before has been interviewed, "Jimmie, whatever prompted you to put up that $100,000 for the Braddock-Louis fight in Atlantic City?"

"Because I like to see a good fight," answers the disarmingly inconspicuous little feller, "Because I can't lose money on it—and because I'm a real good friend of Herman Taylor, the man that's promoting the fight."

More of this later, but as Jimmie assumes a very rapt expression, because the two second rate pugs are really going to town on each other, the writer is forced to turn to an associate of LaFontaine's for further information.

"What do you think will happen when Louis and Braddock get together?" the interrogator asks LaFontaine, feeling that boxing is the only common ground between him and the little-known sports figure.

"I guess Joe will beat him," guesses Jimmie, "because Joe is a really great fighter—a two-fisted puncher who lacks only the lion-like heart of a Joe Grimm or Jack Dempsey to be the greatest heavyweight the ring ever knew."

Jimmie thinks the Brown Bomber lacks a certain little something in the way of "heart," a certain something that would have dragged him from the floor following his last knockdown at the hands of Max Schmeling.

Confirmed Movie Fan.

The writer is casting frantically around for a common ground beside boxing. After all, boxing is only a hobby with Jimmie, and there must be some other engrossing interest in his life.

"Try him on the movies," suggests the associate.

It quickly develops that Jimmie's only other hobby is the movies. Seldom does a really good picture come here that LaFontaine is not in the opening night audience.

Other than for boxing and the movie, James seems to have no hobbies, unless one can call the home a hobby. Even as much as he has progressed financially, Jimmie never has left his modest home in Southwest Washington.

Fathered Boxing Here.

To get back to Jimmie's strange love of fights, it may be recorded that he always has been willing to lay more than a buck or two on the line. "Because he likes to see a good fight." He very quietly kept the boxing game going hereabouts in the days before the sport was legalized in Washington. He bought the old Ardmore Club, presented it to Frankie Mann—one of our best prelegalization matchmakers—and told him to keep it going, without cost.

Because he likes to see a good

Gil Dobie, Aid Badly Hurt In Crash

Boston College Coaches Are Both on Hospital Danger List.

Both Suffer Fractured Jaws, Head Hurts; Car Hits Bridge.

By the Associated Press.

Boston, Dec. 2.—Gilmour (Gloomy Gil) Dobie, 57, Boston College football coach, moulder of championship elevens, and his assistant, Frank Murdock, 24, lay battered and bruised in adjoining wards of City Hospital tonight, victims of an automobile crash.

Physicians said Dobie suffered a fractured jaw and cheek bone, and spinal tests showed Murdock had a severe head injury in addition to a fractured jaw. Although the names of both were on the hospital's danger list, doctors said their condition was "fair."

Police found Dobie unconscious in his automobile and Murdock standing dazed beside it after the car crashed into a bridge abutment. The machine, registered to Dobie, was badly damaged.

Dobie Unconscious.

Apparently, police said, the driver of the car—they had not determined whether Dobie or Murdock operated it—misjudged the distance between two of three abutments at the bridge approach and, in an effort to avoid one, crashed into another.

Dobie, unconscious when brought to the hospital, regained consciousness later. He recognized his 18-year-old daughter, Jane, a freshman at Simmons College, who was summoned to his bedside.

Murdock, who remained semiconscious during the day, apparently recognized the girl, physicians said.

Despite his age, physicians said, Dobie withstood the shock of his injuries well and Murdock had youth in his favor.

Dobie's Second Injury.

Prior to the accident, police said they understood Dobie and Murdock attended a farewell dinner to Murdock, about to return to his regular position at an Allegany steel plant in Pittsburgh.

It was the second time that Dobie, since joining the Boston College staff last spring, has been laid up with injuries. His collar bone was broken when, while directing spring practice, he got in front of backs running interference for a ball-carrier and was laid low. The injury healed rapidly, however, and he was away from his charges only a few days.

Dizzy Won't Go For $200,000, Wagers Daffy

By the Associated Press.

Dallas, Tex., Dec. 2.—Paul (Daffy) Dean allows $200,000 is "considerable money," but he hates to think even that goodly sum will dissolve the "me and Paul" mound combination.

Furthermore, Paul recklessly agreed to wager his winter headpiece that it would take more than $200,000 in cash to persuade the St. Louis Cardinals to part with his big brother, Jerome Herman Dean.

"Diz is worth a lot more than $200,000 in cash to the Cards," said Paul. "Mr. Breadon would never sell Diz for cash unless, of course, he could get the Cincinnati Reds to throw in Paul Derringer on the deal."

At St. Louis, Sam Breadon, president of the Redbirds, agreed.

Cincinnati has offered $200,000 for Dean, but has made no mention of sending along Derringer, their ace righthander, with the check.

"Gosh, I'd hate to be away from Diz," mused Daffy. "I don't know how I'd act. But if it's the best for him, I'm in favor of it. You can't tell—maybe I'll be traded."

Paul, who failed to finish the 1935 season because of an ailing pitching arm, added, with a grin:

"Or maybe I'll go at the waiver price!"

The younger Dean says his arm is "doing fine" and he hopes to be back on the Cardinal hurling staff with a normal throwing arm when spring training starts.

He is not "doing anything special" to condition the arm except "just being careful not to play golf or get out in this cold, wet weather we've been having lately."

The huge righthander weighs 205 pounds at present—some 15 pounds over his pitching weight. He expects to be in top condition by spring.

Right now he is wrapped up in his home life.

Mr. and Mrs. Paul Dean expect Mr. Stork to drop around some time after Christmas.

Tar Grid Coach, Wood to Attend Sport Fete

Lieut. Tom Hamilton, football coach at the Naval Academy, and Gar Wood, speedboat king, yesterday added their names to the long list of celebrities who will attend the all-sports dinner of the Touchdown Club at the Willard Hotel next Wednesday night.

The Lion's Club and Milwaukee Beer also engaged a table yesterday.

Jimmy Crowley, Fordham football coach, who formerly was one of Notre Dame's famed Four Horsemen, will make the principal speech of the evening. His talk will be broadcast over a National hookup, beginning at 10 p. m.

Tickets for the banquet, which are priced at $5 apiece, are on sale at the Willard Hotel and Spalding's.

A crowd of 500, including practically all the national leaders in sports as well as all of those locally concerned with sports, is expected to be present.

The dinner is the first of its kind. Members of the Touchdown Club hope that the dinner will become an annual affair.

Barlund Knocks Out Connelly in 9th Round

New York, Dec. 2 (AP).—Gunnar Barlund, Finnish heavyweight champion, spotted big Frankie Connelly 33 pounds tonight, but knocked out the Boston Irishman in the ninth rond of their ten-rounder in the New York Hippodrome.

Connelly outweighed Barlund 228½ to 195½.

Thurnblad Wins Game In World Cue Tourney

Chicago, Dec. 2 (AP).—Arthur Thurnblad, solemn Chicagoan, achieved the prize upset of the world three-cushion billiard championship tournament today by trouncing Otto Reiselt, of Philadelphia, 50 to 31, in 48 innings, for the Easterner's first defeat in three matches.

Football Scores Smaller Than Last Year

168 Leading Teams Had an Average of 113 Points for Whole Season.

By the Associated Press.

New York, Dec. 2.—Despite the general impression that the offense has advanced ahead of the defense in college football, an Associated Press survey revealed today that scoring fell off slightly in 1936.

Though such results as Minnesota's 47-19 win over Texas, Yale's 26-23 victory over Princeton, and North Carolina's 59-14 rout of Virginia were outstanding, the survey shows that 168 leading teams scored an average of 113.3 points per season and in 1,438 games averaged 13.23 points per game.

Last year 154 teams averaged 120.9 per season and in 1,407 games posted an average of 13.24 per game.

With the exception of the four years from 1927-30, scoring has shown a decline from the 1922 high of 19 points per game to the 1934 low of 12.19 points.

L. S. U. Top Scorer.

Louisiana State set the scoring pace for the major teams this season with 281 points, 93 of them against Southwestern of Louisiana. Army, Dartmouth, Drake and Georgia Tech were also right up there with 238 points apiece.

Defensively, the Anselm's College of New Hampshire had the most impressive record. They gave up only two safeties for four points, and held the Holy Cross team to a scoreless tie. In contrast, the University of Vermont team scored in only one game and allowed the opposition 258 points, while Brown was trampled for 234 points.

The 168 teams used in the survey played 100 tie games, the most remarkable of which was the 20-20 game between Indiana and Purdue.

Scoring figures on college teams for the 15 years in which the Associated Press has made the survey:

Change the Name Of the Browns? Gad, Sir, Never!

By the Associated Press.

St. Louis, Dec. 2.—Fans flooded the office of the St. Louis Browns today with suggested new names for the American League Baseball Club—and with demands there be no change.

First returns showed a majority favored retention of the name by which the club has been known since it first entered the league 35 years ago.

Among the suggestions were the Rajahs (Manager Rogers Hornsby is known as the "Rajah"); Wildcats, Brown Larks, Blues (to team up with that favorite song, "St. Louis Blues"), Owls, Eagles, Lions, Panthers, Mustangs, Hornets, Flyers and Broncos.

The new club owners started it when they asked for suggestions last Saturday. The contest continues until December 15, and to the winners go those much coveted pieces of pasteboard—season passes to all home games.

Fred Obermann, who thought "Brown Larks" a good name, also asked the owners to hire only brown-eyed and brown-haired players.

Backfield Duel In Md.-Terror Game Seen

Can the running of Bill Guckeyson offset the passing of Leroy Campbell and the bucking of Cliff Lathrop?

That question is being asked among Maryland football fans this week as they await the battle between Maryland's Terrapins and the emeral-hued Terrors of Western Maryland Saturday in the Baltimore Stadium.

The question will be answered then on the sod of the stadium as these two mighty State powers clash for the championship of Maryland.

Last year the fleet-footed Guckeyson led his team to a 22-7 victory over Coach Charley Havens' Sophomoric Terrors.

But this year Terror supporters promise a different story. Those sophs of 1935 are juniors now. They've had a year of experience, been reinforced by capable reserves, particularly on the line. They've had a fine season despite numerous injuries. And Cliff Lathrop and Leroy Campbell have had their best year.

Terp Backers Good.

While Guckeyson will be the main star in Maryland's backfield, he will have ample support from a cast of veteran backs. Charley Ellinger, Coleman Headley and John Gormley, all seniors, played an important part in last year's triumph and will be out to make their final college game a success.

In addition to them Maryland will have Jim Meade, its ablest sophomore back in years, a good runner, a fine blocker and heady player. The Terrors have plenty of respect for Meade.

On the other hand Lathrop and Campbell can count on aid from Frank Sadowski, a junior who has quarterbacked the eleven in fine style all year; Ken Adriance, another junior who has served as a blocker all season; Ted Mujwit, Western Maryland's Jim Meade, and Joe Drugash, sophomore understudy to Sadowski who, although light, is a fine ball carrier.

Western Maryland will also trot out on the stadium turf two of the finest ends in Maryland, Co-capt. Lou Lassahn and Stan Benjamin. Fans of the State know plenty about these two flankmen.

Pro Franchise For District Pending

Marshall Weighs Offer of Philadelphia; to Decide on Monday.

Washington will learn on Monday whether it is to be the possessor of a franchise in the National Professional Football League.

On that day, following the close of the league season, George Marshall will threst out with the minority stockholders in the Boston Redskins the disposition of the Boston franchise.

Marshall, owner of 51 per cent of the club's stock, favors Washington as the base of his team's 1937 operations in the league, but will lay before the other stockholders a proposition to merge the team with the Philadelphia Eagles.

Determined to Quit Boston.

Outraged by the poor support of Boston fans and newspapers, Marshall is determined to move his team from Boston and yesterday conferred with Clark Griffith with respect to terms for the use of Griffith Stadium.

Griffith, offering full co-operation, pictured big league football as a successful venture in the Capital.

Marshall's aversion to Boston was heightened last Sunday when only 5,000 fans paid to see his Redskins play the Pittsburgh Pirates despite the fact that the Boston club is leading the Eastern division of the league.

Philadelphia Profitable.

With Philadelphia proving a profitable league site despite the fact that the Eagles are in the league cellar, Marshall is seriously considering the offer of Bert Bell, Eagles' owner, to make him a co-partner in return for the talent the Redskins would bring to Philadelphia.

With five teams now comprising the Eastern section of the league, compared to four in the Western division, league officials are expected to approve the Boston-Philadelphia merger, which would effect a balance in the league.

The Redskins are scheduled to play the New York Giants on Sunday at Yankee Stadium in the game that will decide the Eastern championship, the winner to play the Green Bay Packers for the league title. A victory or even a tie on Sunday would give the Redskins the Eastern title.

Local Youth Awarded Grid Letter at Manlius

Manlius, N. Y., Dec. 2.—Cadet William O. Turney, son of Mr. and Mrs. J. R. Turney, of 4929 Rockwood Parkway, Washington, D. C., has been awarded a Major "M" for football at the Manlius School. He played right end on the 1936 Manlius eleven under Head Coach Mark Bradley.

Award of the major "M's" and squad letters was recently announced by the athletic council. The awards are based on playing of the recipients during the season just closed.

Lon Warneke Treated For a Foot Injury

Hot Springs, Ark., Dec. 2 (AP).—Lon Warneke, St. Louis Cardinal pitcher, received treatment today for a slight foot injury suffered while chopping wood at his home here. An attending physician said the injury was "nothing to worry about."

Ex-Cavalier Boxer In Pro Ring Debut

Richmond, Va., Dec. 2.—Maynard (Mutt) Womer, former University of Virginia Southern Conference welterweight champion, will make his professional ring debut here next Monday night.

Womer, who was developed as a boxer by Johnny LaRowe, famous boxing coach at the university, will swap swats with Tony Amarosa, of Richmond, in a six-round preliminary main event featuring Frank Tymosko, former Virginia amateur heavyweight champion.

Amarosa, a very rough and rugged 147-pounder, dropped a close decision to Sam Bacala in his last fight, held in Washington D. C., last month.

Florida Keeps Ban On Meade's Riding

By the United Press.

Miami, Fla., Dec. 2.—The Florida Racing Commission today affirmed its suspension of Don Meade, nationally known jockey ruled off the turf for life last spring for violation of betting rules.

The commission denied a petition for reinstatement presented by William J. Pruitt, Meade's attorney.

The jockey's license was revoked last season, with the indication the cancellation was for life. At that time the commission said the action was "for the best interests of racing."

Horse Owner Held By Narcotic Agents

New Orleans, Dec. 2 (AP).—Frank Ianni, 50, Dallas (Tex.) race horse owner, was arrested by Federal agents at the Fairgrounds Race Track today on a charge of possessing narcotics.

The officers, Raymond A. Richards, Joseph Stack and James Van Heusel, said narcotics were found in Ianni's motor car.

Ianni's bond was fixed at $10,000. The officers quoted Ianni as saying he purchased the narcotics to use on his horse, "Biff."

Keiser Shoots an Ace In Miami Open Practice

Coral Gables, Fla., Dec. 2 (U.P.).—A hole-in-one by Herman Keiser, Springfield (Mo.) professional. Overshadowed six subpar rounds fired today in warmups for the seventh annual $10,000 Miami-Biltmore golf open which starts Friday.

Keiser made his ace at the 145-yard fourteenth hole.

The par busters were Henry Picard, Hershey, Pa., with a 66; Jimmy Demaret, Houston, Tex., and Byron Nelson, Ridgewood, N. J., with 69s, and Joe Turnesa, Hartford, Conn.; Willie Coggin, San Francisco, and Al Zimmerman, Portland, Oreg., with 70s.

Dean Sale Talk Phoney Say Magnates, Betting He'll Stay in St. Louis

Red Sox Buy Only $8,000 Peacock; Cubs Sell Ethan Allen to Browns; Gelbert Was Series Hero of '30 and '31; Rumors Many.

By the Associated Press.

Montreal, Dec. 2.—Dizzy Dean still was in the St. Louis Gas-House Gang tonight, but two of his mates, the gallant Charlie Gelbert and Catcher Virgil Davis, were members of the Cincinnati Reds.

As smart baseball men began to bet even money with sports writers that the great Dizzy would keep right on throwing baseballs for the Cardinals for years to come despite big-money talk by Cincinnati and the New York Giants, Infielder Gelbert and the veteran Davis were sold to the Reds in a straight cash transaction.

The deal was easily the highlight of a day of furious rumors and little business, which included the sale by the Chicago Cubs of the veteran outfielder, Ethan Allen, to the St. Louis Browns. The Boston Red Sox, skinflints this meeting as compared with last year, signed up Catcher Johnny Peacock, who was lost to Cincinnati by a free agency ruling, for $8,000 which Peacock stuffed into his own pocket.

Was Series Hero.

The departure of Gelbert, who probably will be used by the Reds as trading material in another deal, removes another of the famous Cardinal World Series heroes of the past and ends his gallant fight to make good with his mates suffering a serious accident to his leg in a hunting accident in the winter of 1933.

Gelbert was a hero in the campaigns and World Series engagements of 1930 and 1931. A remarkable fielder and a deadly hitter in the pinches, he was one of the leading factors in the Cardinals winning pennant drives. Although he hit over .300 only one season in six with the Cards—in 1930, with a .304 average—he was one of the most popular players in the game. In the 1930 World Series he batted .353. The next year he was a World Series hero again, though hitting but .261. His fielding plays and timely hits were largely responsible for the victory over the Athletics in '31.

While hunting between the '32 and '33 seasons, his shotgun went off accidentally, all but blowing his leg off. Gelbert was off the active list the next two years, but amazed every one by coming back with the help of a steel brace and playing good ball in '35 and '36.

Gelbert is 30 years old and a native of Scranton, Pa.

With Phils in Basement.

Davis came to the Cardinals in 1934 after six seasons with the Phillies. He hit .300 in '34 and .317 in '35, but his batting fell off to .268 in 112 games last season. Although he always denied it, reports were he and Dizzy Dean weren't on speaking terms although they formed a great battery combination for the Gas House Gang. Davis is 32.

Developments in the Dizzy Dean deal were stalled today because of the tardiness of Manager Bill Terry of the Giants. Memphis Bill missed his train to Montreal last night and the Giant delegation went on ahead without him. President Horace Stoneham was pretty much peeved with his manager for his inability to catch trains and didn't care who knew it.

Reds Give Up Hope.

As the Giants talked about getting the great Dizzy and Branch Rickey, general manager, and David Harum, of the Cardinals, frisked about with many different stories on the setup. General Manager Warren Giles of Cincinnati began to give up hope of landing the loquacious Dizzy.

"Branch wants a whole ball club

Facts

And Rumors As Montreal Trade Sessions Start.

By the Associated Press.

Montreal, Dec. 2.—Facts and rumors from the minor-major league baseball market:

FACTS—Cincinnati Reds buy Infielder Charlie Gelbert and Catcher Virgil Davis from St. Louis Cardinals in straight cash transactions.

Chicago Cubs sell Outfielder Ethan Allen to St. Louis Browns, who then released Outfielder Ray Pepper to Buffalo of International League.

Boston Red Sox send Pitcher Mike Meola and Outfielder Dusty Cooke to Minneapolis of American Association on option to complete deal made for Outfielder Fabian Gaffke.

Catcher Johnny Peacock, lost to Cincinnati when Commissioner K. M. Landis ruled him a free agent, signs with Boston Red Sox.

Whitehead Offered.

Chicago White Sox offer Pitcher Johnny Whitehead to Detroit for Outfielder Gerald Walker or Chet Laabs, young outfielder recalled by Tigers from Milwaukee.

Detroit cancels working agreement with Milwaukee and signs one with Toledo, sending Outfielder Chester Morgan to Toledo. Tigers also announce First Baseman Rudy York, Pitcher Clyde Hatter, Shortstop Chester (Wimpy) Wilburn and Outfielder Laabs, all recalled from Milwaukee, will be given every chance for regular berths.

Toronto announces it will retain its International League franchise.

Detroit sends Clarence (Red) Phillips, big right-handed pitcher, to Indianapolis, of American Association, for Paul (Dizzy) Trout, right-handed thrower of promise.

Dean to Be Sold?

Baltimore sends Pitcher Frank Anderson and Shortstop William Good, promising youngsters, to Galveston, of Texas League, on option.

Boston Red Sox exercise option on Second Baseman Bobby Doerr, from San Diego, of the Pacific Coast League, and send Pitcher Manuel Salvo to San Diego for Catcher Gene DeSautels, former Detroit backstop.

Boston Bees hire Bob Coleman, former San Antonio manager, as director of expanding Bee farm system.

RUMORS—Dizzy Dean will be sold to Cincinnati or to New York Giants; Dean will not be sold, but will stay with St. Louis.

Red Sox Outbid Nats For Rookie Catcher

Montreal, Dec. 2 (AP).—The Boston Red Sox today acquired one of the prize minor league products—Catcher John Peacock, recently declared a free agent by Baseball Commissioner Landis.

The Red Sox announced their purchase of Peacock at the minor league meeting here. The rookie catcher, an outstanding backstop with Nashville last season, had been claimed by the Cincinnati Reds, but Landis ruled him a free agent on the grounds that the Reds acquired him irregularly.

As a free agent, Peacock was at liberty to sign with the highest bidder and the Red Sox outbid the Washington club for his services. For signing, Peacock is reported to have been given a $15,- bonus by the Boston team.

Most Valuable Award Goes to Sammy Baugh

Houston, Tex., Dec. 2 (AP).—Sammy Baugh, Texas Christian University passer, unanimously was voted the Southwest Conference most valuable football player for 1936 by sports writers in the seven conference cities today. He will receive the Houston Post Trophy.

Mazyniata Closes Fast to Take Feature Race at Charles Town

Sam Palumbo Rides Three Winners

Strikes Stride, Piloting Jack Low, Hoursend on Muddy Track.

By Walter Haight.

A Staff Correspondent.

Charles Town Race Track, W. Va., Dec. 2.—A pair of Charles Town favorites, Mazyniata and Jockey Sammy Palumbo, accounted for the feature race at this mountain race track today. Running on a heavy track Mazyniata closed with excellent courage to take a neck decision from Silver Arch, with Prince Turley third in a field of eight. Prince Turley was heavily played and gave his backers plenty of hope. However, with victory in sight, he suddenly went lame in the stretch and Jockey Garrett failed to extend him. It was right at the wire that Mazyniata and Silver Arch charged by him.

Mazyniata drew only a scattered backing in the 4½-furlong race, known as the Pendleton Purse and paid a $15.40 mutuel.

The race was run over a heavy track and through a light rain. Although the temperature was above the freezing point, the infield and the adjacent hills were covered with snow. Despite the weather a fair crowd was out and the majority preferred the off track to the bitter cold.

Prince Turley had the feature locked up before his legs went bad. He broke fairly well and Garrett immediately rushed him to the top. His backers were figuring their winnings when Prince Turley stopped suddenly. Even then Garrett believed he had won the race for he looked back over his shoulder. He saw Mazyniata and Silver Arch charging on home, but he could do nothing about it.

Paige Haile Selasse!

Addis Ababa, with Jockey Machado in the saddle, made every post a winning one in the first race. The Chance Play colt showed a liking for the heavy course and opened a long lead to step to the finish line six lengths in advance of Contrite. The latter had some trouble at break and ran a courageous race thereafter. Tweety, one that was second most of the way, hung on to take the third money in the field of eight. The winner was the favorite at a $5 mutuel.

Jockey Sammy Paulumbo, the Charles Town saddle champion, rode his first winner of the meeting in the second race, bringing Jack Low up in the final strides to take a nose decision from Royal Veil. The winner paid an $8 mutuel. Third money in the field of eight went to Whiskora. It was a two-horse race from the start between Jack Low and Royal Veil.

To the tune of a $36 mutuel, Miss Epe caused an upset in the third race when she defeated Shanteb and Ebony Parasol, a couple of heavily played juveniles. With Jockey Garrett aboard, Miss Epe took the lead from Shanteb and held sway thereafter. Shanteb was easily second ahead of Ebony Parasol, which despite mud breeding, did not appear to like the tough going.

Flower Time Wins.

Flower Time, a winner here opening day on a fast track, came back to repeat on a heavy track and upset those who figured he could not run in the mud. As a consequence he paid a $25 mutuel. Clean Sport was second while he made a determined bid in the stretch. Cynwyn came far back to be third in the field of six.

Running Water was never headed in the sixth race over the mile and a sixteenth course. With Jockey Johnny Shanks in the saddle, Running Water opened a good lead at once and had a comfortable margin over Vennie H. at the end. Ardor was third in the group of eight.

The day's finale went to Hoursend at a $13.40 mutuel. Jockey Palumbo, up on Hoursend, rode his third winner of the day.

Fairgrounds Results.

WEDNESDAY, DECEMBER 2, 1936.

(Compiled by Walter Haight.)

WEATHER, RAINING. TRACK, HEAVY.

FIRST RACE—Six and one-half furlongs. Purse, $400; claiming. For 2-year-olds. Start good from stall gates. Won handily; place driving. Went to post at 1:31. Off at 1:31½. Winner, G. S. Harrison, jr.'s b. c. (2), by Chance Play—Nubia. Trained by J. Y. Christmas. Value to winner, $300; second, $60; third, $30; fourth, $10. Time, 1:26 4-5.

GOLDEN GOWER	(Mitchell)	110	6	3	8	8	8	8	29.00

Two-dollar mutuels paid—ADDIS ABABA, $5.00, $3.20, $2.60; CONTRITE, $4.80, $2.60; TWEETY, $2.60.

ADDIS ABABA, much the best in the going, bounded to the front at once, opened a long lead and was in hand while holding opposition safe. CONTRITE was bothered by MISS MILLICENT at the break, went forwardly and was best of the others. TWEETY, closest to the pace of ADDIS ABABA most of the way, tired in the closing stages. YARDSTICK gained steadily throughout the running but could not threaten. POLYCHROME went evenly. The others were not factors.

SECOND RACE—Six and one-half furlongs. Purse, $400; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from stall gates. Won driving; place same. Went to post at 1:55½. Off at 1:56½. Winner, Miss J. Ferns' ch. g. (5), by John P. Grier—Priscilla. Trained by L. Taylor. Value to winner, $300; second, $60; third, $30; fourth, $10. Time, 1:27 4-5.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—JACK LOW, $8.00, $3.80, $2.40; ROYAL VEIL, $2.80, $2.20; WHISKORA, $2.20.

JACK LOW, rated along just off the pace of ROYAL VEIL from the beginning, gained gradually on the pacemaker after three furlongs, came to the outside of rival in the stretch to be up in the final strides under good handling. ROYAL VEIL had speed to go to the top, saved ground throughout, but could not resist the winner. WHISKORA gained throughout the running and closed willingly. WARNED OFF, carried wide at the first turn, closed gamely. COUNSELLOR BILLY dropped back after three furlongs. TACONITE was forced wide at the first turn and stopped.

THIRD RACE—The Charles Town course. Purse, $400; allowances. The Mineral. For 2-year-olds. Start good from stall gates. Won driving; place same. Went to post at 2:22½. Off at 2:24. Winner, Mrs. I. P. Ensle's ch. f. (2), by Sea Rock—London Charm. Trained by R. Payne. Value to winner, $300; second, $60; third, $30; fourth, $10. Time, 1:21 2-5.

STRONG TEA	(Coffman)	107½	5	8	8	8	8	8	11.60

Two-dollar mutuels paid—MISS EPE, $36.00, $15.20, $4.60; SHANTEB, $3.80, $2.40; EBONY PARASOL, $2.20.

MISS EPE had good speed from the start, displaced SHANTEB to take command after a quarter, opened a good lead and bore out slightly through the stretch while under stout pressure. SHANTEB, rushed to the front at once, could not shake off the winner, rallied to punishment in the stretch and was gaining steadily until meeting slight interference from the winner. EBONY PARASOL went evenly and had no excuses. TEDDY'S SQUAW gained some ground leaving the backstretch and hung thereafter. BRIEF dropped back. The others were always outrun.

DAILY DOUBLE PAID $163.00.

FOURTH RACE—About 4½ furlongs. Purse, $400; allowances. The Pendleton. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from stall gates. Won driving; place same. Went to post at 2:51. Off at 2:52. Winner, A. H. Utterback's b. m. (7), by Mayne—Juniata. Trained by owner. Value to winner, $300; second, $60; third, $30; fourth, $10. Time, 0:53 4-5.

ROCK SPRAY	(Dilddo)	113	4	5	5¹	7ʰ	8	8	22.90

Two-dollar mutuels paid—MAZYNIATA, $15.40, $6.20, $2.80; SILVER ARCH, $9.00, $3.00; PRINCE TURLEY, $2.20.

MAZYNIATA, a forward factor from the start, came to the outside of the leaders in the final drive and under stout handling was up in the concluding strides. SILVER ARCH was hard ridden throughout and closed willingly. PRINCE TURLEY was rushed to the front, opened a good lead, but went slightly lame in the late stretch and Garrett did not ride him out. JIM MOSS, slow to get into best stride, made up some ground in the closing furlong. GREAT SHAKES could not reach contention.

FIFTH RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles. Purse, $400; claiming. The Barbour. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from stall gates. Won driving; place same. Went to post at 3:18. Off at 3:18½. Winner, Mrs. K. Bashore's br. m. (6), by Happy Time—Flower Down. Trained by F. Shenski. Value to winner, $300; second, $60; third, $30; fourth, $10. Time, 1:56 1-5.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—FLOWER TIME, $25.00, $10.40, $6.00; CLEAN SPORT, $4.80, $3.40; CYNWYD, $3.80.

FLOWER TIME, hustled to the front at once, opened a good lead in the first furlong, held sway throughout, but had to be put to a drive to stave off closing bid of CLEAN SPORT. CYNWYD closed willingly from a slow beginning. WITTEKIND was pulled up twice along the backstretch and closed on own courage. GOGGLES was miserably handled and can do better. PRINCE PETTIE could not reach contention.

SIXTH RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles. Purse, $400; claiming. The Upspur. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from stall gates. Won handily; place easily. Went to post at 3:49. Off at 3:50½. Winner, Mrs. J. H. Elliott's b. g. (8), by Cherokee—Martre. Trained by J. Wilson. Value to winner, $300; second, $60; third, $30; fourth, $10. Time, 1:57 3-5.

DUNAIR	(Johnson)	113	1	8	8	Pulled up				6.70

Two-dollar mutuels paid—RUNNING WATER, $8.40, $4.60, $4.00; VENNIE H., $7.20, $5.40; ARDOR, $6.20.

RUNNING WATER, off alertly, opened a good lead at once, drew out through the stretch while in hand and was easily best in the going. VENNIE H. was closest to the pace throughout, but could not threaten. ARDOR was hard ridden throughout. BUD BROWN could not better his position. DUNAIR lacked speed and appeared sound after the finish. He was pulled up early.

SEVENTH RACE—One and one-quarter miles. Purse, $400; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from stall gates. Won handily; place same. Went to post at 4:20. Off at 4:20½. Winner, J. Bosley, jr.'s ch. g. (5), by Hourless—Carrie Ormo. Trained by owner. Value to winner, $300; second, $60; third, $30; fourth, $10. Time, 2:15 2-5.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—HOURSEND, $13.40, $7.40, $3.60; LUCID, $10.70, $4.00; POST BRIGADE, $2.60.

HOURSEND, hustled to the front at once, always had something in reserve and was always ahead, being in hand at the end. LUCID was closest to the pace from the beginning and was easily second best. POST BRIGADE, closer than usual during the early running, held his position throughout. NEVER IDOL came from far back and lost rider right after the finish. The others were never serious contenders.

Time Out!

Charles Town Race Track, Dec. 2.

Dear Al:

I heard from an authoritative source that Chatmoss and Heartease were sponged with the same sponge at Bowie. Each of the horses had half of an ordinary washing sponge stuffed up his nostril. After the sponges were extracted, they formed one complete sponge, when put together. The Bond family of Baltimore visited the race track today. The reduction of the Pullman rate on the race special was enjoyed by those who prefer to ride first class. Despite the bad weather, there was only one less car on the race special today than on the first two days of the meeting. Good time here, better time Florida. There is some excuse for the odds board not coinciding with the final odds. The small amout of money bet, with a $20 wager having much effect, has made it difficult for the mutuel department to keep up with the changes, which accounts for many of the differences. The races have been run so close together that the calculators have not had time. However, instructions have been given to slow down the interval between events in an effort to remedy this situation. The bell here rings only one minute in contrast to the bells of St. Mary's that we got last year. BILL.

First race—Mint Bud will like the off track, and recent trials indicate good condition. I'm going to string alone. Currants has some class and should be second. Canteret and Radial will be ready to battle it out for the show. Twidgets might be dangerous if moved off the also eligible list.

Second race—Sundrops is keen for mud and, despite a heavy weight assignment, has my call in this field. I expect him to make every post a winning one. Gay Lass will like the course. Early Dawn to take care of the others.

Third race—Hard Chase will be at home on the course, and on Bowie racing certainly deserves the call in this field. Heartease, of sponging fame, will be a keen factor. Roquepine to take care of the others.

Fourth race—Sun Sweep had trouble last out and ran a good race. Bred for mud, this one will make no mistakes in this field. Silvery Cloud, also troubled in his initial start here, has to be considered. Credulous ran out here the other day and promises to be a keen factor with better handling.

Fifth race—Petee Lad won over somewhat similar company here last summer and is a bear in the mud, gets in with light weight and I believe he can take it. Idle Worker and Bromide for the place and show awards.

Sixth race—Ebon Ze, bred for going, needs only to run back to that good recent race on the milers to defeat these. Channing and Queen Nadi to battle it out for the place money.

Seventh race—Irish Vote, recent winner at Bowie, favors the tough going that seems assured and may down Poppyman. Fairio is a mudder of parts and is dangerous.

Best bet—Ebon Ze.

1—Radial, Currants, Jordan Rose.
2—Sundrops, Gay Lass, Sand Broom.
3—Bay, Sea Finn, Hard Chase.
4—Silvery Cloud, Ironbound, Chief Hollis.
5—Idle Worker, Vacillate, Stepee.
6—Rhythmical, Rancilla, Povel.
7—Tengender, Rollick, Huppy.
Best bet—Sundrops. —Clocker Mike.

Garibaldi, Used to Mine His Business, Nears 'Title' Tonight

Mine Explosion Started Tonights' New 'Champ' in Profession.

Gino Garibaldi, the tough Italian who will tussle with Danno (Gossoon) O'Mahoney at Turner's Arena tonight, was almost literally blown into the wrestling game.

Gino was born in St. Louis, Mo., just 29 years ago. His family was distantly related to that branch of the Garibaldi's which gave to the world Giuseppe, the famous Italian patriot, but that did not keep Gino's people from being poor.

At the age of 14 Gino went to work in an automobile body plant. A few years later his father took him to labor in a coal mine in Dowell, Ill., and there begins the story of his being blown into the grappling game, and a very gruesome story it is, indeed.

The mine where Gino and his papa made their daily bread was not far from the Missouri border line. For more than three years they labored there without mishap, but one day the inevitable occurred. Gas fumes caught fire and a terrific explosion took place.

Georgetown Victory Seen Over Tough Miami Team Tomorrow

Hoyas at Full Strength for Last Game

Triumph Would Give G. U. Its Best Record in Over Ten Years.

By Lewis F. Atchison.
A Staff Correspondent.

En Route to Miami, Fla., Dec. 2.—A happy and optimistic band of smiling Georgetown gridmen, 29 strong, is speeding southward tonight, bound for the land of sunshine and bathing beauties, and the minor item of a football game with the University of Miami Friday night.

It will be the Hoyas' final engagement of a highly successful season and they are approaching it with the same quiet brand of confidence that marked their preparations for the Maryland game. No blustering boasts of an overwhelming victory, but deep-seated determination to add another victory to their string, if only by a single point.

The team's departure was attended by dismal weather and the usually conspicuous throng of well-wishers, but not without a good omen. While waiting for his men's two private cars to be attached to the regular train, Coach Jack Hagerty saw a Washington Terminal engine switching cars. It was No. 37.

Hagerty's No. 37 Hunch.

"Our number's up, boys," he cried. We're gonna win. There's No. 37, our new play, and its going right on through."

But Hagerty isn't at all certain the team is going to win as easily as that, yard engine or no yard engine, new play or no new play.

Miami, defeated only by Mississippi, has a powerful ball club and will be a tough nut to crack in its own back yard. The one important factor in Georgetown's favor is that it will have available its full complement of men, including its ace punter, Jack Fleming.

Early tomorrow morning alumni of Jacksonville, Fla., officially will welcome the Hoyas to the State during their brief stopover there, but a reception of greater proportion is in store for the Blue and Gray when it reaches its destination at 5:50 p. m.

A 50-piece band, alumni of Georgetown and students of Miami will be on hand to greet the squad, and after brief ceremonies there it will be whisked away to the Miami-Biltmore, where headquarters are to be established. Later in the evening Hagerty will put the boys through the usual light drill under the stadium lights.

Alumni to Attend.

A large delegation of Southern alumni from all over the Cotton States is expected to see the game with the Hurricanes, inasmuch as this is Georgetown's first invasion of the deep South since 1926 when it met and defeated Loyola of the South at New Orleans.

The Hoyas also are doubly anxious to win the finale for victory will give them the best record of any Hilltop machine since 1926 when Georgetown survived a nine-game schedule with but one defeat, that by Syracuse, 19-6. Secondly, the Saxas have not won their last game of any year since 1927 when Fordham was soundly spanked at the Polo Grounds, 38-0.

Virtually the same team that started against Maryland two weeks ago will face the Hurricanes at kickoff time Friday night. The lone exception is Al Snyder, regular end, who probably will replace Joe Williams at his old post, left end.

Schuman, Lee Win In Table Tennis

Elias Schuman, defending champion, and Ed Lee, ranking player, went into the second round, and Ed Gottlieb upset Si Ratner in the features of the second night's play of the District of Columbia Table Tennis tourney at the Argyle Golf and Country Club last night.

Play will continue tonight with the men's quarter-final and fourth-round matches being played along with the women's singles and the men's preliminary doubles.

First Round—Men's Singles.

Schuman, Aners and Sherbers, drew bye; Burton defeated Fox, 18-21, 21-13, 21-16; Solomon defeated Roberts, 21-18, 21-16; Gorin defeated Levin, 21-19, 21-16; Bassford defeated Goad, 24-22, 21-17; Gee defeated Ryan, 21-14, 21-17; Summers defeated Jones, 21-15, 21-13; Brosseau defeated Bohlander, 21-17, 21-15; Gottlieb defeated Thomson, 21-18, 21-23, 23-21; Ratner defeated Low, 21-14, 21-16; Sappington defeated Brown, 21-16, 21-14; Zimmerman defeated Black, 21-14, 21-10; Hagan defeated Miller, 21-14, 21-15; Lee defeated Foster, 21-15, 21-17.

Second Round.

Schuman defeated Burton, 21-10, 21-19; Solomon defeated Aners, 21-14, 21-17; Gorin defeated Bassford, 24-22, 22-20; Gee defeated Sherbers, 21-17, 21-14; Summers defeated Brosseau 21-17, 21-10; Gottlieb defeated Ratner, 21-19, 21-19; Sappington defeated Zimmerman 19-21, 21-19, 21-19; Lee defeated Hagan 21-10, 19-21, 21-6.

Eagles Want Games.

The Flying Eagles, minor league champions of the Community Center Basketball League for the past two years, are in search of opponents. Boasting the addition of three new players, Coach Augie Terneak feels that he has another winner. Interested teams are asked to telephone Manager Les Hands at North 4651.

Dean Golfs While Ears Burn With Trade Rumors

This Morning . . .

With Shirley Povich.

Santa Clara—unbeaten, untied and uninvited. That last is sufficient to evoke once again from Mr. Cyril J. Smith, Washington's No. 1 Santa Clara alumnus, a scathing denunciation of the entire Rose Bowl setup.

On the subject of Santa Clara and the Rose Bowl, Mr. Smith waxes wroth, whatever that means, and it was no surprise to this department to receive through the kind aid of the U. S. Postal Service a dispatch from Mr. Smith unloading a heap of resentment.

POVICH.

You know about Santa Clara, the little school that nestles in the Sierras a half-hundred miles from Frisco, the only major college team in the Nation with an absolute clear record for the 1936 football season. But let Mr. Smith, Santa Clara '09, enlighten you as to the Rose Bowl's "exclusion act" that keeps the Jesuit school out of the Pasadena game.

I give you Mr. Smith, with quotes:

"My Dear Mr. Povich: For two years now you have been spared a squawk from my seat on the sidelines, so be patient and lend me your ear. Don't you honestly believe this Rose Bowl affair needs a face-lifting operation?

"For ten years we've sat back and watched two Pacific Coast Conference teams monopolize the Pasadena circus. I'll be dad-burned if I don't believe the whole thing is run by a lot of Chinese—they seem so 'set' on picking the West Coast representative as their ancestors did.

"To 'get the call' you must belong to the conference. I'll bet you couldn't get a team of the Twelve Apostles into that bowl, even with Judas Iscariot as head coach (unless they had 'a conferential status.' You just can't be 'representative' without it.

"Let's talk a little about West Conference politics. Last year the conference witch doctors, by reducing the participation of nonconference schools in conference schedules to one game per member, practically worked a 'freeze-out.'

"Many reasons probably motivated this move—the Independents were cutting in too deeply on the Saturday gates and the conference Orphan Annies were beginning to develop acute tickets. Control of the football industry on the Coast was slipping away from the conference.

"And a few years back, the Rose Bowl committee turned over the whole business of selecting the West Coast representative to the conference. Get a load of that!

"Would the conference select an outsider? Would Jim Farley appoint a flock of Republican post masters? Humph!

"So Santa Clara, the only untied, undefeated major team in the country, has as much chance of playing in the bowl as we have of paying off the national debt with European war loans.

"And they can't give as their excuse that the nonconference teams don't draw well. St. Mary's playing Loyola—two nonconference teams—drew 62,000 at Los Angeles, and Santa Clara and St. Mary's drew 60,000 at San Francisco. But Stanford, playing Auburn, could draw only 30,000 and the Stanford-Santa Clara game attracted only 35,000.

"* * * Doesn't it seem that, as long as we have to face this yearly farce of picking the West's Rose Bowl contender, we should get the machinery modernized and be relieved of the monotony of seeing the same old gang trot out perennially?

"All in all, this Rose Bowl business is like a pretzel. It begins nowhere, goes nowhere and ends up at the start.

"Too many good teams are precluded from participation in the bowl by conference rules to rate it as a championship affair, and as long as the West Coast contender is the product of a football trust and can pick its own opponent, it is going to continue to be a chamber of commerce tail wagging a football dog. * * * No wonder Alabama never lost a game out there.

and won't listen to money," muttered Giles. "I don't think we'll get him now. Maybe New York will."

"We'd like to get Diz, too," chimed in Bob Quinn, of the Boston Bees, "but not for what Rickey is asking. Say, no pitcher, not even Dean, is worth two good ball players who can play in 154 games and play them well. A good pitcher can win 25 games; two good infielders or outfielders can win 60."

All major league clubs were represented at the player mart except the Philadelphia Athletics. Connie Mack, flushed with money and not worrying about the big, bad wolf, stayed home.

Manager Joe McCarthy, of the Yankees, went into a few huddles and then took a night train for Buffalo.

"Nice bunch of fellows here," said Joe, "but I'm going home."

Little Hoyas Win First Court Game

Led by its eagle-eyed forward, Bob O'Shaughnesy, who whipped the cords for 19 points, Georgetown Prep School pried open its basketball season yesterday at its home ocurt by defeating St. Paul's Academy, of Washington, 41-18.

Coach Ed Hargaden used 13 players in routing the weaker Saint team.

Twenty-five games have been arranged for the Hargaden-coached quintet, which, on the strength of its showing yesterday bids fair to develop into one of the best prep teams in the District.

11 Teams Survive In 6-Day Bike Race

New York, Dec. 2 (AP).—The 11 surviving teams in New York's sixty-first six-day bicycle race scrambled the standings again in tonight's jamming session, and eight of them came up in a tie for the lead.

The most remarkable result, however, was that achieved by Alvaro Georgetti and Gerard Debaets, a make-up team, who pulled up from 19 laps behind the leaders to 2 laps off the pace as the field swept past the seventy-third hour of the grind.

Quiet Actions Bely 'Jimmie's' Reputation

fight, Jimmie once took old Pat Raedy to Rochester to fight the then middleweight champion, Tommy Ryan.

"Tommy was winning," recalls Jimmie, "until the seventeenth round, when the chief of police, who was a very good friend of Ryan's, stepped in and halted the bout. If it hadn't been for that, Washington would have had a world's champion long before Pete Sarron belted Freddie Miller around at Griffith Stadium."

The two second-rate pugs finish walloping each other around and the quiet little figure relaxes, or, rather, his intense interest is shed like a pair of red flannel undies in Florida. He becomes rather fidgety and nervous, even more inconspicuous—if that is possible—until the next bout starts. That this quiet little man, whose very appearance belies any bloodthirstiness, is a great admirer of fighting spirit, either in man or animal, becomes more understandable when one considers that he always has been a fighter, in his own diplomatic, quiet, decisive manner.

Whether he is fighting to protect a big investment or a few cents seems to make little difference to him. Coming up from Florida one winter, Jimmie spent hours on the train playing rhummy with a sports writer. For hours he played with all the seriousness and concentration most people lavish only on million-dollar investments. He was playing for 10 cents a game! Which should just give you a tip-off on his real nature.

All in all, Jimmie still remains pretty much of an enigma, from a business standpoint, to the only person who ever interviewed him.

Ruche Breaks Season Pin Record

Louis Ruche, Federal League leader, inscribed his name in the District's duckpin hall of fame last night when, rolling in the Petworth League, he pounded the maples for games of 167, 160 and 148 for a set of 475, the highest set rolled in the city this season and the third best set ever chalked up on local maleways. His mark is second only to Joe Price's brilliant 497 set achieved in 1932, and Ollie Pacini's 480 score, rolled in the National Capital League. In his big set, Ruche made 15 spares and 6 strikes and never missed one spare break.

Galt Davis' Rosslyn girls, pace-setters in the Ladies District League, after having things pretty much their own way during the early part of the season, are beginning to feel the pressure of their opposition, the threat for the lead in the race now being made by the Lucky Strike team.

Rosslyn lost ground in the race last night when Convention Hall set them down a game and Lucky Strike trimmed the Temple five three games. Highway Engineering grabbed team honors, whitewashing Arcadia, with a 567 game and 1,527 set. Billie Butler's 357 and Margaret Lynn's 331 boosted the totals. Georgetown triumphed over R. E. A. Cleaners, sweeping the match.

Peoples Drug Stores and Daily News pulled up in a deadlock for the leadership of the Commercial League at Convention Hall, the Druggists gaining team laurels with a 618 game and 1,671 set. Fred Watson grabbed high individual set with 376 and Jack Ulrich, of Wilkins Coffee, shot a 144 game.

The ninth annual Meyer Davis Sweepstakes features the duckpin calendar this week-end at the Lucky Strike Allleys, with all signs pointing to a record field for the event. Many new names will dot the entry list and the party is on Bill Wood, ladies' champion of the maleways, the entries contributing $3, which goes toward the prize money. They bowl free.

Park Pharmacy continued to exert its supremacy in the Takoma Duckpin Association League, knocking off Tire and Battery three games with a season record set of 1,840 . . . Dutch Sherbahn, who gains his experience in "pot game" enterprises, paced the record set with a 155 game and 390 set. Eva Andrews (HOLC No. 2) gained the spotlight in the Lucky Strike Ladies League with a game of 122 . . . Jim Bridges (Riggs) and A. Maloney (Hibbs) topped the shotters in the Bankers League with a 144 game and 386 set, respectively. City Bank annexed team honors with 609 and 1,737. . . . The Connecticut team paced the Optical League, led by Shah's 148 game and 417 set. . . . J. Crovo (All Souls) rolled 131 and 351 for the best individual effort in the Young Peoples Fellowship League. . . . Edward shot a 131 game to aid the Duds high game and set of 539 and 1,563 in the Dynamite League. Northern humbled Accounting twice to a gain a tie with Hand Set in the C. & P. (Men's Telephone League. . . . Mabel Kellog's 327 set helped Jos. H. Milan to win three from Unity

6 Girls Schools Enter Riding Competition

Show Is Scheduled for Saturday at Arlington Hall School.

Girls from five, possibly six colleges will participate in the first intercollegiate riding competition of the Arlington Hall Student Riding Club next Saturday afternoon and evening.

The show will be held in the C. C. Lamond Riding Arena, Arlington College, Va., and will start at 1 p. m. and 7 p. m.

Beside the host college, the Chevy Chase School for Girls, National Park Seminary, University of Maryland, University of North Carolina and possibly Gunston Hall will take part in the show.

The show is strictly an intercollegiate affair and not an open competition, although the general public is invited to witness the exhibition.

Classes in horsemanship for beginners, intermediate riders and advanced equestrians will be part of the program. There also will be jumping classes for beginners and advanced riders.

Competition for the intercollegiate team jumping trophy will provide one of the highlights of the show. This class will be scored on performance only, with the best aggregate score of any team of three representing any university deciding the winner.

There also will be, among other classes, an open jumping event, student hack, student hunters, and student dressage classes.

Another trophy for which competition is expected to be spirited is the Arlington Hall Championship Cup. This event will be open to all competitors in the show and will be judged on the best and most consistent performances throughout the show.

Only students of the beginner's class of Arlington Hall will be eligible for the Arlington Hall Trophy for most improvement in horsemanship. The awards will be made on the basis of 50 per cent for performance during the afternoon's program and 50 per cent for interest and improvement shown since the beginning of the school year.

Golf Association's Election Is Today

With ceremonies befitting the occasion, Mrs. Ralph W. Payne, of Congressional Country Club, will be re-elected president of the Women's District of Columbia Golf Association this afternoon at the annual meeting and election at Kenwood Golf and Country Club.

It will be Mrs. Payne's second term in office.

Others who will be elected are Mrs. Roy Miller, of Kenwood, first vice president; Mrs. J. W. Beller, of Columbia, second vice president; Mrs. W. R. Woodward, of Army and Navy Country Club, secretary, and Mrs. Theodore Peyser, of Woodmont, treasurer.

The meeting will start at 2 p. m. Delegates from each club will attend.

Takoma, Silver Spring In Grudge Tilt Sunday

The annual District line "Bowl Battle" is on tap Sunday in Silver Spring, when the neighboring rivals, the Takoma Firemen and the Silver Spring Merchants, tangle at 3 p. m., in their annual and bitter rivalry, a 100 per cent grudge affair.

Boasting wins over the Firemen three years in a row, last year by a 24-to-0 score, the Merchants will be slight favorites, but records are forgotten in this game. The Merchants boast a 190-pound line, including Boyle and Zeck Linkins, 240-pound tackles. On the only basis of comparison, the Merchants last week defeated the Hessick Coal Co., 12 to 6, a team that tied the Takomas, 0 to 0. An individual duel between Leizear, of the hosts, and Demerest, of the Firemen, is a sidelight.

Men Past 40

Many men at 40, in perfect health, without an ache or pain, wonder why they aren't as strong and as vigorous as they were 5 or 10 years ago. Mental and physical fatigue is the cause in the majority of cases. Fortunately this condition can be helped by the use of a recently discovered hormone. This hormone stimulates the glandular system to greater activity—helps build up lowered vitality.

This hormone is now available, together with other valuable ingredients in Zo-ak Tablets (Blue Box for men—Orange Box for women) and are sold and recommended by Unity Drug Stores and all chains. Zo-ak is the formula of a well known American physician so you can take it with confidence. It contains no nux vomica (strychnine) or any other harmful drugs. A booklet called "For Men Who Want to Live," will be sent in a plain sealed envelope by Zo-ak Co., 56 W. 45th St., N. Y.

October Issues Are $526,330,000

Analysis of statements registered under the Securities act of 1933 indicates that new securities with estimated gross proceeds of $526,330,000 had become fully effective during October, 1936. This total compares with $260,080,000 for September, 1936 and $406,087,000 for October, 1935.

Included in the month's effective registrations was the $175,000,000 American Telephone & Telegraph debenture issue, which is chiefly responsible for transportation and communication companies occupying the first place among registrants in October with 36.3 per cent of the month's total registrations.

Utility companies were second with 22.8 per cent of the total dollar value and the manufacturing companies were third with registrations of 20.9 per cent of the total.

Soviet to Redeem 10 Per Cent Bond Issue

New York, Dec. 2 (AP).—The Soviet government has called for redemption the entire issue of 10 per cent Soviet Union bonds, due 1942, the first issue sold in this country.

In Wall street it is said about $870,000 are held here. The securities will be redeemed at par at the rate of exchange for the gold ruble prevaling on the day of presentation at the Chase National Bank, paying agent.

Foreign Dollar Bonds Decline in November

New York, Dec. 2.—Foreign dollar bonds declined 0.67 per cent during November, according to the Foreign Bond Associates, Inc., index of 50 representative issues, which stood at 57.96 on November 30, compared with 58.35 on October 31.

The 16 South American issues in the index rose 1.70 per cent, while the 30 European issues fell 1.96 per cent and the 4 Australian issues 0.15 per cent.

November Sees Sharp Advance In Commodities

Increased Auto Output Favorable Influence on Business.

New York, Dec. 2.—The trend of general business activity continued favorable during November, with automobile production at nearly double the October rate one of the most potent bolstering influences. Steel production averaged around 76 per cent of capacity last month, only fractionally lower than the rate for October, and the outlook for December is for an average of 77 per cent, according to the Standard Statistics Co. today.

Production of automobiles last month totaled 435,000 vehicles, against 408,000 in November, 1935, and 230,000 in October, 1936. Barring labor troubles, December production should total about half a million cars.

Electric power output was off slightly in November, but the current month should see the loss regained, as the domestic load more than makes up for a slight tapering off of industrial demand.

With the passing of the peak of the fall movement of crops, carloadings were seasonally lower in November and the current month will probably see a further decrease to around 710,000 cars weekly.

A favorable trend in recent weeks has been the strength displayed by the commodity markets. Average prices have been advancing steadily since the elections; the Standard Statistics Co. index has been reaching new highs daily. The strength has not been confined to a few groups, but has generally spread through the entire commodity list.

Stock Leaders Yield to Sales; Low-Priced Shares Hold Firm

Decline Is Held to Be Readjustment After Continuous Advance; Bonds Are Irregular; Grains Firm.

By G. A. Phillips,
Associated Press Financial Writer.

New York, Dec. 2.—Offerings expanded in today's stock market and many recent leaders fell back fractions to 2 or more points. Specialties, notably those of the low-priced category, on the other hand, successfully battled the declining trend and a number finished with substantial advances.

Analysts had varying explanations for the day's contrary performance. While cheerful business progress continued to offset to a considerable extent worrisome foreign tangles, some commentators thought the market may have discounted to some degree the past several months' economic improvement. Others spoke of a "natural readjustment" after the lengthy and almost uninterrupted upturn in prices.

Industrial "blue chips" bore the brunt of the selling. Rails, oils and utilities were resistant at times and generally finished with small declines.

The Associated Press average of 60 issues ended with a net loss of .6 of a point at 70.5, its third successive recession. Transfers totaled 2,319,300 shares against 2,234,940 yesterday. It was the largest turnover since November 19.

The growing number of strikes throughout the country was perturbing to some quarters, but others pointed out temporary labor unrest has usually been symptomatic of general recovery. Settlement of many of the walk-outs was expected soon.

Boardroom traders were a bit disconcerted when the stock exchange stopped its ticker service for 15 minutes after the close to listen to a speech by former Gov. Alfred E. Smith on the united hospital drive. Final prices were consequently delayed in reaching customers. Yellow Truck preferred jumped 5½ points to 158 following action of directors in voting a payment of $35 a share on accumulated dividends.

Bar Silver Higher.

The price of imported bar silver at New York was lifted ½-cent an ounce on top of a boost of ⅞ of a cent Tuesday, but the mining group failed to respond. Iron Age estimated steel output currently at a peak for the year and some shares of so-called "independent" companies in this field pushed higher.

Weathering the squall for gains of fractions to 2 or more points were Baldwin Locomotive at 10⅝; Republic Steel, 26; North American Aviation, 12; Continental Motors, 3¼; New Haven preferred, 14; Missouri Pacific preferred, 6½; A. M. Byers, 26⅞; United Stores "A," 8½; Bethlehem Steel, 72; Postal Telegraph preferred, 12½, and International Telephone, 12⅝.

Prominent on the down side were United States Steel, at 74⅜; United States Rubber, 43⅞; Paramount, 20⅞; Anaconda, 47¼; United States Realty, 15⅝; Westinghouse, 143⅞; General Motors, 68; Chrysler, 122½; Santa Fe, 72; New York Central, 42½; International Nickel, 59⅝; Sears-Roebuck, 97¼; Montgomery Ward, 64¾; Woolworth, 65⅞; Consolidated Edison, 46¼; J. I. Case, 151; Goodrich, 30; Goodyear, 28¼; United States Rubber, 43⅞; Loew's, 62⅛, and Douglas Aircraft, 75.

Although the final hour brought increased offerings and a general drift to lower levels, the bond market today was notable for conflict rather than unity of trend. Various low priced rail issues in the reorganization group bounded forward several points and some industrial convertible liens dived for equally wide losses. United State Governments aligned themselves with the soft branch of the market, closing 1-32 to 6-32 of a point lower.

The buying flurry in rails carried several issues of the New Haven into special prominence. Investment circles heard it was in response to reports that segregation of revenues and earnings in relation to the various liens was showing favorable margins for the refunding mortgage issues, which led the upswing.

The Associated Press rail average climbed .2 of a point, industrials gained half as much and utilities receded .2 of a point .Trading volume was $15,974,000 par value, against $13,766,000 yesterday.

Wide moves on the upside were shown by New Haven Collateral 6s at 49, up 4; Convertible 6s at 38½, up 3; Refunding 4½s at 36¼, up 1½; Debenture 4s at 22, up 2; Debenture 3½s at 33½, up 3¾; Central New England 4s at 55¾, up 2¾; Mobile & Ohio 5s at 25½, up, and Central of Georgia Refunding 5s at 18½, up ⅞.

On the minus side were International Cement 4s at 168¾, off 4¼; American Writing Paper 6s at 70, off 2⅛; Chesapeake Corporation 5s at 156, off 2; American Type Founders 5s at 162½, off 3, and International Telephone 5s at 76, off 1.

Early gains in some foreign loans brought out profit selling and final prices were moderately lower in the more important groups.

The domestic corporate market took note of reports from underwriting quarters pointing to a substantial investment demand for the new $140,000,000 issues of American Telephone & Telegraph 3¼ per cent debentures. The offering price was 102.

New Zephyr Trains Will Have 17 Cars

Chicago, Dec. 2 (AP).—Two new streamline trains, the largest and most powerful yet built, will go into operation next year between Chicago and the West Coast on the Southern Pacific, Chicago & Northwestern and the Union Pacific lines. The trains, replacing two streamliners now running between Chicago and Los Angeles and Chicago and San Francisco, will consist of 17 cars, drawn by a 5,400-horsepower Diesel-electric locomotive. The most powerful locomotive of the same type now in service is 3,600 horsepower, used on the Santa Fe Chief.

Heavy Demand For Steel Fills Mill Capacity

Ingot Output Reaches 76 Per Cent, Highest for This Year.

New York, Dec. 2.—"A flood of steel and railroad equipment buying that preceded the effective date, December 1, of price advances on various steel products has virtually filled up mill schedules for December, with a considerable overflow into January, and has created conditions that seldom have been seen in the steel industry except in such unusual years as 1920 and 1929," says Iron Age in its weekly summary today. The review adds:

"Steel ingot output has risen to 76 per cent, a new peak for the year, and may go higher this month, scrap markets are reviving from a slump of several weeks and scrap prices are pointing upward, an Eastern blast furnace, which was the first to increase pig iron prices $1 a ton early in November, has announced a further increase of $1.25 for first quarter, coke prices are strenthening, and additional price increases have been announced on some steel products that were not covered by announcements a week ago.

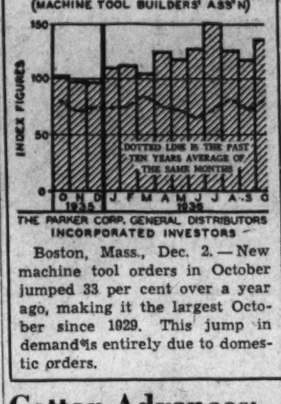
"Although important buying came from many sources, railroad orders were conspicuous because of their concentrated volume. Rails and track accessories of more than 800,000 tons were placed on mill books, rails alone accounting for fully 650,000 tons. The Santa Fe ordered 115,000 tons of rails and accessories, New York Central 82,150 tons of rails, the four Van Sweringon roads, 83,340 tons; Baltimore & Ohio, 52,000 tons; Great Northern, about 50,000 tons; Norfolk & Western, 40,000 tons; Missouri Pacific, 35,950 tons; Burlington and Milwaukee roads, each 30,000 tons; Rock Island, 35,000 tons, while a number of other roads ordered smaller amounts.

Big Railroad Orders.

"It was also a gala week in railroad equipment orders and inquiries, with orders for 153 locomotives and about 4,100 freight cars, and inquiries pending for 8,650 additional freight cars and 16 locomotives, besides extensive repair and new construction to be done in railroads' own shops. Outstanding orders were 100 locomotives for the New York Central, 3,025 freight cars and 27 locomotives for the Santa Fe, 600 freight cars for the Western Maryland and 300 for the Gulf, Mobile & Northern. Pacific Fruit Express is inquiring for 2,500 cars, Southern Pacific for 2,000, Great Northern for 2,000, Elgin, Joliet & Eastern for 1,050 and Norfolk & Western for 1,000.

"Additional price announcements have been issued, including $3 on sheet piling, $3 on cut spikes, $4 on screw spikes, $5 on track bolts, $5 on steel-car axles and $4 to $5 on cold-rolled strip. A Middle Western nonintegrated roller of cold strip is announcing a $5 increase, although some of the integrated mills have advanced only $4. The Iron Age raises its published quotations this week on sheets, wire products and rails, the finished steel composite price advancing to 2.249c., highest since the early part of 1930. Pig iron and scrap composite prices are unchanged."

Machine Tool Orders 33% Over Year Ago



Boston, Mass., Dec. 2.—New machine tool orders in October jumped 33 per cent over a year ago, making it the largest October since 1929. This jump in demand is entirely due to domestic orders.

Grain Prices Continue Rise To New Peaks

December Wheat 1.24⅛; Profit-Taking Checks Advance of Corn.

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, Dec. 2.—Climaxing seven successive days of advancing prices, renewed waves of speculative purchase orders whirled wheat up about 2 cents today to new record top quotations. Corn, oats and rye, as well as wheat, all outdid previous peak prices for the year and much longer. Anxiety over the European political crisis, especially as to chances that open hostilities outside of Spain might develop, focused in large degree the attention of traders.

On the Air Today

A rather innocent piece of paper arrived in the mail yesterday which, if studied a moment, might convey between the lines a new day for WOL. It simply advises that one Adolph J. Opfinger has been appointed program coordinator for the Mutual Broadcasting System. He will, according to the notice, work toward the desirable end of increasing the sustaining program service now offered affiliated stations. That's where WOL comes in.

I was one who cheered loudest when WOL announced its affiliation with Mutual. But to date the arrangement has failed to produce what might well have been expected. WOL continues to play hours of phonograph records every day. And for two reasons, I am told. First, because the station has an enormous volume of spot announcements peddling everything from old gold to saucepans.

To accommodate these quaint 10-word blemishes on the institution of radio broadcasting (and every station has them) many recorded programs must be set up. The announcements are slipped between records. They cannot be slipped between musical numbers of a network program originating out of town.

One the other hand, it appears quite obvious that Mutual has not delivered sustaining programs on any definite schedule. Last minute changes have constantly been made. Even to the late evening dance orchestras.

It seems reasonable that if Mutual gets its sustaining network service down to some definite daily scheduling—so that affiliated stations know they can depend on what is offered them—the program service from WOL should show a turn for the better. That is, unless you like hours of phonograph records daily under such guileless titles as "Hits and Encores," "Rhythm Rhapsodies" and "Tango Tempos."

Here's a cheer for Mr. Opfinger. May he have the greatest of success.

Features today:

Leo Reisman, and his orchestra, with Alexander Gray and Clare Whitney, in "Morning Matinee," WOL, at 9 a. m.

Dr. Louis E. Bisch, psychiatrist-author of "Be Glad You're Neurotic," on "Human Nature in the Raw," from Ad Club luncheon, WOL, at 1:15.

Original playlet, "Hearts and Flowers" is presentation of General Federation, WMAL, at 2:30.

Vallee Varieties presents belatedly Noel Coward and Gertrude Lawrence, WRC, at 8. Also Ed Wynn and the Don Cossack chorus.

Mal Stevens, New York University coach guests with Kate Smith, WJSV, at 8.

Sam Hearn, portrayer of "Schlepperman" and "Horace Nimble" to tell how he became dialectician, in "Show Boat," WRC, at 9.

Town Hall subject is "Will Reciprocal Tariffs Promote American Recovery?" with Francis B. Sayre and Senator Austin, WMAL, at 9:30.

Bing Crosby presents Gene Raymond, Alice Faye and Gregor Piatigorsky, cellist, on first anniversary of his program, WRC, at 10.

"Then and Now," presents Wallace Beery and Josephine Huston, WJSV, at 10.

* * * *

It finally has come to pass. Frank Morgan enters radio soon. He will conduct a series of transcriptions for an auto company. I have long maintained he would do a swell job on the air and I'll look forward to hearing this first attempt. . . . "Myrt and Marge" are being auditioned again . . . Morton Downey is expected to sign with Fred Waring and the Pennsylvanians soon.

I overlooked explaining to Mr. Logan yesterday how poll ratings are established. And I shall do that tomorrow. Incidentally, Jack Benny again leads in the new report just out.

Dirigible Sea Line Subsidy Is Urged

A subcommittee of the Commerce Department's Business Advisory Council yesterday recommended "immediate action" by the Government to provide subsidies for privately operated transatlantic dirigible service.

Secretary Roper turned the report over to the Maritime Commission, which is authorized by law to study the problems of aircraft engaged in foreign commerce.

"We feel," the subcommittee reported, "that the United States should not remain idle and that immediate action is necessary if American business interests are to avoid losing ground in this demonstrated form of modern ocean aerial transportation. Furthermore, commercial lighter-than-air craft undoubtedly have a potential value as Naval reserve vessels."

The report was signed by Samuel P. Wetherill, chairman; Robert G. Elbert and Gill Robb Wilson. The committee consulted with Commander Charles E. Rosendahl and Commander Garland Fulton, Navy dirigible experts.

'Knight Kindly Heart' Is Given Hoover Medal

New York, Dec. 2 (AP).—Ambrose Swasey, Cleveland engineer and humanitarian who is known to his fellows as "the knight of the kindly heart," was presented the Herbert Hoover medal by the American Society of Mechanical Engineers tonight. He will be 90 next December 19.

In making the presentation, Gano Dunn, of New York, predicted that $750,000 given to engineering by Swasey will be used for a new kind of engineering research—"the good of mankind." Former President Hoover spoke briefly after the presentation.

MRS. ELY CULBERTSON ON CONTRACT

By Mrs. Ely Culbertson.

"Without exception the world's greatest player and teacher" Ely Culbertson says.

No fallacy is more costly to the average player than his habit of attempting to conceal a holding that the declarer will have no difficulty in determining for himself. There is "An-Ostrich-Burying-His-Head" complex here, a childish strategy to seek concealment where no such possibility exists. Obviously, I am not suggesting that the defenders should virtually expose their cards for declarer's guidance, but it is a fact that the pendulum has swung too far in the other direction.

South, dealer.
Both sides vulnerable.
North-South 30 part-score.

	♠ J 8 7 ♡ K Q J ◇ K J 6 5 4 ♣ 8 7
♠ 9 3 2 ♡ A 7 6 2 ◇ 7 ♣ J 10 9 4 3	West North East South	♠ A Q 10 6 ♡ 8 5 4 3 ◇ 9 ♣ A 6 5 2
	♠ K 5 4 ♡ 10 9 ◇ A Q 10 8 3 2 ♣ K Q

The bidding:

South	West	No.	East
1 diamond	Pass	4 diamonds	Pass
Pass	Pass

North's bid was, of course, a shut-out attempt to take advantage of the condition of the score, and was probably the best response possible.

West opened the Jack of clubs, which East won with the Ace, declarer's Queen dropping. Now it should be obvious that the number of spade tricks which the defenders might take depended not merely on the location of the spade King—whether that card was held by declarer or by West—but also on East's method of attack in the suit. Of course had West held the King with at least two guards, it would not matter whether East led the Ace and a small one, or his fourth-best, or any other card; three tricks would have been certain on mere continuation. But if declarer had the King, it was vital to use the correct technique.

First, let us see what happened on East's attempted concealment play. He laid down the Ace and then played a low spade, secretly feeling that he was being very cagey, and that the declarer would never dare finesse against the Queen. In sober truth, the declarer did hate to take this finesse, but he saw that there was simply no place for him to get rid of his other losing spade in time. Dummy's hearts had yet to be established, and to go up with the spade King would in all likelihood merely defer the loss of the low spade. Therefore, in desperation declarer simply had to risk the spade finesse. Obviously, the Jack won the trick; trumps were drawn, and the heart Ace was the defenders' only other trick.

This was no hand for East to attempt a hoax play. He should have seen that successful defense rested on the chance that his partner held either the heart Ace or the spade King. If it were the latter, the lead of the spade Queen could do no harm, but if declarer had the spade King, that lead was vital.

Obviously, had East made this proper lead, namely, the spade Queen, declarer would have covered and won the trick, but then when West gained the lead with the heart Ace, a spade continuation through dummy's Jack would have netted the defenders the vital two tricks.

Battered Plane, First to Span Continent, on Exhibition Here

Crude Hulk of Rodgers' Craft, Victim of 15 Crack-ups in New York-California Trip of 84 Days, Is at Smithsonian.

A battered hulk of wood, canvas and metal was on display yesterday at the Smithsonian Institution, a newly added testimonial and monument to man's determination and courage.

It is—or was—an airplane, the first airplane to span a continent. It is the airplane in which Galbraith Perry Rodgers flew from Sheephead Bay, Long Island, to Long Beach, Calif., in 84 days.

The adversity conquered by Rodgers, who perished in a crack-up six months after putting down his "crate" at Long Beach on December 10, 1911, places him in the same class with Robert Fulton, Frances Willard and other pioneers with a purpose whose efforts ultimately were crowned by success, despite the jeers of skeptics.

Now on permanent exhibition in the Smithsonian's arts and industries building, near Lindbergh's famous Spirit of St. Louis, the Rodgers ship was roundly ridiculed when its 32-year-old pilot launched his coast-to-coast flight at Sheepshead Bay on September 17, 1911.

They called it "a fool's plaything" and its operator "an impractical dreamer."

But Rodgers lived to see the scoffers moderate their opinions, even though his transcontinental time was little better than a covered wagon's. He cracked up 15 times en route and his longest continuous flight lasted only two hours and 40 minutes, but he reached his goal, though Long Beach found both him and his plane considerably the worse for wear.

Soon after the initial take-off, Rodgers struck a tree near Middletown, N. Y., and fell 75 feet. He was slightly injured, the plane badly damaged. The next mishap was at Salamanca, N. Y., where there was an encounter with a barbed wire fence.

The crash in Huntington, Ind., left the plane almost a complete wreck. But the indomitable flier somehow succeeded in taking her aloft again, only to be forced down again in Texas when a piston bearing broke 2,500 feet aloft, wrecking the engine. A few days later there was a starting crash. Repairs were made within 24 hours and soon Rodgers was California-bound once more.

When a piston bearing broke 3,000 feet above the Imperial Valley of California, Rodgers volplaned 4 miles to land. At Pasadena there was a 200-foot fall which reduced the craft to a mass of shattered wood and twisted wires and sent the pilot to a hospital.

When he taxied to the final stop in Long Beach, 69 landings out of New York, all that was left of the Wright biplane in which Rodgers had started the epochal flight were the vertical rudder and two wing struts. A freight train loaded with extra parts had followed him all the way.

Hence, it is more accurate to state that the ship on exhibit at the Smithsonian is the one in which Rodgers finished his aerial journey.

Rodgers was taught to fly by the Wright brothers. He soloed in his historic plane after 90 minutes instruction. Killed in an exhibition flight at Long Beach in 1912, he has been virtually forgotten and his name is barely recorded in the annals of aviation.

Yet it was only three years after his precedent-setting venture that airplanes were flying over the Western Front in combat. Less than a decade after Rodgers' laborious contribution to science, an airplane had crossed the North Atlantic Ocean.

Rice Mentioned as Head Of Pennsylvania Senate

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Waynesboro, Pa., Dec. 2.—State Senator John S. Rice, of Gettysburg, re-elected last month from the Franklin County-Adams County district, is prominently mentioned for president of the State Senate, his name having been advanced for the office by a number of his friends from counties throughout the State. Rice led his ticket at the time of his re-election in November on the Democratic ticket, exceeding the Roosevelt vote in this district by more than 1,000 votes.

Shirley Will Oppose Renumbering Routes

Richmond, Dec. 2 (AP).—Highway Commissioner Henry G. Shirley said yesterday he would oppose a resolution to come before the American Association of State Highway officials in San Francisco next week calling for "renumbering" of United States routes.

Shirley, member of the association's executive committee, said the proposed resolution called for dropping all roads from the U. S. system which do not extend beyond the boundaries of a State.

CHAPTER 24.

Philip was waiting in the narrow corridor leading into Palm Court. He rose at sight of her and Becky's heart lurched as she caught the flame of recognition in his face.

"He loves me," she thought. "He must to look at me like that."

An instant later, however, it had been submerged.

"Shall we eat here?" he was asking.

She had hoped he would take her to some more intimate place but unless he suggested it she couldn't.

"This will be fine," she said brightly.

They chatted about the most inane things while the waiter took their order.

"Palm Court Special, Becky?" Philip asked as if they made a practice of lunching there together.

Not Even Curious.

She had never been there before. It must have been Lelia who had shared his company the other time.

At last the waiter has gone leaving them staring at each other. But Philip's eyes were cold. He wasn't, it seemed, even curious.

When she said, "I suppose you're wondering why I telephoned," he replied, "Is there any reason you shouldn't?"

"I haven't," she reminded him.

The ghost of a smile crossed Philip's face.

"No, you haven't. Unlike most of your sex you've shown an amazing ability to make a decision and stay with it."

"What do you mean by that, Philip?"

He took time to light a cigarette before he answered, "Does it matter?"

"Of course, it matters," she answered. "Anything you think will always matter to me. You speak as if it were possible to mean as much to each other as we did and then become strangers overnight. You ought to know better than that. I've given you up. I can refrain from calling or seeing you, but the mental tie between us is still there as far as I am concerned."

He smoked in a silence which baffled her.

"Why can't we be friends?" she shot at him.

He stubbed his cigaret with a fury which astonished her.

"That's impossible."

"Why it is?"

"I've no desire to be friends with you," he stated.

Why?

When the waiter had retired to a discreet distance she asked in a low voice, "Why did you say that?"

"What possible pleasure can there be in seeing each other under the existing circumstances?" he retorted.

"That's true," she admitted and fell silent, thinking how little of the anticipated pleasure she was getting out of this meeting.

When the silence grew noticeable Becky spoke again. "I haven't even had a chance to ask you how you're getting along."

"Very well," he said, "considering the length of time I've been here. I've designed another new theater since you deserted me."

"I didn't desert you," she cried recklessly but the flash of his tawny eyes silenced her.

"Let's not discuss it."

They sat in silence after that feeling the bitterness of complete estrangement gather between them like a curtain of fog. Not until she had finished all pretense of toying with her sherbet did Philip say, "Uncle Francis tells me you are going to be married?"

Not in Love.

"Was that the reason you wanted to see me?"

She nooded, unable to speak. Then with an impulse she could not control she knew she must make it clear to him why she was marrying Foster.

"We're not in love," she admitted. "I never expect to fall madly in love again and neither does he. You see, Philip, he doesn't think love is necessary."

She paused as if hoping that he would beg her not to go on with it, but Philip said nothing.

"He thinks that two healthy young people of the same age and tastes should marry and have children."

An expression of actual disgust crossed Philip's face.

"It sounds cold-blooded to talk about it," she agreed. "But I've never had any desire to be a woman with a career, and Foster isn't the way he sounds from what I've just said. He's decent and fine and we have good times together. My mother and father approve of him," she finished desperately, "Oh, Philip, can't you see? He just seems to fit into the picture. He's the kind of husband I ought to marry."

"I'd never have thought it of you," he said bitterly, "but if that's what you want I wish you joy."

The coldness of his response was final. There was nothing more to be said. The waiter brought their check and Philip followed Becky into the lobby where they parted.

So it was over. The hour she had dreamed of all night had passed, giving her no glimpse into Philip's heart. Unable to bear it, she put one trembling hand upon his arm, crying helplessly, "Oh, Philip! I can't let you go like this."

His face was rigid. Pale beneath its tan, with tiny muscles twitching in his cheek, but she could no longer see it.

"You know how I feel," he grated, as if the admission were being wrung from him.

"I want to hear you say it," she pleaded.

"I love you!" he cried. "Goodbye!"

Becky dropped into a chair and sat as if hypnotized, staring at the revolving door through which he had passed. Every nerve in her body was quivering. Every drop of blood in her veins throbbed in response to that passionate cry.

"I love you! Goodbye."

Belongs to Him.

The hopelessness of death had been in his voice, but at that moment she could have walked over red hot coals and not been burned by them. She could have suffered pain and humiliation, the loss and scorn of family and friends . . .

She had forgotten his power over her. He had made no effort to exert it since that night over three months ago when another woman had announced that she was his wife. But it was still there. It would always be there. He had only to beckon and she would come. Only to touch her and she would follow. She belonged to him body and soul. Bound by a tie stronger than any man-made law. Feeling like that, how had she dared consider marriage with anyone else?
